Transcriber's Notes:

Greek and Hebrew words that may not display correctly in all browsers are transliterated in the text using hovers like this: $\beta \iota \beta \lambda \circ \varsigma$. Position your mouse over the line to see the transliteration. Some diacritical characters may not display correctly in all browsers. Words using these characters are underlined in the text like this. Position your mouse over the word to read the explanation.

Hemistitches, metrical lines shared between speakers or verses, may not display properly in all browsers. The best way to see appropriately spaced hemistitches is by looking at a text version of this book.

A few typographical errors have been corrected. They have been marked with hovers like this. Position your mouse over the underline to read what appears in the original. A complete list of corrections as well as other Transcriber's Notes follows the text.

[495]	THE FALL OF ROBESPIERRE[495:1]

AN HISTORIC DRAMA

TO

H. MARTIN, ESQ.

OF

JESUS COLLEGE

CAMBRIDGE

DEAR SIR,

Accept, as a small testimony of my grateful attachment, the following Dramatic Poem, in which I have endeavoured to detail, in an interesting form, the fall of a man, whose great bad actions have cast a disastrous lustre on his name. In the execution of the work, as intricacy of plot could not have been attempted without a gross violation of recent facts, it has been my sole aim to imitate the empassioned and highly figurative language of the French orators, and to develope the characters of the chief actors on a vast stage of horrors.

Yours fraternally,

S. T. COLERIDGE.

Jesus College, September 22, 1794.

FOOTNOTES:

[495:1] First published (as an octavo pamphlet) at Cambridge by Benjamin Flower in 1794: included in Literary Remains, 1836, i. (1)-32. First collected in P. and D. W., 1877-80, in. (1)-39. 'It will be remarked,' writes J. D. Campbell (P. W., 1893, p. 646), 'that neither title-page nor dedication contains any hint of the joint authorship.' On this point Coleridge writes to Southey, September 19, 1794:—'The tragedy will be printed in less than a week. I shall put my name because it will sell at least a hundred copies in Cambridge. It would appear ridiculous to print two names to such a work. But if you choose it, mention it and it shall be done. To every man who praises it, of course I give the true biography of it.' Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 85.

ACT I

Scene-The Thuilleries.

Barrere. The tempest gathers—be it mine to seek A friendly shelter, ere it bursts upon him. But where? and how? I fear the Tyrant's soul—Sudden in action, fertile in resource, And rising awful 'mid impending ruins; In splendor gloomy, as the midnight meteor, That fearless thwarts the elemental war. When last in secret conference we met, He scowl'd upon me with suspicious rage, Making his eye the inmate of my bosom. I know he scorns me—and I feel, I hate him—Yet there is in him that which makes me tremble!

[Exit.

Enter Tallien and Legendre.

Tallien. It was Barrere, Legendre! didst thou mark him? Abrupt he turn'd, yet linger'd as he went, And towards us cast a look of doubtful meaning.

15

Legendre. I mark'd him well. I met his eye's last glance; It menac'd not so proudly as of yore. Methought he would have spoke—but that he dar'd not—Such agitation darken'd on his brow.

20

Tallien. 'Twas all-distrusting guilt that kept from bursting Th' imprison'd secret struggling in the face:
E'en as the sudden breeze upstarting onwards
Hurries the thundercloud, that pois'd awhile
Hung in mid air, red with its mutinous burthen.

Legendre. Perfidious Traitor!—still afraid to bask In the full blaze of power, the rustling serpent

25

Lurks in the thicket of the Tyrant's greatness, Ever prepared to sting who shelters him. Each thought, each action in himself converges; And love and friendship on his coward heart Shine like the powerless sun on polar ice; To all attach'd, by turns deserting all, Cunning and dark—a necessary villain!		30
Tallien. Yet much depends upon him—well you know With plausible harangue 'tis his to paint Defeat like victory—and blind the mob With truth-mix'd falsehood. They led on by him, And wild of head to work their own destruction, Support with uproar what he plans in darkness.		35
Legendre. O what a precious name is Liberty To scare or cheat the simple into slaves! Yes—we must gain him over: by dark hints We'll shew enough to rouse his watchful fears, Till the cold coward blaze a patriot. O Danton! murder'd friend! assist my counsels— Hover around me on sad Memory's wings,		40 45
And pour thy daring vengeance in my heart. Tallien! if but to-morrow's fateful sun Beholds the Tyrant living—we are dead!
Tallien. Yet his keen eye that flashes mighty meanings—		50
Legendre. Fear not—or rather fear th' alternative, And seek for courage e'en in cowardice— But see—hither he comes—let us away! His brother with him, and the bloody Couthon, And high of haughty spirit, young St. Just.	[Exeunt.	55
Enter Robespierre, Couthon, St. Just, and Robespierre Junior.	[
Robespierre. What? did La Fayette fall before my power?
And did I conquer Roland's spotless virtues? The fervent eloquence of Vergniaud's tongue?
And Brissot's thoughtful soul unbribed and bold?
Did zealot armies haste in vain to save them? What! did th' assassin's dagger aim its point		60
Vain, as a dream of murder, at my bosom?
And shall I dread the soft luxurious Tallien? Th' Adonis Tallien? banquet-hunting Tallien?
Him, whose heart flutters at the dice-box? Him,		65

St. Just. I cannot fear him—yet we must not scorn him.

The thick black sediment of all the factions— It needs no magic hand to stir it up!
Couthon. O we did wrong to spare them—fatal error!		75
Why lived Legendre, when that Danton died?		/ 3
And Collot d'Herbois dangerous in crimes?
I've fear'd him, since his iron heart endured To make of Lyons one vast human shambles,
Compar'd with which the sun-scorcht wilderness		80
Of Zara were a smiling paradise.
St. Just. Rightly thou judgest, Couthon! He is one Who flies from silent solitary anguish,
Seeking forgetful peace amid the jar
Of elements. The howl of maniac uproar Lulls to sad sleep the memory of himself.		85
A calm is fatal to him—then he feels
The dire upboilings of the storm within him. A tiger mad with inward wounds!—I dread

Robespierre. Self-centering Fear! how well thou canst ape Mercy! Too fond of slaughter!—matchless hypocrite! Thought Barrere so, when Brissot, Danton died?
Thought Barrere so, when through the streaming streets Of Paris red-eyed Massacre o'erwearied Reel'd heavily, intoxicate with blood?		170
And when (O heavens!) in Lyons' death-red square Sick Fancy groan'd o'er putrid hills of slain, Didst thou not fiercely laugh, and bless the day? Why, thou hast been the mouth-piece of all horrors, And, like a blood-hound, crouch'd for murder! Now Aloof thou standest from the tottering pillar,		175
Or, like a frighted child behind its mother, Hidest thy pale face in the skirts of— Mercy !		180
Barrere. O prodigality of eloquent anger! Why now I see thou'rt weak—thy case is desperate! The cool ferocious Robespierre turn'd scolder!
Robespierre. Who from a bad man's bosom wards the blow Reserves the whetted dagger for his own. Denounced twice—and twice I saved his life!	[Exit .	185
Barrere. The sections will support them—there's the point! No! he can never weather out the storm— Yet he is sudden in revenge—No more! I must away to Tallien.	[Exit.	190
	[EXIL.	190
Scene changes to the house of Adelaide.
Adelaide. Didst thou present the letter that I gave thee? Did Tallien answer, he would soon return?
Servant. He is in the Thuilleries—with him Legendre— In deep discourse they seem'd: as I approach'd He waved his hand as bidding me retire:		195
I did not interrupt him.	[Returns the letter.	150
Adelaide. Thou didst rightly.	[Exit Servant.
O this new freedom! at how dear a price We've bought the seeming good! The peaceful virtues And every blandishment of private life,	[EXIL SELVAIII.
The father's cares, the mother's fond endearment, All sacrificed to liberty's wild riot. The wingéd hours, that scatter'd roses round me, Languid and sad drag their slow course along,		200
And shake big gall-drops from their heavy wings. But I will steal away these anxious thoughts By the soft languishment of warbled airs, If haply melodies may lull the sense		205
Of sorrow for a while.	[Soft music.

[500]

[501]

Enter Tallien.

Tallien. Music, my love? O breathe again that air! Soft nurse of pain, it sooths the weary soul Of care, sweet as the whisper'd breeze of evening That plays around the sick man's throbbing temples.		210
SONG ^[501:1]
Tell me, on what holy ground May domestic peace be found? Halcyon daughter of the skies, Far on fearful wing she flies, From the pomp of scepter'd state, From the rebel's noisy hate.		215
In a cottag'd vale she dwells List'ning to the Sabbath bells! Still around her steps are seen, Spotless honor's meeker mien, Love, the sire of pleasing fears, Sorrow smiling through her tears,		220
And conscious of the past employ, Memory, bosom-spring of joy.		225
Tallien. I thank thee, Adelaide! 'twas sweet, though mournful. But why thy brow o'ercast, thy cheek so wan? Thou look'st as a lorn maid beside some stream That sighs away the soul in fond despairing, While sorrow sad, like the dank willow near her, Hangs o'er the troubled fountain of her eye.		230
Adelaide. Ah! rather let me ask what mystery lowers On Tallien's darken'd brow. Thou dost me wrong— Thy soul distemper'd, can my heart be tranquil?		235
Tallien. Tell me, by whom thy brother's blood was spilt? Asks he not vengeance on these patriot murderers? It has been borne too tamely. Fears and curses Groan on our midnight beds, and e'en our dreams Threaten the assassin hand of Robespierre. He dies!—nor has the plot escaped his fears.		240
Adelaide. Yet—yet—be cautious! much I fear the Commune— The tyrant's creatures, and their fate with his Fast link'd in close indissoluble union. The pale Convention—
Tallien. Hate him as they fear him, Impatient of the chain, resolv'd and ready.		245
Adelaide. Th' enthusiast mob, confusion's lawless sons—
Tallien. They are aweary of his stern morality, The fair-mask'd offspring of ferocious pride. The sections too support the delegates: All—all is ours! e'en now the vital air Of Liberty, condens'd awhile, is bursting (Force irresistible!) from its compressure— To shatter the arch chemist in the explosion!		250
Enter Billaud Varennes and Bourdon L'Oise.
	[Adelaide retires.
Bourdon l'Oise. Tallien! was this a time for amorous conference? Henriot, the tyrant's most devoted creature, Marshals the force of Paris: The fierce Club, With Vivier at their head, in loud acclaim Have sworn to make the guillotine in blood		255
Float on the scaffold.—But who comes here?		260
Enter Barrere abruptly. Barrere. Say, are ye friends to freedom? I am her's!
Let us, forgetful of all common feuds, Rally around her shrine! E'en now the tyrant Concerts a plan of instant massacre!
Billaud Varennes. Away to the Convention! with that voice So oft the herald of glad victory, Rouse their fallen spirits, thunder in their ears		265

[502]

[503]

[Cry from the street of—No Tyrant! Down with the Tyrant!

Tallien. Hear ye that outcry?—If the trembling members Even for a moment hold his fate suspended, I swear by the holy poniard, that stabbed Caesar, This dagger probes his heart!

[Exeunt omnes.

ACT II

Scene—The Convention.

Robespierre mounts the Tribune. Once more befits it that the voice of Truth,
Fearless in innocence, though leaguered round
By Envy and her hateful brood of hell,
Be heard amid this hall; once more befits	_
The patriot, whose prophetic eye so oft	5
Has pierced thro' faction's veil, to flash on crimes
Of deadliest import. Mouldering in the grave
Sleeps Capet's caitiff corse; my daring hand
Levelled to earth his blood-cemented throne,
My voice declared his guilt, and stirred up France	10
To call for vengeance. I too dug the grave
Where sleep the Girondists, detested band!
Long with the shew of freedom they abused
Her ardent sons. Long time the well-turn'd phrase,
The high-fraught sentence and the lofty tone	15
Of declamation, thunder'd in this hall,
Till reason midst a labyrinth of words
Perplex'd, in silence seem'd to yield assent.
I durst oppose. Soul of my honoured friend,
Spirit of Marat, upon thee I call—	20
Thou know'st me faithful, know'st with what warm zeal
I urg'd the cause of justice, stripp'd the mask
From faction's deadly visage, and destroy'd
Her traitor brood. Whose patriot arm hurl'd down
Hébert and Rousin, and the villain friends	25
Of Danton, foul apostate! those, who long
Mask'd treason's form in liberty's fair garb,
Long deluged France with blood, and durst defy
Omnipotence! but I it seems am false!
I am a traitor too! I—Robespierre!	30
I—at whose name the dastard despot brood
Look pale with fear, and call on saints to help them!
Who dares accuse me? who shall dare belie
My spotless name? Speak, ye accomplice band,
Of what am I accus'd? of what strange crime	35
Is Maximilian Robespierre accus'd,
That through this hall the buz of discontent
Should murmur? who shall speak?
Billaud Varennes. O patriot tongue
Belying the foul heart! Who was it urg'd
Friendly to tyrants that accurst decree,	40
Whose influence brooding o'er this hallowed hall,	40
Has chill'd each tongue to silence? Who destroyed
The freedom of debate, and carried through
The fatal law, that doom'd the delegates,
	45
Unheard before their equals, to the bar Where cruelty set through and murder reignid	40
Where cruelty sat throned, and murder reign'd
With her Dumas coequal? Say—thou man Of mighty eloquence, whose law was that? or mighty eloquence, whose law was that:

[504]

The voice of France assembled in her sons Assented, though the tame and timid voice Of traitors murmur'd. I advis'd that law— I justify it. It was wise and good.	50
Barrere. Oh, wonderous wise and most convenient too! I have long mark'd thee, Robespierre—and now Proclaim thee traitor tyrant!	55
[Loud applauses.
Robespierre. It is well. I am a traitor! oh, that I had fallen When Regnault lifted high the murderous knife, Regnault the instrument belike of those Who now themselves would fain assassinate,	60
And legalise their murders. I stand here An isolated patriot—hemmed around By faction's noisy pack; beset and bay'd By the foul hell-hounds who know no escape	65
From Justice' outstretch'd arm, but by the force That pierces through her breast.	03
[Murmurs, and shouts of—Down with the Tyrant!
Robespierre. Nay, but I will be heard. There was a time When Robespierre began, the loud applauses Of honest patriots drown'd the honest sound. But times are chang'd, and villainy prevails.	70
Collot d'Herbois. No—villainy shall fall. France could not brook A monarch's sway—sounds the dictator's name More soothing to her ear?
Bourdon l'Oise. Rattle her chains More musically now than when the hand Of Brissot forged her fetters; or the crew Of Hébert thundered out their blasphemies, And Danton talk'd of virtue?	75
Robespierre. Oh, that Brissot Were here again to thunder in this hall, That Hébert lived, and Danton's giant form Scowl'd once again defiance! so my soul Might cope with worthy foes. People of France,	80
Hear me! Beneath the vengeance of the law Traitors have perish'd countless; more survive: The hydra-headed faction lifts anew Her daring front, and fruitful from her wounds, Cautious from past defects, contrives new wiles Against the sons of Freedom.	85
Tallien. Freedom lives! Oppression falls—for France has felt her chains, Has burst them too. Who traitor-like stept forth Amid the hall of Jacobins to save Camille Desmoulins, and the venal wretch D'Eglantine?	90
Robespierre. I did—for I thought them honest. And Heaven forefend that Vengeance e'er should strike, Ere justice doom'd the blow.
Barrere. Traitor, thou didst. Yes, the accomplice of their dark designs, Awhile didst thou defend them, when the storm Lower'd at safe distance. When the clouds frown'd darker, Exertid for your reals and left them to their foto.	95
Fear'd for yourself and left them to their fate. Oh, I have mark'd thee long, and through the veil Seen thy foul projects. Yes, ambitious man, Self-will'd dictator o'er the realm of France, The vengeance thou hast plann'd for patriots Falls on thy head. Look how thy brother's deads.	100
Falls on thy head. Look how thy brother's deeds Dishonour thine! He the firm patriot, Thou the foul parricide of Liberty!	105
Robespierre Junior. Barrere—attempt not meanly to divide Me from my brother. I partake his guilt, For I partake his virtue.

To fill the current. Triumph not too soon, Justice may yet be victor.	[Loud applauses.	170
Enter St. Just, and mounts the Tribune.
St. Just. I come from the Committee—charged to speak Of matters of high import. I omit Their orders. Representatives of France, Boldly in his own person speaks St. Just What his own heart shall dictate.		175
Tallien. Hear ye this, Insulted delegates of France? St. Just From your Committee comes—comes charg'd to speak Of matters of high import, yet omits Their orders! Representatives of France, That bold man I denounce, who disobeys The nation's orders.—I denounce St. Just.	[Loud applauses.	180
St. Just. Hear me!	[Violent murmurs.
Robespierre. He shall be heard!
Bourdon l'Oise. Must we contaminate this sacred hall With the foul breath of treason?
Collot d'Herbois. Drag him away! Hence with him to the bar.		185
Couthon. Oh, just proceedings! Robespierre prevented liberty of speech— And Robespierre is a tyrant! Tallien reigns, He dreads to hear the voice of innocence— And St. Just must be silent!
Legendre. Heed we well That justice guide our actions. No light import Attends this day. I move St. Just be heard.		190
Freron. Inviolate be the sacred right of man. The freedom of debate.	[Violent applauses.
St. Just. I may be heard then! much the times are chang'd, When St. Just thanks this hall for hearing him. Robespierre is call'd a tyrant. Men of France, Judge not too soon. By popular discontent		195
Was Aristides driven into exile, Was Phocion murder'd. Ere ye dare pronounce Robespierre is guilty, it befits ye well, Consider who accuse him. Tallien, Bourdon of Oise—the very men denounced,		200
For that their dark intrigues disturb'd the plan Of government. Legendre the sworn friend Of Danton, fall'n apostate. Dubois Crancé, He who at Lyons spared the royalists— Collot d'Herbois—		205
Bourdon l'Oise. What—shall the traitor rear His head amid our tribune—and blaspheme Each patriot? shall the hireling slave of faction—		210
St. Just. I am of no one faction. I contend Against all factions.
Tallien. I espouse the cause Of truth. Robespierre on yester morn pronounced Upon his own authority a report. To-day St. Just comes down. St. Just neglects What the Committee orders, and harangues From his own will. O citizens of France I weep for you—I weep for my poor country—		215
I tremble for the cause of Liberty, When individuals shall assume the sway, And with more insolence than kingly pride Rule the Republic.		220

Billaud Varennes. Shudder, ye representatives of France,

[509]

Shudder with horror. Henriot commands The marshall'd force of Paris. Henriot, Foul parricide—the sworn ally of Hébert, Denounced by all—upheld by Robespierre. Who spar'd La Valette? who promoted him,		225
Stain'd with the deep dye of nobility? Who to an ex-peer gave the high command? Who screen'd from justice the rapacious thief? Who cast in chains the friends of Liberty? Robespierre, the self-stil'd patriot Robespierre— Robespierre, allied with villain Daubigné— Robespierre, the foul arch-tyrant Robespierre.		230235
Bourdon l'Oise. He talks of virtue—of morality—Consistent patriot! he Daubigné's friend! Henriot's supporter virtuous! preach of virtue, Yet league with villains, for with Robespierre Villains alone ally. Thou art a tyrant! I stile thee tyrant, Robespierre!	[Loud applauses.	240
Robespierre. Take back the name. Ye citizens of France—
[Violent clamour. Cries of—D Tallien. Oppression falls. The traitor stands appall'd—	own with the Tyrant!
Guilt's iron fangs engrasp his shrinking soul— He hears assembled France denounce his crimes! He sees the mask torn from his secret sins— He trembles on the precipice of fate. Fall'n guilty tyrant! murder'd by thy rage		245
How many an innocent victim's blood has stain'd Fair freedom's altar! Sylla-like thy hand Mark'd down the virtues, that, thy foes removed, Perpetual Dictator thou might'st reign, And tyrannize o'er France, and call it freedom! Long time in timid guilt the traitor plann'd		250
His fearful wiles—success emboldened sin— And his stretch'd arm had grasp'd the diadem Ere now, but that the coward's heart recoil'd, Lest France awak'd should rouse her from her dream, And call aloud for vengeance. He, like Caesar,		255
With rapid step urged on his bold career, Even to the summit of ambitious power, And deem'd the name of King alone was wanting. Was it for this we hurl'd proud Capet down? Is it for this we wage eternal war		260
Against the tyrant horde of murderers, The crownéd cockatrices whose foul venom Infects all Europe? was it then for this We swore to guard our liberty with life, That Robespierre should reign? the spirit of freedom		265
Is not yet sunk so low. The glowing flame That animates each honest Frenchman's heart Not yet extinguish'd. I invoke thy shade, Immortal Brutus! I too wear a dagger;		270
And if the representatives of France, Through fear or favour, should delay the sword Of justice, Tallien emulates thy virtues; Tallien, like Brutus, lifts the avenging arm; Tallien shall save his country.		275
Dilloud Voronnog I domand	[Violent applauses.
Billaud Varennes. I demand The arrest of all the traitors. Memorable Will be this day for France.
Robespierre. Yes! Memorable This day will be for France—for villains triumph.		280
Lebas. I will not share in this day's damning guilt. Condemn me too.

[511]

[510]

[Great cry—Down with the Tyrants!

(The two Robespierres, Couthon, St. Just, and Lebas are led off.)

ACT III

Scene continues.

Collot d'Herbois. Caesar is fall'n! The baneful tree of Java, Whose death-distilling boughs dropt poisonous dew, Is rooted from its base. This worse than Cromwell, The austere, the self-denying Robespierre, Even in this hall, where once with terror mute We listen'd to the hypocrite's harangues, Has heard his doom.		5
Billaud Varennes. Yet must we not suppose The tyrant will fall tamely. His sworn hireling Henriot, the daring desperate Henriot, Commands the force of Paris. I denounce him.		10
Freron. I denounce Fleuriot too, the mayor of Paris.
Enter Dubois Crancé.
Dubois Crancé. Robespierre is rescued. Henriot at the head Of the arm'd force has rescued the fierce tyrant.
Collot d'Herbois. Ring the tocsin—call all the citizens To save their country—never yet has Paris Forsook the representatives of France.		15
Tallien. It is the hour of danger. I propose This sitting be made permanent.	[Loud onnlouses
	[Loud applauses.
Collot d'Herbois. The National Convention shall remain Firm at its post.		20
Enter a Messenger.
Messenger. Robespierre has reach'd the Commune. They espouse The tyrant's cause. St. Just is up in arms! St. Just—the young ambitious bold St. Just Harangues the mob. The sanguinary Couthon Thirsts for your blood.	[Tocsin rings .	25
Tallien. These tyrants are in arms against the law: Outlaw the rebels.
Enter Merlin of Douay.
Merlin. Health to the representatives of France! I past this moment through the arméd force— They ask'd my name—and when they heard a delegate, Swore I was not the friend of France.		30
Collot d'Herbois. The tyrants threaten us as when they turn'd The cannon's mouth on Brissot.
Enter another Messenger.
Second Messenger. Vivier harangues the Jacobins—the Club Espouse the cause of Robespierre.		35
Enter another Messenger.
Third Messenger. All's lost—the tyrant triumphs. Henriot leads The soldiers to his aid.—Already I hear The rattling cannon destined to surround This sacred hall.
Tallien. Why, we will die like men then. The representatives of France dare death, When duty steels their bosoms.	[Loud applauses.	40
Tallien (addressing the galleries). Citizens! France is insulted in her delegates— The majesty of the Republic is insulted— Tyrants are up in arms. An arméd force Threats the Convention. The Convention swears To die, or save the country!		45

[512]

Citizen (from above). We too swear To die, or save the country. Follow me.

[All the men quit the galleries.

Enter another Messenger.

Fourth Messenger. Henriot is taken! [Loud applauses. Three of your brave soldiers Swore they would seize the rebel slave of tyrants, 50 Or perish in the attempt. As he patroll'd The streets of Paris, stirring up the mob, They seiz'd him. [Applauses. Billaud Varennes. Let the names of these brave men Live to the future day. Enter Bourdon L'Oise, sword in hand. Bourdon l'Oise. I have clear'd the Commune. [Applauses. Through the throng I rush'd, Brandishing my good sword to drench its blade 55 Deep in the tyrant's heart. The timid rebels Gave way. I met the soldiery—I spake Of the dictator's crimes—of patriots chain'd In dark deep dungeons by his lawless rage-Of knaves secure beneath his fostering power. 60 I spake of Liberty. Their honest hearts Caught the warm flame. The general shout burst forth, 'Live the Convention—Down with Robespierre!' [Applauses. (Shouts from without—Down with the Tyrant!) Tallien. I hear, I hear the soul-inspiring sounds, France shall be saved! her generous sons attached 65 To principles, not persons, spurn the idol They worshipp'd once. Yes, Robespierre shall fall As Capet fell! Oh! never let us deem That France shall crouch beneath a tyrant's throne, That the almighty people who have broke 70 On their oppressors' heads the oppressive chain, Will court again their fetters! easier were it To hurl the cloud-capt mountain from its base, Than force the bonds of slavery upon men Determined to be free! [Applauses. 75 Enter Legendre—a pistol in one hand, keys in the other. Legendre (flinging down the keys). So-let the mutinous Jacobins meet now In the open air. [Loud applauses. A factious turbulent party Lording it o'er the state since Danton died, And with him the Cordeliers.—A hireling band Of loud-tongued orators controull'd the Club, 80 And bade them bow the knee to Robespierre. Vivier has 'scaped me. Curse his coward heart-This fate-fraught tube of Justice in my hand, I rush'd into the hall. He mark'd mine eye That beam'd its patriot anger, and flash'd full 85 With death-denouncing meaning. 'Mid the throng He mingled. I pursued—but stay'd my hand, Lest haply I might shed the innocent blood. [Applauses. Freron. They took from me my ticket of admission— Expell'd me from their sittings.—Now, forsooth, 90 Humbled and trembling re-insert my name. But Freron enters not the Club again 'Till it be purged of guilt:-'till, purified Of tyrants and of traitors, honest men May breathe the air in safety. 95

Barrere. What means this uproar! if the tyrant band Should gain the people once again to rise—We are as dead!

Did Brutus fear it? or the Grecian friends Who buried in Hipparchus' breast the sword, And died triumphant? Caesar should fear death, Brutus must scorn the bugbear.	100
(Shouts from without—Live the Convention!—Down with the Tyrants!)
Tallien. Hark! again The sounds of honest Freedom!
Enter Deputies from the Sections.
Citizen. Citizens! representatives of France! Hold on your steady course. The men of Paris Espouse your cause. The men of Paris swear They will defend the delegates of Freedom.	105
Tallien. Hear ye this, Colleagues? hear ye this, my brethren? And does no thrill of joy pervade your breasts? My bosom bounds to rapture. I have seen The sons of France shake off the tyrant yoke; I have, as much as lies in mine own arm, Hurl'd down the usurper.—Come death when it will, I have lived long enough. [Shouts without.	110
Barrere. Hark! how the noise increases! through the gloom Of the still evening—harbinger of death, Rings the tocsin! the dreadful generale Thunders through Paris—	115
[Cry without—Down with the Tyrant!
Enter Lecointre.
Lecointre. So may eternal justice blast the foes Of France! so perish all the tyrant brood, As Robespierre has perish'd! Citizens, Caesar is taken.	120
[Loud and repeated applauses. I marvel not that with such fearless front
He braved our vengeance, and with angry eye Scowled round the hall defiance. He relied On Henriot's aid—the Commune's villain friendship, And Henriot's boughten succours. Ye have heard How Henriot rescued him—how with open arms	125
The Commune welcom'd in the rebel tyrant— How Fleuriot aided, and seditious Vivier Stirr'd up the Jacobins. All had been lost— The representatives of France had perish'd— Freedom had sunk beneath the tyrant arm	130
Of this foul parricide, but that her spirit Inspir'd the men of Paris. Henriot call'd 'To arms' in vain, whilst Bourdon's patriot voice Breathed eloquence, and o'er the Jacobins Legendre frown'd dismay. The tyrants fled—	135
They reach'd the Hôtel. We gather'd round—we call'd For vengeance! Long time, obstinate in despair, With knives they hack'd around them. 'Till foreboding The sentence of the law, the clamorous cry Of joyful thousands hailing their destruction,	140
Each sought by suicide to escape the dread Of death. Lebas succeeded. From the window Leapt the younger Robespierre, but his fractur'd limb Forbade to escape. The self-will'd dictator Plunged often the keen knife in his dark breast,	145
Yet impotent to die. He lives all mangled By his own tremulous hand! All gash'd and gored He lives to taste the bitterness of death. Even now they meet their doom. The bloody Couthon, The fierce St. Just, even now attend their tyrant	150
To fall beneath the axe. I saw the torches Flash on their visages a dreadful light— I saw them whilst the black blood roll'd adown Each stern face, even then with dauntless eye Scowl round contemptuous, dying as they lived,	155
Fearless of fate!

Tallien. And wherefore fear we death?

[515]

Barrere mounts the Tribune. For ever hallowed be this glorious day, When Freedom, bursting her oppressive chain, Tramples on the oppressor. When the tyrant Hurl'd from his blood-cemented throne, by the arm	160
Of the almighty people, meets the death He plann'd for thousands. Oh! my sickening heart Has sunk within me, when the various woes Of my brave country crowded o'er my brain	165
In ghastly numbers—when assembled hordes,
Dragg'd from their hovels by despotic power,
Rush'd o'er her frontiers, plunder'd her fair hamlets,	170
And sack'd her populous towns, and drench'd with blood
The reeking fields of Flanders.—When within,
Upon her vitals prey'd the rankling tooth
Of treason; and oppression, giant form, Trampling on freedom, left the alternative	175
Of slavery, or of death. Even from that day,	1/3
When, on the guilty Capet, I pronounced
The doom of injured France, has faction reared
Her hated head amongst us. Roland preach'd
Of mercy—the uxorious dotard Roland,	180
The woman-govern'd Roland durst aspire
To govern France; and Petion talk'd of virtue,
And Vergniaud's eloquence, like the honeyed tongue
Of some soft Syren wooed us to destruction.	105
Where the last Louis pour'd his guilty blood	185
Where the last Louis pour'd his guilty blood, Fell Brissot's head, the womb of darksome treasons,
And Orleans, villain kinsman of the Capet,
And Hébert's atheist crew, whose maddening hand
Hurl'd down the altars of the living God,	190
With all the infidel's intolerance.
The last worst traitor triumphed—triumph'd long,
Secur'd by matchless villainy—by turns
Defending and deserting each accomplice
As interest prompted. In the goodly soil	195
Of Freedom, the foul tree of treason struck
Its deep-fix'd roots, and dropt the dews of death
On all who slumber'd in its specious shade. He wove the web of treachery. He caught
The listening crowd by his wild eloquence,	200
His cool ferocity that persuaded murder,	200
Even whilst it spake of mercy!—never, never Shall this regenerated country wear
The despot yoke. Though myriads round assail,
And with worse fury urge this new crusade	205
Than savages have known; though the leagued despots
Depopulate all Europe, so to pour
The accumulated mass upon our coasts,
Sublime amid the storm shall France arise,	210
And like the rock amid surrounding waves Repel the rushing ocean.—She shall wield	210
The thunder-bolt of vengeance—she shall blast
The despot's pride, and liberate the world!

FERDINAND

Familiars of the Inquisition. Moors, Servants, &c.

Time. The reign of Philip II., just at the close of the civil wars against the Moors, and during the heat of the persecution which raged against them, shortly after the edict which forbad the wearing of Moresco apparel under pain of death.

FOOTNOTES:

[518:1] First published in 1873 by Mr. John Pearson (under the editorship of R. H. Shepherd): included in P. and D. W. 1877-80, and in P. W. 1893.

Four MSS. are (or were) extant, (1) the transcript of the play as sent to Sheridan in 1797 (MS. I); (2) a contemporary transcript sent by Coleridge to a friend (MS. II); (3) a third transcript (the handwriting of a 'legal character') sold at Christie's, March 8, 1895 (MS. III); (4) a copy of Act I in Coleridge's handwriting, which formerly belonged to Thomas Poole, and is now in the British Museum (MS. P.). The text of the present issue follows MS. I. The variants are derived from MSS. I, II as noted by J. Dykes Campbell in P. W. 1893, from a MS. collation (by J. D. Campbell) of MS. III, now published for the first time, and from a fresh collation of MS. P.

Osorio was begun at Stowey in March, 1797. Two and a half Acts were written before June, four and a half Acts before September 13, 1797. A transcript of the play (MS. I) was sent to Drury Lane in October, and rejected, on the score of the 'obscurity of the last three acts', on or about December 1, 1797. See 'Art.' Coleridge, Osorio and Remorse, by J. D. Campbell, Athenaeum, April 8, 1890.

In the reign of Philip II shortly after the civil war against the Moors, and during the heat of the Persecution which raged against them. Maria an orphan of fortune had been espoused to Albert the eldest son of Lord Velez, but he having been supposed dead, is now addressed by Osorio the brother of Albert.

In the character of Osorio I wished to represent a man, who, from his childhood had mistaken constitutional abstinence from vices, for strength of character—thro' his pride duped into guilt, and then endeavouring to shield himself from the reproaches of his own mind by misanthropy.

Don Garcia (supposed dead) and Valdez father of Don Ordoño, and Guardian of Teresa di Monviedro. Don Garcia eldest son of the Marquis di Valdez, supposed dead, having been six years absent, and for the last three without any tidings of him.

Teresa Senñora [sic] di Monviedro, an orphan lady, bequeathed by both Parents on their death-bed to the wardship of the Marquis, and betrothed to Don Garcia—Gulinaez a Moorish Chieftain and ostensibly a new Christian—Alhadra his wife. MS. III.

For the Preface of MS. I, vide Appendices of this edition.

ACT THE FIRST[519:1]

Scene—The sea shore on the coast of Granada.

VELEZ. MARIA.

Maria. I hold Osorio dear: he is your son, And Albert's brother.

Velez. Love him for himself, Nor make the living wretched for the dead.

Maria. I mourn that you should plead in vain, Lord Velez! But Heaven hath heard my vow, and I remain Faithful to Albert, be he dead or living.

Velez. Heaven knows with what delight I saw your loves; And could my heart's blood give him back to thee

[520]	I would die smiling. But these are idle thoughts! Thy dying father comes upon my soul With that same look, with which he gave thee to me: I held thee in mine arms, a powerless babe, While thy poor mother with a mute entreaty		10
	Fix'd her faint eyes on mine: ah, not for this, That I should let thee feed thy soul with gloom, And with slow anguish wear away thy life, The victim of a useless constancy. I must not see thee wretched.		15
	Maria. There are woes Ill-barter'd for the garishness of joy! If it be wretched with an untired eye To watch those skiey tints, and this green ocean; Or in the sultry hour beneath some rock, My hair dishevell'd by the pleasant sea-breeze,		20
	To shape sweet visions, and live o'er again All past hours of delight; if it be wretched To watch some bark, and fancy Albert there; To go through each minutest circumstance		25
	Of the bless'd meeting, and to frame adventures Most terrible and strange, and hear him tell them: (As once I knew a crazy Moorish maid, Who dress'd her in her buried lover's cloaths, And o'er the smooth spring in the mountain cleft Hung with her lute, and play'd the selfsame tune		30
	He used to play, and listen'd to the shadow Herself had made); if this be wretchedness, And if indeed it be a wretched thing To trick out mine own death-bed, and imagine		35
	That I had died—died, just ere his return; Then see him listening to my constancy; And hover round, as he at midnight ever Sits on my grave and gazes at the moon; Or haply in some more fantastic mood To be in Paradise, and with choice flowers		40
	Build up a bower where he and I might dwell, And there to wait his coming! O my sire! My Albert's sire! if this be wretchedness That eats away the life, what were it, think you, If in a most assur'd reality		45
[521]	He should return, and see a brother's infant Smile at him from my arms? O what a thought! 'Twas horrible! it pass'd my brain like lightning.	[Clasping her forehead.	50
	Velez. 'Twere horrible, if but one doubt remain'd The very week he promised his return.
	Maria. Ah, what a busy joy was ours—to see him After his three years' travels! tho' that absence His still-expected, never-failing letters Almost endear'd to me! Even then what tumult!		55
	Velez. O power of youth to feed on pleasant thoughts Spite of conviction! I am old and heartless! Yes, I am old—I have no pleasant dreams—Hectic and unrefresh'd with rest.		60
	Maria (with great tenderness). My father!
	Velez. Aye, 'twas the morning thou didst try to cheer me With a fond gaiety. My heart was bursting, And yet I could not tell me, how my sleep Was throng'd with swarthy faces, and I saw The merchant-ship in which my son was captured—Well, well, enough—captured in sight of land—We might almost have seen it from our house-top!		65
[522]	Maria (abruptly). He did not perish there!
	Velez (impatiently). Nay, nay—how aptly thou forgett'st a tale Thou ne'er didst wish to learn—my brave Osorio Saw them both founder in the storm that parted Him and the pirate: both the vessels founder'd. Gallant Osorio! O belov'd Maria,	[Pauses, then tenderly.	70

And most delight his spirit, go and make His brother happy, make his agéd father Sink to the grave with joy!		73
Maria. For mercy's sake Press me no more. I have no power to love him! His proud forbidding eye, and his dark brow Chill me, like dew-damps of the unwholesome night. My love, a timorous and tender flower, Closes beneath his touch.		80
Velez. You wrong him, maiden. You wrong him, by my soul! Nor was it well To character by such unkindly phrases The stir and workings of that love for you Which he has toil'd to smother. 'Twas not well— Nor is it grateful in you to forget		85
His wounds and perilous voyages, and how With an heroic fearlessness of danger He roamed the coast of Afric for your Albert. It was not well—you have moved me even to tears.		90
Maria. O pardon me, my father! pardon me. It was a foolish and ungrateful speech, A most ungrateful speech! But I am hurried Beyond myself, if I but dream of one Who aims to rival Albert. Were we not Born on one day, like twins of the same parent? Nursed in one cradle? Pardon me, my father! A six years' absence is an heavy thing; Yet still the hope survives—		95 100
Velez (looking forwards). Hush—hush! Maria.
Maria. It is Francesco, our Inquisitor; That busy man, gross, ignorant, and cruel!
Enter Francesco and Alhadra.
Francesco (to Velez). Where is your son, my lord? Oh! here he cor	mes.
Enter Osorio.
My Lord Osorio! this Moresco woman (Alhadra is her name) asks audience of you.		105
Osorio. Hail, reverend father! What may be the business?
Francesco. O the old business—a Mohammedan! The officers are in her husband's house, And would have taken him, but that he mention'd Your name, asserting that you were his friend, Aye, and would warrant him a Catholic. But I know well these children of perdition,		110
And all their idle fals[e]hoods to gain time; So should have made the officers proceed, But that this woman with most passionate outcries, (Kneeling and holding forth her infants to me) So work'd upon me, who (you know, my lord!) Have human frailties, and am tender-hearted, That I came with her.		115
Osorio. You are merciful. I would that I could serve you; but in truth Your face is new to me.	[Looking at Alhadra.	120
[Alhadra is about to speak,	but is interrupted by
Francesco. Aye, aye—I thought so;
And so I said to one of the familiars. A likely story, said I, that Osorio, The gallant nobleman, who fought so bravely Some four years past against these rebel Moors; Working so hard from out the garden of faith To eradicate these weeds detestable;		125
That he should countenance this vile Moresco, Nay, be his friend—and warrant him, forsooth! Well, well, my lord! it is a warning to me;		130

[523]

[524]

Now I return.
Alhadra. My lord, my husband's name Is Ferdinand: you may remember it. Three years ago—three years this very week— You left him at Almeria.
Francesco (triumphantly). Palpably false! This very week, three years ago, my lord! (You needs must recollect it by your wound) You were at sea, and fought the Moorish fiends Who took and murder'd your poor brother Albert.	135
[Maria looks at Francesco with disgust and horror. Osorio's appearance to be collected from the speech that follows.
Francesco (to Velez and pointing to Osorio). What? is he ill, my lord? How strange he looks!	140
Velez (angrily). You started on him too abruptly, father! The fate of one, on whom you know he doted.
Osorio (starting as in a sudden agitation). O heavens! I doted! Yes! I DOTED on him! [Then, as if recovering himself.
[Osorio walks to the end of the stage. Velez follows soothing him.
Maria (her eye following them). I do not, cannot love him. Is my heart hard? Is my heart hard? that even now the thought Should force itself upon me—yet I feel it!	145
Francesco. The drops did start and stand upon his forehead! I will return—in very truth I grieve To have been the occasion. Ho! attend me, woman!
Alhadra (to Maria). O gentle lady, make the father stay Till that my lord recover. I am sure That he will say he is my husband's friend.	150
Maria. Stay, father, stay—my lord will soon recover.
[Osorio and Velez returning.
Osorio (to Velez as they return). Strange! that this Francesco Should have the power so to distemper me.	155
Velez. Nay, 'twas an amiable weakness, son!
Francesco (to Osorio). My lord, I truly grieve——
Osorio. Tut! name it not. A sudden seizure, father! think not of it. As to this woman's husband, I do know him: I know him well, and that he is a Christian.	160
Francesco. I hope, my lord, your sensibility Doth not prevail.
Osorio. Nay, nay—you know me better. You hear what I have said. But 'tis a trifle. I had something here of more importance. [Touching his forehead as if in the act of recollection. Hah!
The Count Mondejar, our great general, Writes, that the bishop we were talking of Has sicken'd dangerously.	165
Francesco. Even so.
Osorio. I must return my answer.
Francesco. When, my lord?
Osorio. To-morrow morning, and shall not forget How bright and strong your zeal for the Catholic faith.	170
Francesco. You are too kind, my lord! You overwhelm me.

Osorio. Nay, say not so. As for this Ferdinand, 'Tis certain that he was a Catholic. What changes may have happen'd in three years,

ACT THE SECOND
Scene the First.—A wild and mountainous country. Osorio of Ferdinand are discovered at a little distance from a house, whe stands under the brow of a slate rock, the rock covered with vince	hich
Ferdinand and Osorio.
Ferdinand. Thrice you have sav'd my life. Once in the battle You gave it me, next rescued me from suicide, When for my follies I was made to wander With mouths to feed, and not a morsel for them. Now, but for you, a dungeon's slimy stones Had pillow'd my snapt joints.	5
Osorio. Good Ferdinand! Why this to me? It is enough you know it.
Ferdinand. A common trick of gratitude, my lord! Seeking to ease her own full heart.
Osorio. Enough. A debt repay'd ceases to be a debt. You have it in your power to serve me greatly.	10
Ferdinand. As how, my lord? I pray you name the thing! I would climb up an ice-glaz'd precipice To pluck a weed you fancied.
Osorio (with embarrassment and hesitation). Why—that—lady—
Ferdinand. 'Tis now three years, my lord! since last I saw you. Have you a son, my lord?	15
Osorio. O miserable! Ferdinand! you are a man, and know this world. I told you what I wish'd—now for the truth! She lov'd the man you kill'd!	[Aside.
Ferdinand (looking as suddenly alarmed). You jest, my lord?
Osorio. And till his death is proved, she will not wed me.	20
Ferdinand. You sport with me, my lord?
Osorio. Come, come, this foolery Lives only in thy looks—thy heart disowns it.
Ferdinand. I can bear this, and anything more grievous From you, my lord!—but how can I serve you here?
Osorio. Why, you can mouth set speeches solemnly, Wear a quaint garment, make mysterious antics.	25
[Ferdinand. I am dull, my lord! I do not comprehend you.
Osorio. In blunt terms] you can play the sorcerer. She has no faith in Holy Church, 'tis true. Her lover school'd her in some newer nonsense: Yet still a tale of spirits works on her. She is a lone enthusiast, sensitive,	30
Shivers, and cannot keep the tears in her eye. Such ones do love the marvellous too well Not to believe it. We will wind her up With a strange music, that she knows not of, With fumes of frankincense, and mummery—	35

With fumes of frankincense, and mummery—

Then leave, as one sure token of his death,
That portrait, which from off the dead man's neck
I bade thee take, the trophy of thy conquest.

[535]

[536]

Osorio. Where lies your scruple?
Ferdinand. That shark Francesco.
Osorio. O! an o'ersiz'd gudgeon! I baited, sir, my hook with a painted mitre, And now I play with him at the end of the line. Well—and what next?
Ferdinand (stammering). Next, next—my lord! You know you told me that the lady loved you, Had loved you with incautious tenderness. That if the young man, her betrothéd husband, Return'd, yourself, and she, and an unborn babe, Must perish. Now, my lord! to be a man!
Osorio (aloud, though to express his contempt he speaks in the third person). This man! he kill'd for hire	s fellow is
One whom he knew not—yet has tender scruples. [Then turning to Ferr	DINAND.
Thy hums and ha's, thy whine and stammering. Pish—fool! thou blunder'st through the devil's book, Spelling thy villany!
Ferdinand. My lord—my lord! I can bear much, yes, very much from you. But there's a point where sufferance is meanness! I am no villain, never kill'd for hire. My gratitude——
Osorio. O! aye, your gratitude! 'Twas a well-sounding word—what have you done with it?
Ferdinand. Who proffers his past favours for my virtue Tries to o'erreach me, is a very sharper, And should not speak of gratitude, my lord! I knew not 'twas your brother!
Osorio (evidently alarmed). And who told you?
Ferdinand. He himself told me.
Osorio. Ha! you talk'd with him? And those, the two Morescoes, that went with you?
Ferdinand. Both fell in a night-brawl at Malaga.
Osorio (in a low voice). My brother!
Ferdinand. Yes, my lord! I could not tell you: I thrust away the thought, it drove me wild. But listen to me now. I pray you, listen!
Osorio. Villain! no more! I'll hear no more of it.
Ferdinand. My lord! it much imports your future safety That you should hear it.
Osorio (turning off from Ferdinand). Am I not a man? 'Tis as it should be! Tut—the deed itself Was idle—and these after-pangs still idler!
Ferdinand. We met him in the very place you mention'd, Hard by a grove of firs.
Osorio. Enough! enough!
Ferdinand. He fought us valiantly, and wounded all; In fine, compell'd a parley!
Osorio (sighing as if lost in thought). Albert! Brother!
Ferdinand. He offer'd me his purse.

Yes! I spurn'd it.

Ferdinand (with hesitation). Just now I should have cursed the man who told me

[537]

[538]

Ferdinand.

	He promis'd us I know not what—in vain! Then with a look and voice which overaw'd me,
	He said—What mean you, friends? My life is dear. I have a brother and a promised wife What make life deap to me, and if I fell	85
	Who make life dear to me, and if I fall That brother will roam earth and hell for vengeance.
	There was a likeness in his face to yours.
	I ask'd his brother's name; he said, Osorio,	90
	Son of Lord Velez! I had well-nigh fainted!
	At length I said (if that indeed I said it, And that no spirit made my tongue his organ),
	That woman is now pregnant by that brother,
	And he the man who sent us to destroy you,	95
[539]	He drove a thrust at me in rage. I told him,
	He wore her portrait round his neck—he look'd
	As he had been made of the rock that propp'd him back; Ay, just as you look now—only less ghastly!
	At last recovering from his trance, he threw	100
	His sword away, and bade us take his life—	 100
	It was not worth his keeping.
	Osorio. And you kill'd him?
	O blood-hounds! may eternal wrath flame round you!
	He was the image of the Deity. [A pause	e.
	It seizes me—by Hell! I will go on!	105
	What? would'st thou stop, man? thy pale looks won't save thee!
	[Then suddenly pressing his forehea	d.
	Oh! cold, cold—shot thro' with icy cold!
	Ferdinand (aside). Were he alive, he had return'd ere now. The consequence the same, dead thro' his plotting!
	Osorio. O this unutterable dying away here,	110
	This sickness of the heart! [A pause
	What if I went
	And liv'd in a hollow tomb, and fed on weeds?
	Ay! that's the road to heaven! O fool! fool! fool! [A pause	9.
	What have I done but that which nature destin'd	115
	Or the blind elements stirr'd up within me? If good were meant, why were we made these beings?	115
	And if not meant—
	Ferdinand. How feel you now, my lord?
	[Osorio starts, looks at him wildly, then, after a pause, during which his features are force into a smile
	Osorio. A gust of the soul! i'faith, it overset me.
	O 'twas all folly—all! idle as laughter!
	Now, Ferdinand, I swear that thou shalt aid me.	120
	Fordinand (in a law voice) I'll porich firet! Shame on my coward heart
	Ferdinand (in a low voice). I'll perish first! Shame on my coward heart, That I must slink away from wickedness
	Like a cow'd dog!
	Osorio. What dost thou mutter of?
[540]	Ferdinand. Some of your servants know me, I am certain.
[340]	•	405
	Osorio. There's some sense in that scruple; but we'll mask you.	125
	Ferdinand. They'll know my gait. But stay! of late I have watch'd
	A stranger that lives nigh, still picking weeds,
	Now in the swamp, now on the walls of the ruin, Now clamb'ring, like a runaway lunatic,
	Up to the summit of our highest mount.	130
	I have watch'd him at it morning-tide and noon,
	Once in the moonlight. Then I stood so near,
	I heard him mutt'ring o'er the plant. A wizard! Some gaunt slave, prowling out for dark employments.
	Osorio. What may his name be?
	Ferdinand. That I cannot tell you.	135
	Only Francesco bade an officer Speak in your name, as lord of this domain.
	So he was question'd, who and what he was.
	This was his answer: Say to the Lord Osorio,
	'He that can bring the dead to life again.'	140

A wild and mountainous Country. Ordonio and Isidore are discovered, supposed at a little distance from Isidore's house.

Ord. Here we may stop: your house distinct in view, Yet we secured from listeners.

Isid. Now indeed My house! and it looks cheerful as the clusters Basking in sunshine on yon vine-clad rock That overbrows it! Patron! Friend! Preserver! Thrice have you sav'd my life.

Isid. Will that be a sure sign?

Ord. Beyond suspicion.
Fondly caressing him, her favour'd lover,
(By some base spell he had bewitched her senses.)
She whisper'd such dark fears of me forsooth,
As made this heart pour gall into my veins,
And as she coyly bound it round his neck,
She made him promise silence; and now holds
The secret of the existence of this portrait
Known only to her lover and herself.
But I had traced her, stolen unnotic'd on them,
And unsuspected saw and heard the whole.

They'll know my gait: but stay! last night I watched A stranger near the ruin in the wood, Who as it seemed was gathering herbs and wild flowers. I had followed him at distance, seen him scale Its western wall, and by an easier entrance Stole after him unnoticed. There I marked, That mid the chequer work of light and shade, With curious choice he plucked no other flowers, But those on which the moonlight fell: and once I heard him muttering o'er the plant. A wizard-Some gaunt slave prowling here for dark employment. Ordonio. Doubtless you question'd him? 'Twas my intention, Having first traced him homeward to his haunt. But lo! the stern Dominican, whose spies Lurk everywhere, already (as it seemed) Had given commission to his apt familiar To seek and sound the Moor; who now returning, Was by this trusty agent stopped midway. I, dreading fresh suspicion if found near him In that lone place, again concealed myself; Yet within hearing. So the Moor was question'd, And in your name, as lord of this domain, Proudly he answered, 'Say to the Lord Ordonio, Remorse. [143] robe] robes Remorse. Stage-direction, a] the Remorse. Who lurks there! Have we been overheard? There where the smooth high wall of slate-rock glitters-Isidore. 'Neath those tall stones, which propping each the other, Form a mock portal with their pointed arch? Pardon my smiles! 'Tis a poor idiot boy, Who sits in the sun, and twirls a bough about, His weak eyes seeth'd in most unmeaning tears. And so he sits, swaying his cone-like head, And, staring at his bough from morn to sun-set, See-saws his voice in inarticulate noises. Ordonio. 'Tis well! and now for this same wizard's lair. Isidore. Some three strides up the hill, a mountain ash Stretches its lower boughs and scarlet clusters O'er the old thatch.

Ordonio I shall not fail to find it.

[Exeunt Ordonio and Isidore.

SCENE II.

The inside of a Cottage, around which flowers and plants of various kinds are seen. Discovers Alvar, Zulimez and Alhadra, as on the point of leaving.

Aught evil or ignoble never can I Suspect of thee! If what thou seem'st thou art, The oppressed brethren of thy blood have need Of such a leader.

Alvar. Nobly minded woman!
Long time against oppression have I fought,
And for the native liberty of faith
Have bled and suffered bonds. Of this be certain:
Time, as he courses onward, still unrolls
The volume of concealment. In the future,
As in the optician's glassy cylinder,
The indistinguishable blots and colours
Of the dim past collect and shape themselves,
Upstarting in their own completed image
To scare or to reward.

I sought the guilty, And what I sought I found: but ere the spear Flew from my hand, there rose an angel form Betwixt me and my aim. With baffled purpose To the Avenger I leave Vengeance, and depart!

Whate'er betide, if aught my arm may aid, Or power protect, my word is pledged to thee: For many are thy wrongs, and thy soul noble. Once more, farewell.

[Exit Alhadra.

Yes, to the Belgic states
We will return. These robes, this stained complexion,
Akin to falsehood, weigh upon my spirit.
Whate'er befall us, the heroic Maurice
Will grant us an asylum, in remembrance
Of our past services.

Zulimez. And all the wealth, power, influence which is yours, You let a murderer hold?

Alvar. O faithful Zulimez!
That my return involved Ordonio's death,
I trust, would give me an unmingled pang,
Yet bearable:—but when I see my father
Strewing his scant grey hairs, e'en on the ground,
Which soon must be his grave, and my Teresa—
Her husband proved a murderer, and her infants
His infants—poor Teresa!—all would perish,
All perish—all; and I (nay bear with me)
Could not survive the complicated ruin!

Zulimez. Nay now! I have distress'd you—you well know, I ne'er will quit your fortunes. True, 'tis tiresome: You are a painter, one of many fancies! You can call up past deeds, and make them live On the blank canvass! and each little herb, That grows on mountain bleak, or tangled forest, You have learnt to name—

Hark! heard you not some footsteps?

Alvar. What if it were my brother coming onwards? I sent a most mysterious message to him.

Enter Ordonio.

Alvar. It is he!

Ordonio (to himself as he enters). If I distinguished right her gait and stature, It was the Moorish woman, Isidore's wife,
That passed me as I entered. A lit taper,
In the night air, doth not more naturally
Attract the night flies round it, than a conjuror
Draws round him the whole female neighbourhood.

[Addressing Alvar.

You know my name, I guess, if not my person.

	ACT THE THIRD
	Scene the First. —A hall of armory, with an altar in the part farthest from the stage.
	Velez, Osorio, Maria.
And	faria. Lord Velez! you have ask'd my presence here, I submit; but (Heaven bear witness for me!) heart approves it not! 'tis mockery!
	[Here Albert enters in a sorcerer's robe.
On	faria (to Albert). Stranger! I mourn and blush to see you here such employments! With far other thoughts it you.	5
0	sorio (aside). Ha! he has been tampering with her!
Tha I wi	lbert. O high-soul'd maiden, and more dear to me n suits the stranger's name, I swear to thee, ll uncover all concealed things! bt, but decide not! Stand from off the altar.	10
	[Here a strain of music is heard from behind the scenes, from an instrument of glass or steel—the harmonica or Celestina stop, or Clagget's metallic organ.
	lbert. With no irreverent voice or uncouth charm ll up the departed. Soul of Albert!

Hear our soft suit, and heed my milder spells: So may the gates of Paradise unbarr'd

[550]

[551]

Cease thy swift toils, since haply thou art one Of that innumerable company, Who in broad circle, lovelier than the rainbow, Girdle this round earth in a dizzy motion,	15
With noise too vast and constant to be heard— Fitliest unheard! For, O ye numberless And rapid travellers! what ear unstun'd, What sense unmadden'd, might bear up against	20
The rushing of your congregated wings? Even now your living wheel turns o'er my head! Ye, as ye pass, toss high the desart sands, That roar and whiten, like a burst of waters, A sweet appearance, but a dread illusion, To the parch'd caravan that roams by night.	25
And ye build up on the becalmed waves That whirling pillar, which from earth to heaven Stands vast, and moves in blackness. Ye too split The ice-mount, and with fragments many and huge, Tempest the new-thaw'd sea, whose sudden gulphs	30
Suck in, perchance, some Lapland wizard's skiff. Then round and round the whirlpool's marge ye dance, Till from the blue-swoln corse the soul toils out, And joins your mighty army. Soul of Albert!	35
Hear the mild spell and tempt no blacker charm. By sighs unquiet and the sickly pang Of an half dead yet still undying hope, Pass visible before our mortal sense; So shall the Church's cleansing rites be thine, Her knells and masses that redeem the dead.	40
THE SONG
(Sung behind the scenes, accompanied by the same instrument as	before.)
Hear, sweet spirit! hear the spell Lest a blacker charm compel! So shall the midnight breezes swell With thy deep long-lingering knell. And at evening evermore	45
In a chapel on the shore Shall the chanters sad and saintly, Yellow tapers burning faintly, Doleful masses chant for thee, Miserere, Domine!	50
Hark! the cadence dies away On the quiet moonlight sea, The boatmen rest their oars, and say, Miserere, Domine!	55 [A long pause.
Osorio. This was too melancholy, father!
Velez. Nay! My Albert lov'd sad music from a child. Once he was lost; and after weary search We found him in an open place of the wood, To which spot he had follow'd a blind boy Who breathed into a pipe of sycamore	60
Some strangely-moving notes, and these, he said, Were taught him in a dream; him we first saw Stretch'd on the broad top of a sunny heath-bank; And, lower down, poor Albert fast asleep, His head upon the blind boy's dog—it pleased me	65
To mark, how he had fasten'd round the pipe A silver toy, his grandmother had given him. Methinks I see him now, as he then look'd. His infant dress was grown too short for him, Yet still he wore it.	70
Albert (aside). My tears must not flow— I must not clasp his knees, and cry, my father!
Osorio. The innocent obey nor charm nor spell. My brother is in heaven. Thou sainted spirit Burst on our sight, a passing visitant! Once more to hear thy voice, once more to see thee, O 'twere a joy to me.	75

[552]

[553]

	Albert (abruptly). A joy to thee! What if thou heard'st him now? What if his spirit Re-enter'd its cold corse, and came upon thee, With many a stab from many a murderer's poniard?	80
	What if, his steadfast eye still beaming pity And brother's love, he turn'd his head aside, Lest he should look at thee, and with one look Hurl thee beyond all power of penitence?	85
	Velez. These are unholy fancies!
	Osorio (struggling with his feelings). Yes, my father! He is in heaven!
	Albert (still to Osorio). But what if this same brother Had lived even so, that at his dying hour The name of heaven would have convuls'd his face More than the death-pang?	90
	Maria. Idly-prating man! He was most virtuous.
	Albert (still to Osorio). What if his very virtues Had pamper'd his swoln heart, and made him proud? And what if pride had duped him into guilt, Yet still he stalk'd, a self-created God, Not very bold, but excellently cunning; And one that at his mother's looking-glass, Would force his features to a frowning sternness?	95
[554]	Young lord! I tell thee, that there are such beings,— Yea, and it gives fierce merriment to the damn'd, To see these most proud men, that loathe mankind, At every stir and buz of coward conscience, Trick, cant, and lie, most whining hypocrites! Away! away! Now let me hear more music.	100
	[Music as before.
	Albert. The spell is mutter'd—come, thou wandering shape, Who own'st no master in an eye of flesh, Whate'er be this man's doom, fair be it or foul, If he be dead, come quick, and bring with thee That which he grasp'd in death; and if he lives, Some token of his obscure perilous life. [The whole orchestra crashes into one chorus.	105 110
	Wandering demon! hear the spell Lest a blacker charm compel!
	[A thunder-clap. The incense on the altar takes fire suddenly.
[555]	Maria. This is some trick—I know, it is a trick. Yet my weak fancy, and these bodily creepings, Would fain give substance to the shadow. [555:1]
	Velez (advancing to the altar). Hah! A picture!	115
	Maria. O God! my picture?
	Albert (gazing at Maria with wild impatient distressfulness). Pale—pale—deadly pale!
	Maria. He grasp'd it when he died.
	[She swoons. Albert rushes to her and supports her.
	Albert. My love! my wife! Pale—pale, and cold! My love! my wife! Maria!
	[Velez is at the altar. Osorio remains near him in a state of stupor.
	Osorio (rousing himself). Where am I? 'Twas a lazy chilliness.	120
	Velez (takes and conceals the picture in his robe). This way, my son! She must not see this picture. Go, call the attendants! Life will soon ebb back!
	[Velez and Osorio leave the stage.

FOOTNOTES:

[555:1] In MS. II this speech is crossed out, and on the blank page opposite the following is written in Coleridge's hand:—

'Instead of Maria's portrait, Albert places on the altar a small picture of his attempted assassination. The scene is not wholly without poetical merit, but it is miserably undramatic, or rather untragic. A scene of magic is introduced in which no single person on the stage has the least faith—all, though in different ways, think or know it to be a trick—consequently, &c.' P. W., 1893, p. 494, Editor's Note.

In MS. III the following stage-direction is written (in S. T. C.'s handwriting) on the page opposite to lines 113-15:—

'Albert has placed on the altar a small picture representing the attempt to assassinate him, instead of the portrait of Maria which Osorio had given him.'

[556:1] In MS. II Coleridge has written opposite this:—'Velez supposes the picture is an innocent contrivance of Osorio's to remove Maria's scruples: Osorio, that it is the portrait of Maria which he had himself given the supposed Wizard.' P. W., 1893, p. 495, Editors Note.

In MS. III Coleridge wrote on the opposite page:—'Velez supposes the picture which represents the attempt to assassinate Albert, to have been a mere invention contrived by Osorio with the most innocent intentions. Osorio supposes it of course, to be the portrait of Maria which he had restored to Albert!'

- [556:2] The transcriber of MS. I had here written 'superstitious', which is marked through with ink, and 'serious' is substituted, in Coleridge's own hand. In MS. II 'superstitious' is left undisturbed. P. W., 1893, p. 495, Editor's Note. In MS. III 'serious' is erased and 'superstitious' is superscribed.
- [558:1] In MS. II Coleridge has written opposite this:—'Osorio immediately supposes that this wizard whom Ferdinand had recommended to him, was in truth, an accomplice of Ferdinand, to whom the whole secret had been betrayed.' P. W., 1893, p. 496, Editor's Note.
- [559:1] Opposite the passage in MS. II the following is written in the transcriber's hand:—

Ce malheur, dites-vous, est le bien d'un autre être—
De mon corps tout sanglant, mille insectes vont naître.
Quand la mort met le comble aux maux que j'ai souffert,
Le beau soulagement d'être mangé de vers!
Je ne suis du grand TOUT qu'une faible partie—
Oui; mais les animaux condamnés à la vie
Sous les êtres sentants nés sous la mème loi
Vivent dans la douleur, et meurent comme moi.

ACT III.

Scene 1.—A Hall of armory, with an altar at the back of the stage. Soft music from an instrument of glass or steel.

Valdez, Ordonio, and Alvar in a Sorcerer's robe, are discovered.

Ord. This was too melancholy, father.

Val.

Nay,
My Alvar lov'd sad music from a child.
Once he was lost; and after weary search
We found him in an open place in [of Osor.] the wood,
To which spot he had followed a blind boy,
Who breath'd into a pipe of sycamore
Some strangely-moving notes: and these, he said,
Were taught him in a dream. Him we first saw
Stretch'd on the broad top of a sunny heath-bank;
And lower down poor Alvar, fast asleep,
His head upon the blind boy's dog. It pleas'd me
To mark how he had fasten'd round the pipe

A silver toy his grandmother had Osor. grandam had late given him.

Methinks I see him now as he then look'd—

His infant dress was grown too short for him, Osor. Even so!—He had outgrown his infant dress, Yet still he wore it.

The remainder of Act III of Osorio was rewritten, much was omitted, much added, and the 'dramatic ordonnance' of this part of the play was remodelled on a different plan, but the following lines 174-82, 195-202, 210-31 and 246-7 were included, with certain alterations, in Remorse. ACT THE FOURTH

SCENE THE FIRST.—A cavern, dark except where a gleam of moonlight is seen on one side of the further end of it, supposed to be cast on it from a cranny [crevice Remorse] in a part of the cavern out of sight.

[Ferdinand alone, an extinguished torch in his hand.

Ferdinand. Drip! drip! drip!—in such a place as this

It has nothing else to do but drip! drip! drip!

I wish it had not dripp'd upon my torch.

Faith 'twas a moving letter—very moving!

His life in danger—no place safe but this.

'Twas his turn now to talk of gratitude!

And yet—but no! there can't be such a villain.

It cannot be!

Thanks to that little cranny

Which lets the moonlight in! I'll go and sit by it.

To peep at a tree, or see a he-goat's beard,

Or hear a cow or two breathe loud in their sleep,

'Twere better than this dreary noise of water-drops!

[He goes out of sight, opposite to the patch of moonlight, [and returns. Remorse] returns after a minute's elapse in an ecstasy of fear.

A hellish pit! O God—'tis like my night-mair! I was just in!—and those damn'd fingers of ice

Which clutch'd my hair up! Ha! what's that? it moved!

[Ferdinand stands [motionless MS. III erased] staring at another recess in the cavern. In the mean time Osorio enters with a torch and hollas to him [halloes to Isidore Remorse].

Ferdinand. I swear, I saw a something moving there! The moonshine came and went, like a flash of lightning. I swear, I saw it move!

[Osorio goes into the recess, then returns, and with great scorn.

Osorio. A jutting clay-stone
Drips on the long lank weed that grows beneath;
And the weed nods and drips.

Ferdinand. Except in self-defence.

Osorio. Why that's my case: and yet 'tis still unpleasant. [567] At least I find it so! But you, perhaps, Have stronger nerves? Ferdinand. Something doth trouble you. How can I serve you? By the life you gave me, 70 By all that makes that life of value to me, My wife, my babes, my honour, I swear to you, Name it, and I will toil to do the thing, If it be innocent! But this, my lord! Is not a place where you could perpetrate, 75 No, nor propose a wicked thing. The darkness (When ten yards off, we know, 'tis chearful moonlight) Collects the guilt and crowds it round the heart. It must be innocent. Osorio. Thyself be judge. [Osorio walks round the cavern—then looking round it. One of our family knew this place well. 80 Ferdinand. Who? when? my lord. Osorio. What boots it who or when? Hang up the torch. I'll tell his tale to thee. [They hang [up] their torches in some shelf of [on some ridge in Remorse] the cavern. Osorio. He was a man different from other men, And he despised them, yet revered himself. [567:1] Ferdinand. What? he was mad? All men seem'd mad to him, 85 Osorio. [568] Their actions noisome folly, and their talk-A goose's gabble was more musical. Nature had made him for some other planet, And press'd his soul into a human shape By accident or malice. In this world 90 He found no fit companion! Ferdinand. Ah, poor wretch! Madmen are mostly proud. Osorio. He walk'd alone, And phantasies, unsought for, troubled him. Something within would still be shadowing out All possibilities, and with these shadows 95 His mind held dalliance. Once, as so it happen'd, A fancy cross'd him wilder than the rest: To this in moody murmur, and low voice, He yielded utterance as some talk in sleep. The man who heard him-Why didst thou look round? 100 Ferdinand. I have a prattler three years old, my lord! In truth he is my darling. As I went From forth my door, he made a moan in sleep-But I am talking idly—pray go on! And what did this man? 105 With his human hand He gave a being and reality To that wild fancy of a possible thing. Well it was done. [Then very wildly. Why babblest thou of guilt? The deed was done, and it pass'd fairly off. 110 And he, whose tale I tell thee—dost thou listen?

Osorio. Where was I?

I'd listen to you with an eager eye,

Tho' you began this cloudy tale at midnight. But I do listen—pray proceed, my lord!

Ferdinand. I would, my lord, you were by my fireside!

Pertainand	Ferdinand.	He of whom you tell the tale—	115

Foster-Mother. Now blessings on the man, whoe'er he be, That join'd your names with mine! O my sweet lady, As often as I think of those dear times When you two little ones would stand at eve, On each side of my chair, and make me learn All you had learnt in the day; and how to talk In gentle phrase, then bid me sing to you, 'Tis more like heaven to come, that what has been!	160
Maria. O my dear mother! this strange man has left me Wilder'd with wilder fancies than yon moon Breeds in the love-sick maid—who gazes at it Till lost in inward vision, with wet eye She gazes idly! But that entrance, mother!	165
Foster-Mother. Can no one hear? It is a perilous tale!	170
Maria. No one.
Foster-Mother. My husband's father told it me, Poor old Leoni. Angels rest his soul! He was a woodman, and could fell and saw
With lusty arm. You know that huge round beam Which props the hanging wall of the old chapel? Beneath that tree, while yet it was a tree, He found a baby wrapt in mosses, lined With thistle-beards, and such small locks of wool	175
As hang on brambles. Well, he brought him home, And rear'd him at the then Lord Velez' cost. And so the babe grew up a pretty boy.	180
A pretty boy, but most unteachable— And never learnt a prayer, nor told a bead, But knew the names of birds, and mock'd their notes,
And whistled, as he were a bird himself. And all the autumn 'twas his only play To get the seeds of wild flowers, and to plant them With earth and water on the stumps of trees.	185
A friar who gather'd simples in the wood, A grey-hair'd man—he loved this little boy, The boy loved him—and, when the friar taught him, He soon could write with the pen; and from that time Lived chiefly at the convent or the castle.	190
So he became a very learned youth. But O! poor wretch—he read, and read, Till his brain turn'd—and ere his twentieth year, He had unlawful thoughts of many things. And though he pray'd, he never loved to pray	195
With holy men, nor in a holy place. But yet his speech, it was so soft and sweet, The late Lord Velez ne'er was wearied with him, And once as by the north side of the chapel They stood together, chain'd in deep discourse,	200
The earth heav'd under them with such a groan, That the wall totter'd, and had well-nigh fall'n Right on their heads. My lord was sorely frighten'd; A fever seiz'd him; and he made confession	205
Of all the heretical and lawless talk Which brought this judgment: so the youth was seiz'd And cast into that hole. My husband's father Sobb'd like a child—it almost broke his heart. And once as he was working in the cellar,	210
He heard a voice distinctly; 'twas the youth's, Who sung a doleful song about green fields, How sweet it were on lake or wild savannah To hunt for food, and be a naked man, And wander up and down at liberty. He always doted on the youth, and now	215
His love grew desperate; and defying death, He made that cunning entrance I described: And the young man escaped.	220
Maria. 'Tis a sweet tale: Such as would lull a list'ning child to sleep, His rosy face besoil'd with unwiped tears. And what became of him?
Foster-Mother. He went on shipboard With those bold voyagers, who made discovery	225

[573]

[574]	Of golden lands; Leoni's younger brother Went likewise, and when he return'd to Spain, He told Leoni that the poor mad youth, Soon after they arrived in that new world, In spite of his dissuasion seized a boat, And all alone set sail by silent moonlight, Up a great river, great as any sea, And ne'er was heard of more; but 'tis supposed He liv'd and died among the savage men.		230
	Enter Velez.
	Velez. Still sad, Maria? This same wizard haunts	you.	235
	Maria. O Christ! the tortures that hang o'er his he If ye betray him to these holy brethren!	ead,
	Velez (with a kind of sneer). A portly man, and ele In truth, I shall not wonder if you mourn That their rude grasp should seize on such a victim		240
	Maria. The horror of their ghastly punishments Doth so o'ertop the height of sympathy, That I should feel too little for mine enemy— Ah! far too little—if 'twere possible, I could feel more, even tho' my child or husband Were doom'd to suffer them! That such things are—		245
	Velez. Hush! thoughtless woman!
	Maria. Nay—it wakes within r More than a woman's spirit.	ne
	Velez (angrily). No more of this—I can endure no more.
	Foster-Mother. My honour'd master! Lord Albert used to talk so.
	Maria. Yes! my mother! These are my Albert's lessons, and I con them With more delight than, in my fondest hour, I bend me o'er his portrait.		250
	Velez (to the Foster-Mother). My good woman, You may retire.
[575]	Velez. We have mourn'd for Albert. Have I no living son?	[$Exit\ the$ Foster-Mother.
	Maria. Speak not of him! That low imposture—my heart sickens at it, If it be madness, must I wed a madman? And if not madness, there is mystery, And guilt doth lurk behind it!		255
	Valdez. Is this well?
	Maria. Yes! it is truth. Saw you his countenance? How rage, remorse, and scorn, and stupid fear, Displac'd each other with swift interchanges? If this were all assumed, as you believe,		260
	He must needs be a most consummate actor; And hath so vast a power to deceive me, I never could be safe. And why assume The semblance of such execrable feelings?		265
[576]	Velez. Ungrateful woman! I have tried to stifle An old man's passion! Was it not enough That thou hast made my son a restless man, Banish'd his health and half-unhinged his reason, But that thou wilt insult him with suspicion, And toil to blast his honour? I am old—A comfortless old man! Thou shalt not stay Beneath my roof!		270
]	Francesco enters and stands listening.
	Velez. Repent and marry him—Or to the convent.		275

Francesco (muttering). Good! good! very good!
Maria. Nay, grant me some small pittance of my fortune, And I will live a solitary woman, Or my poor foster-mother and her grandsons May be my household.
Francesco (advancing). I abhor a listener; But you spoke so, I could not choose but hear you. I pray, my lord! will you embolden me To ask you why this lady doth prefer To live in lonely sort, without a friend Or fit companion?		280
Velez. Bid her answer you.		285
Maria. Nature will be my friend and fit companion.	[Turns off from them.
O Albert! Albert! that they could return, Those blessed days, that imitated heaven! When we two wont to walk at evening-tide; When we saw nought but beauty; when we heard	Turns on from them.	290
The voice of that Almighty One, who lov'd us, In every gale that breath'd, and wave that murmur'd! O we have listen'd, even till high-wrought pleasure Hath half-assumed the countenance of grief,
And the deep sigh seem'd to heave up a weight Of bliss, that press'd too heavy on the heart.		295
Francesco. But in the convent, lady, you would have Such aids as might preserve you from perdition. There you might dwell.
Maria. With tame and credulous faith, Mad melancholy, antic merriment, Leanness, disquietude, and secret pangs! O God! it is a horrid thing to know That each pale wretch, who sits and drops her beads Had once a mind, which might have given her wings Such as the angels wear!		300
Francesco (stifling his rage). Where is your son, my lord?		305
Velez. I have not seen him, father, since he left you.
Francesco. His lordship's generous nature hath deceiv'd him! That Ferdinand (or if not he his wife) I have fresh evidence—are infidels. We are not safe until they are rooted out.		310
Maria. Thou man, who call'st thyself the minister Of Him whose law was love unutterable! Why is thy soul so parch'd with cruelty, That still thou thirstest for thy brother's blood?
Velez (rapidly). Father! I have long suspected it—her brain—Heed it not, father!		315
Francesco. Nay—but I must heed it.
Maria. Thou miserable man! I fear thee not, Nor prize a life which soon may weary me. Bear witness, Heav'n! I neither scorn nor hate him— But O! 'tis wearisome to mourn for evils, Still mourn, and have no power to remedy!	[Exit Maria.	320
Francesco. My lord! I shall presume to wait on you To-morrow early.
Velez. Be it so, good father!	[Exit Francesco.
Velez (alone). I do want solace, but not such as thine! The moon is high in heaven, and my eyes ache, But not with sleep. Well—it is ever so. A child, a child is born! and the fond heart Dances! and yet the childless are most happy.		325

FOOTNOTES:

- [564:1] The square brackets (which appear in both MSS.) seem to indicate that these words were an 'aside'. P. W. 1893, p. 499. Editor's Note.
- [565:1] Against this passage Coleridge has written in MS. II:—'This will be held by many for a mere Tragedy-dream—by many who have never given themselves the trouble to ask themselves from what grounds dreams pleased in Tragedy, and wherefore they have become so common. I believe, however, that in the present case, the whole is here psychologically true and accurate. Prophetical dreams are things of nature, and explicable by that law of the mind in which where dim ideas are connected with vivid feelings, Perception and Imagination insinuate themselves and mix with the forms of Recollection, till the Present appears to exactly correspond with the Past. Whatever is partially like, the Imagination will gradually represent as wholly like—a law of our nature which, when it is perfectly understood, woe to the great city Babylon—to all the superstitions of Men!' P. W., 1893, p.
- [567:1] Against this passage Coleridge writes in MS. II:—'Under the mask of the third person Osorio relates his own story, as in the delusion of self-justification and pride, it appeared to himself—at least as he wished it to appear to himself.' P. W., 1893, p. 499.

'Osorio darkly, and in the feeling of self-justification, tells what he conceives of his own character and actions—speaking of himself in the third person.' MS. III.

[570:1] Against this line Coleridge writes in MS. II:—'Osorio has thrust Ferdinand down the chasm. I think it an important instance how Dreams and Prophecies coöperate to their own completion.' P. W., 1893, p. 501.

You see that crevice there?

My torch extinguished by these water drops,

And marking that the moonlight came from thence,

I stept in to it, meaning to sit there;

But scarcely had I measured twenty paces—

My body bending forward, yea, o'erbalanced

Almost beyond recoil, on the dim brink

Of a hugh chasm I stept. The shadowy moonshine

Filling the void so counterfeited substance,

That my foot hung aslant adown the edge.

Was it my own fear?

Fear too hath its instincts! (And yet such dens as these are wildly told of,

And there are beings that live, yet not for the eye)

An arm of frost above and from behind me

Pluck'd up and snatched me backward. Merciful Heaven!

In vain I urge the tortures that await him: Even Selma, reverend guardian of my childhood, My second mother, shuts her heart against me! Well, I have won from her what most imports The present need, this secret of the dungeon Known only to herself.—A Moor! a Sorcerer! No, I have faith, that nature ne'er permitted Baseness to wear a form so noble. True, I doubt not, that Ordonio had suborned him To act some part in some unholy fraud; As little doubt, that for some unknown purpose He hath baffled his suborner, terror-struck him, And that Ordonio meditates revenge! But my resolve is fixed! myself will rescue him, And learn if haply he knew aught of Alvar.

O that I had indeed the sorcerer's power.—
I would call up before thine eyes the image
Of my betrothed Alvar, of thy first-born!
His own fair countenance, his kingly forehead,
His tender smiles, love's day-dawn on his lips!
That spiritual and almost heavenly light
In his commanding eye—his mien heroic,
Virtue's own native heraldry! to man
Genial, and pleasant to his guardian angel.
Whene'er he gladden'd, how the gladness spread
Wide round him! and when oft with swelling tears,
Flash'd through by indignation, he bewail'd
The wrongs of Belgium's martyr'd patriots,
Oh, what a grief was there—for joy to envy,
Or gaze upon enamour'd!

O my father!
Recall that morning when we knelt together,
And thou didst bless our loves! O even now,
Even now, my sire! to thy mind's eye present him,
As at that moment he rose up before thee,
Stately, with beaming look! Place, place beside him
Ordonio's dark perturbed countenance!
Then bid me (Oh thou could'st not) bid me turn
From him, the joy, the triumph of our kind!
To take in exchange that brooding man, who never Lifts up his eye from the earth, unless to scowl.

That watch around my gates, should intercept him;
But he conjures me, that without delay
I hasten to him—for my own sake entreats me
To guard from danger him I hold imprison'd—
He will reveal a secret, the joy of which Will even outweigh the sorrow.'—Why what can this be?
Perchance it is some Moorish stratagem,
To have in me a hostage for his safety.
Nay, that they dare not! Ho! collect my servants!

[588]	Osorio. Hail, potent wizard! In my gayer mood I pour'd forth a libation to old Pluto; And as I brimm'd the bowl, I thought of thee!
	Albert (in a low voice). I have not summon'd up my heart to give That pang, which I must give thee, son of Velez!	140
	Osorio (with affected levity). Thou hast conspired against my life and honour, Hast trick'd me foully; yet I hate thee not! Why should I hate thee? 	[Waving his hand at Albert. The lesser must needs break!
[590]	Albert. I see thy heart! There is a frightful glitter in thine eye, Which doth betray thee. Crazy-conscienc'd man, This is the gaiety of drunken anguish, Which fain would scoff away the pang of guilt, And quell each human feeling!	150
	Osorio. Feeling! feeling! The death of a man—the breaking of a bubble. 'Tis true, I cannot sob for such misfortunes! But faintness, cold, and hunger—curses on me If willingly I e'er inflicted them! Come, share the beverage—this chill place demands it. Friendship and wine! [Osorio proffers him the goblet.	155
	Albert. Yon insect on the wall, Which moves this way and that its hundred legs, Were it a toy of mere mechanic craft, It were an infinitely curious thing!	160
	But it has life, Osorio! life and thought; And by the power of its miraculous will Wields all the complex movements of its frame Unerringly, to pleasurable ends! Saw I that insect on this goblet's brink, I would remove it with an eager terror.	165
	Osorio. What meanest thou?
	Albert. There's poison in the wine.	170
	Osorio. Thou hast guess'd well. There's poison in the wine. Shall we throw dice, which of us two shall drink it? For one of us must die!
	Albert. Whom dost thou think me?
	Osorio. The accomplice and sworn friend of Ferdinand.
	Albert. Ferdinand! Ferdinand! 'tis a name I know not.	175
[591]	Osorio. Good! good! that lie! by Heaven! it has restor'd me. Now I am thy master! Villain, thou shalt drink it, Or die a bitterer death.
	Albert. What strange solution Hast thou found out to satisfy thy fears, And drug them to unnatural sleep? [Albert takes the goblet, and with a sigh throws it on the ground. My master!	180
	Osorio. Thou mountebank!
	Albert. Mountebank and villain! What then art thou? For shame, put up thy sword! What boots a weapon in a wither'd arm? I fix mine eye upon thee, and thou tremblest! I speak—and fear and wonder crush thy rage, And turn it to a motionless distraction! Thou blind self-worshipper! thy pride, thy cunning, Thy faith in universal villainy, Thy shallow sophisms, thy pretended scorn	185

For all thy human brethren—out upon them! What have they done for thee? Have they given thee peace? Cured thee of starting in thy sleep? or made The darkness pleasant, when thou wakest at midnight?	190
Art happy when alone? can'st walk by thyself With even step, and quiet cheerfulness? Yet, yet thou mayst be saved.	195
Osorio (stupidly reiterating the word). Saved? saved?
Albert. One pang— Could I call up one pang of true remorse!
Osorio. He told me of the babe, that prattled to him, His fatherless little ones! Remorse! remorse! Where gott'st thou that fool's word? Curse on remorse! Can it give up the dead, or recompact A mangled body—mangled, dash'd to atoms! Not all the blessings of an host of angels Can blow away a desolate widow's curse; And tho' thou spill thy heart's blood for atonement, It will not weigh against an orphan's tear.	200 205
Albert (almost overcome by his feelings). But Albert——
Osorio. Even thee! and yet, I pray thee, speak it out. Still Albert! Albert! Howl it in mine ear! Heap it, like coals of fire, upon my heart! And shoot it hissing through my brain!	210
Albert. Alas— That day, when thou didst leap from off the rock Into the waves, and grasp'd thy sinking brother, And bore him to the strand, then, son of Velez! How sweet and musical the name of Albert! Then, then, Osorio! he was dear to thee, And thou wert dear to him. Heaven only knows How very dear thou wert! Why didst thou hate him? O Heaven! how he would fall upon thy neck, And weep forgiveness!	215
Osorio. Spirit of the dead! Methinks I know thee! Ha!—my brain turns wild At its own dreams—off—off, fantastic shadow!	220
Albert (seizing his hand). I fain would tell thee what I am, but dare not!
Osorio (retiring from him). Cheat, villain, traitor! whatsoe'er thou be I fear thee, man!
[He starts, and stands in the attitude of listening. And is this too my madness?	225
Albert. It is the step of one that treads in fear Seeking to cheat the echo.
Osorio. It approaches— This nook shall hide me.
[Maria enters from a plank which slips to and fro.
Maria. I have put aside The customs and the terrors of a woman, To work out thy escape. Stranger! begone, And only tell me what thou know'st of Albert.	230
[Albert takes her portrait from his neck, and gives it her with unutterable tenderness.
Albert. Maria! my Maria!
Maria. Do not mock me. This is my face—and thou—ha! who art thou? Nay, I will call thee Albert!
[She falls upon his neck. Osorio leaps out from the nook with frantic wildness, and rushes towards Albert with his sword. Maria gapes at him, as one helpless with terror, then leaves Albert, and flings herself upon Osorio, arresting his arm.

Maria. Madman, stop!

[592]

[593]

Albert (with majesty and tenderness). Does then this thin disguise impenetrably Hide Albert from thee? Toil and painful wounds, And long imprisonment in unwholesome dungeons, Have marr'd perhaps all trace and lineament Of what I was! But chiefly, chiefly, brother!	235
My anguish for thy guilt. Spotless Maria, I thought thee guilty too! Osorio, brother! Nay, nay, thou shalt embrace me!	240
Osorio (drawing back and gazing at Albert with a countenance expressive at once of awe and terror). Touch me not! Touch not pollution, Albert!—I will die!
[He attempts to fall on his sword. Albert and Maria struggle with him.
Albert. We will invent some tale to save your honour. Live, live, Osorio!
Maria. You may yet be happy.	245
Osorio (looking at Maria). O horror! Not a thousand years in heaven Could recompose this miserable heart, Or make it capable of one brief joy. Live! live!—why yes! 'Twere well to live with you— For is it fit a villain should be proud? My brother! I will kneel to you, my brother!	250
[Throws himself at Albert's feet. Forgive me, Albert!—Curse me with forgiveness!
Albert. Call back thy soul, my brother! and look round thee. Now is the time for greatness. Think that Heaven——
Maria. O mark his eye! he hears not what you say.	255
Osorio (pointing at vacancy). Yes, mark his eye! there's fascination in it. Thou said'st thou didst not know him. That is he! He comes upon me!
Albert (lifting his eye to heaven). Heal, O heal him, Heaven!
Osorio. Nearer and nearer! And I cannot stir! Will no one hear these stifled groans, and wake me? He would have died to save me, and I kill'd him— A husband and a father!	260
Maria. Some secret poison Drinks up his spirit!
Osorio (fiercely recollecting himself). Let the eternal Justice Prepare my punishment in the obscure world. I will not bear to live—to live! O agony! And be myself alone, my own sore torment!	265
[The doors of the dungeon are burst open with a crash. Alhadra, Maurice, and the band of Morescoes enter.
Alhadra (pointing at Osorio). Seize first that man!
[The Moors press round.
Albert (rushing in among them). Draw thy sword, Maurice, and defend my brother.
[A scuffle, during which they disarm Maurice.
Osorio. Off, ruffians! I have flung away my sword. Woman, my life is thine! to thee I give it. Off! he that touches me with his hand of flesh, I'll rend his limbs asunder! I have strength With this bare arm to scatter you like ashes!	270
Alhadra. My husband——
Osorio. Yes! I murder'd him most foully.
Albert (throws himself on the earth). O horrible!
Alhadra. Why didst thou leave his children? Demon! thou shouldst have sent thy dogs of hell To lap their blood. Then, then, I might have harden'd My soul in misery, and have had comfort.	275

[594]

[595]

I would have stood far off, quiet tho' dark, And bade the race of men raise up a mourning For the deep horror of a desolation Too great to be one soul's particular lot! Brother of Zagri! let me lean upon thee.	280
[Struggling to suppress her anguish. The time is not yet come for woman's anguish— I have not seen his blood. Within an hour Those little ones will crowd around and ask me, Where is our father? I shall curse thee then! Wert thou in heaven, my curse would pluck thee thence!	285
Maria. See—see! he doth repent. I kneel to thee.
Be merciful! [Maria kneels to her. Alhadra regards her face wistfully.
Alhadra. Thou art young and innocent; 'Twere merciful to kill thee! Yet I will not. And for thy sake none of this house shall perish, Save only he.	290
Maria. That aged man, his father!
Alhadra (sternly). Why had he such a son?
[The Moors press on.
Maria (still kneeling, and wild with affright). Yet spare his life! They must not murder him!
Alhadra. And is it then An enviable lot to waste away With inward wounds, and like the spirit of chaos To wander on disquietly thro' the earth, Cursing all lovely things? to let him live— It were a deep revenge!	295
All the band cry out—No mercy! no mercy!	300
[Naomi advances with the sword towards Osorio.
Alhadra. Nay, bear him forth! Why should this innocent maid Behold the ugliness of death?
Osorio (with great majesty). O woman! I have stood silent like a slave ^[596:1] before thee, That I might taste the wormwood and the gall, And satiate this self-accusing spirit With bitterer agonies than death can give.	305
[The Moors gather round him in a crowd, and pass off the stage.
Alhadra. I thank thee, Heaven! thou hast ordain'd it wisely, That still extremes bring their own cure. That point In misery which makes the oppressed man Regardless of his own life, makes him too	310
Lord of the oppressor's! Knew I an hundred men Despairing, but not palsied by despair, This arm should shake the kingdoms of this world;	310
The deep foundations of iniquity Should sink away, earth groaning from beneath them; The strong holds of the cruel men should fall, Their temples and their mountainous towers should fall; Till desolation seem'd a beautiful thing,	315
And all that were and had the spirit of life Sang a new song to him who had gone forth Conquering and still to conquer!	320

I am chill and weary! Yon rude bench of stone, In that dark angle, the sole resting-place! But the self-approving mind is its own light, And Life's best warmth still radiates from the heart Where love sits brooding, and an honest purpose.

Enter Teresa.

[Retires out of sight.

Corr. in MS. III, Remorse.

Stage-direction affixed to 136 and 136-9 erased in MS. III: om. Remorse.

Between 136 and 137:

I am chill and weary, &c. . . . honest purpose.

Enter Teresa with a taper.

Teresa. It has chilled my very life—my own voice scares me; Yet when I hear it not I seem to lose
The substance of my being—my strongest grasp
Sends inwards but weak witness that I am.
I seek to cheat the echo.—How the half sounds
Blend with this strangled light! Is he not here—

[Looking round.

O for one human face here—but to see One human face here to sustain me.—Courage! It is but my own fear! The life within me, It sinks and wavers like this cone of flame, Beyond which I scarce dare look onward! Oh! If I faint? If this inhuman den should be At once my death-bed and my burial vault?

[Faintly screams as Alvar emerges from the recess.

Alvar (rushes towards her, and catches her as she is falling). O gracious heaven! it is, it is Teresa!

Shall I reveal myself? The sudden shock Of rapture will blow out this spark of life, And joy complete what terror has begun. O ye impetuous beatings here, be still! Teresa, best beloved! pale, pale, and cold! Her pulse doth flutter! Teresa! my Teresa!

Teresa (recovering). I heard a voice; but often in my dreams I hear that voice! and wake and try—and try—To hear it waking! but I never could—And 'tis so now—even so! Well! he is dead—Murdered perhaps! And I am faint, and feel As if it were no painful thing to die!

Alvar. Believe it not, sweet maid! Believe it not, Beloved woman! 'Twas a low imposture Framed by a guilty wretch.

Teresa. Ha! Who art thou?

Alvar. Suborned by his brother-

Teresa. Didst thou murder him? And dost thou now repent? Poor troubled man, I do forgive thee, and may Heaven forgive thee!

Alvar. Ordonio-he--
                               If thou didst murder him-
       Teresa.
     His spirit ever at the throne of God
     Asks mercy for thee: prays for mercy for thee,
     With tears in Heaven!
       Alvar.
                        Alvar was not murdered.
     Be calm! be calm, sweet maid!
       Teresa. Nay, nay, but tell me!
                                                                             [A pause.
                                O 'tis lost again!
     This dull confused pain-
                                                                              [A pause.
                           Mysterious man!
     Methinks I can not fear thee: for thine eye
     Doth swim with love and pity-Well! Ordonio-
     Oh my foreboding heart! And he suborned thee,
     And thou didst spare his life? Blessings shower on thee,
     As many as the drops twice counted o'er
     In the fond faithful heart of his Teresa!
       Alvar. I can endure no more. The Moorish sorcerer
     Exists but in the stain upon his face.
     That picture-
       Teresa.
                      Ha! speak on!
       Alvar.
                                  Beloved Teresa!
     It told but half the truth. O let this portrait
     Tell all—that Alvar lives—that he is here!
     Thy much deceived but ever faithful Alvar.
                                    [Takes her portrait from his neck, and gives it her.
       Teresa (receiving the portrait). The same—it is the same. Ah! Who art thou?
     Nay, I will call thee, Alvar!

                             O joy unutterable!
     But hark! a sound as of removing bars
     At the dungeon's outer door. A brief, brief while Conceal thyself, my love! It is Ordonio.
     For the honour of our race, for our dear father;
     O for himself too (he is still my brother)
     Let me recall him to his nobler nature,
     That he may wake as from a dream of murder!
     O let me reconcile him to himself,
     Open the sacred source of penitent tears,
     And be once more his own beloved Alvar.
       Teresa. O my all virtuous love! I fear to leave thee
     With that obdurate man.
                          Thou dost not leave me!
     But a brief while retire into the darkness:
     O that my joy could spread its sunshine round thee!
       Teresa. The sound of thy voice shall be my music!
     Alvar! my Alvar! am I sure I hold thee?
     Is it no dream? thee in my arms, my Alvar!
                                                                                  [Exit.

THE PICCOLOMINI [598:1]

OR, THE FIRST PART OF WALLENSTEIN

A DRAMA

TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN OF SCHILLER

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

It was my intention to have prefixed a Life of Wallenstein to this translation; but I found that it must either have occupied a space wholly disproportionate to the nature of the publication, or have been merely a meagre catalogue of events narrated not more fully than they already are in the Play itself. The recent translation, likewise, of Schiller's History of the Thirty Years' War diminished the motives thereto. In the translation I endeavoured to render my Author literally wherever I was not prevented by absolute differences of idiom; but I am conscious that in two or three short passages I have been guilty of dilating the original; and, from anxiety to give the full meaning, have weakened the force. In the metre I have availed myself of no other liberties than those which Schiller had permitted to himself, except the occasional breaking-up of the line by the substitution of a trochee for an iambus; of which liberty, so frequent in our tragedies, I find no instance in these dramas.

S. T. Coleridge.

FOOTNOTES:

[598:1] First published in a single octavo volume, 1800: included in 1828, 1829, 1834, and in Dramatic Works (one vol. 8vo) 1852. The Piccolomini and the Death of Wallenstein were translated from MS. copies which had been acquired by the Messrs. Longman. The MS. copy of the original of the Death of Wallenstein is in the possession of Mrs. Alexander Gillman. The MS. of the copy of the original of the Piccolomini was at one time in the possession of Mr. Henry R. Mark of 17 Highbury Crescent. A note in Schiller's handwriting, dated 'Jena, 30. September 1799', attesting the genuineness of the copies, is attached to either play. The MS. copy of Wallenstein's Camp ('Wallenstein's Lager'), which Coleridge did not attempt to translate, is not forthcoming. See two articles by Ferdinand Freiligrath, published in the Athenæum, July 15 and August 31, 1861. See, too, Die Wallensteinübersetzung von Samuel T. Coleridge und ihr Deutsches Original . . . vorgelegt von Hans Roscher. Borna-Leipzig, 1905. A copy of the translation which Macready marked for acting is in the Forster Library, which forms part of the Victoria and Albert Museum at South Kensington. See note by J. Dykes Campbell, P. W., 1893, p. 649. An annotated copy (in Coleridge's handwriting) of the translation of the Piccolomini and the Death of Wallenstein, presented by Mr. Shadworth Hodgson, is in the Library of Rugby School [MS. R.]. The MS. contents of this volume are now published for the first time. Coleridge began his translation of the two plays at No. 21 Buckingham Street, Strand, in December, 1799, and finished the 'last sheet' at Town End, Grasmere, April 20, 1800.

'These dramas have two grievous faults: they are prolix in the particular parts and slow in the general movement. But they have passion, distinct and diversified character, and they abound in passages of great moral and poetic beauty.' S. T. Coleridge.

'The defects of these dramas are all of an instructive character; for tho' not the products of genius, like those of Shakespere, they result from an energetic and thinking mind. (1) The speeches are seldom suited to characters—the characters are truly diversified and distinctly conceived—but we learn them from the actions and from the descriptions given by other characters, or from particular speeches. The brutal Illo repeatedly talks language which belongs to the Countess, &c. (2) Astrology (an undramatic superstition because it inspires no terror, and its foundation of imagination is overbuilt and concealed by its scientific superstructure, with other cause from the imagery, is thus unpopular or swallowed up in more general and pleasing associations, as the Sun and Moon) is made prophetic, and yet treated ludicrously: the author as philosopher is in compleat discord with himself as Historian. This is a most grievous fault. (3) The assassins talk ludicrously. This is a most egregious misimitation of Shakespere-Schiller should not have attempted tragico-comedy, and none but Shakespere has succeeded. It is wonderful, however, that Schiller, who had studied Shakespere, should not have perceived his divine judgment in the management of his assassins, as in Macbeth. They are fearful and almost pitiable Beings—not loathsome, ludicrous miscreants. (4) The character of Thekla = O, the bold Heroine of any novel. Nothing of the Convent, no superstition, nothing of the Daughter of Wallenstein, nothing that her past life is represented by. (5) Wallenstein is a finer psychological than dramatic, and a more dramatic than a tragic character. Shakespere draws strength as in Richard the Third, and even when he blends weakness as in Macbeth-yet it is weakness of a specific kind that leaves the strength in full and fearful energy-but Schiller has drawn weakness imposing on itself the love of power for the sense of strength (a fine conception in itself, but not tragic—at least for the principal character of a long drama).—Hence Wallenstein, with one exception (that of the Regimental Deputation to him in the Second Part) evaporates in mock-mysterious speeches. These are the chief defects, I think. On the other hand, the character of Butler is admirable throughout. Octavio is very grand, and Max, tho' it may be an easy character to draw, for a man of thought and lofty feeling—for a man who possesses all the analoga of genius, is yet so delightful, and its moral influence so grand and salutary, that we must allow it great praise. The childish love-toying with the glove and Aunt Tertsky in the first act should be omitted. Certain whole scenes are masterly, and far above anything since the dramatists of Eliz. & James the first.' Note on fly-leaf of annotated copy (MS. R.).

ACT I

Scene I

An old Gothic Chamber in the Council House at Pilsen, decorated with Colours and other War Insignia.

ILLO with BUTLER and ISOLANI.

Illo. Ye have come late—but ye are come! The distance, Count Isolan, excuses your delay.

Isolani. Add this too, that we come not empty-handed. At Donauwert [600:2] it was reported to us, A Swedish caravan was on its way Transporting a rich cargo of provision, Almost six hundred waggons. This my Croats Plunged down upon and seized, this weighty prize!—— We bring it hither-

Just in time to banquet The illustrious company assembled here.

Butler. 'Tis all alive! a stirring scene here!

Isolani. Av! The very churches are all full of soldiers. And in the Council-house, too, I observe, You're settled, quite at home! Well, well! we soldiers Must shift and suit us in what way we can.

Illo. We have the Colonels here of thirty regiments. You'll find Count Tertsky here, and Tiefenbach, Kolatto, Goetz, Maradas, Hinnersam, The Piccolomini, both son and father You'll meet with many an unexpected greeting From many an old friend and acquaintance. Only Galas is wanting still, and Altringer.

Butler. Expect not Galas.

Illo. How so? Do you know--

Isolani. Max Piccolomini here?—O bring me to him. I see him yet, ('tis now ten years ago, We were engaged with Mansfeld hard by Dessau) I see the youth, in my mind's eye I see him, Leap his black war-horse from the bridge adown, And t'ward his father, then in extreme peril, Beat up against the strong tide of the Elbe. The down was scarce upon his chin! I hear He has made good the promise of his youth, And the full hero now is finished in him.

	Illo. You'll see him yet ere evening. He conducts The Duchess Friedland hither, and the Princess [601:1] From Carnthen. We expect them here at noon.	35
	Butler. Both wife and daughter does the Duke call hither? He crowds in visitants from all sides.
[602]	Isolani. Hm! So much the better! I had framed my mind To hear of nought but warlike circumstance, Of marches, and attacks, and batteries: And lo! the Duke provides, that something too Of gentler sort, and lovely, should be present To feast our eyes.	40 45
	Illo (aside to Butler). And how came you to know That the Count Galas joins us not?
	Butler. Because He importuned me to remain behind.
	Illo. And you?—You hold out firmly? Noble Butler!
	Butler. After the obligation which the Duke Had laid so newly on me——	50
	Illo. I had forgotten A pleasant duty—Major-General, I wish you joy!
	Isolani. What, you mean, of his regiment? I hear, too, that to make the gift still sweeter, The Duke has given him the very same In which he first saw service, and since then, Worked himself, step by step, through each preferment,	55
	From the ranks upwards. And verily, it gives A precedent of hope, a spur of action To the whole corps, if once in their remembrance An old deserving soldier makes his way.	60
	Butler. I am perplexed and doubtful, whether or no I dare accept this your congratulation. The Emperor has not yet confirmed the appointment.	65
	Isolani. Seize it, friend! Seize it! The hand which in that post Placed you, is strong enough to keep you there, Spite of the Emperor and his Ministers!
	Illo. Ay, if we would but so consider it!— If we would all of us consider it so! The Emperor gives us nothing; from the Duke Comes all—whate'er we hope, whate'er we have.	70
[603]	Isolani (to Illo). My noble brother! did I tell you how The Duke will satisfy my creditors? Will be himself my banker for the future, Make me once more a creditable man!— And this is now the third time, think of that! This kingly-minded man has rescued me From absolute ruin, and restored my honour.	75
	Illo. O that his power but kept pace with his wishes! Why, friend! he'd give the whole world to his soldiers. But at Vienna, brother! here's the grievance!— What politic schemes do they not lay to shorten His arm, and, where they can, to clip his pinions. Then these new dainty requisitions! these,	80
	Which this same Questenberg brings hither!— Butler. Ay,
	These requisitions of the Emperor,— I too have heard about them; but I hope The Duke will not draw back a single inch!	90

Illo. Not from his right most surely, unless first —From office!

Butler. Know you aught then? You alarm me.

Isolani (at the same time with Butler, and in a hurrying voice). We should be ruined, every one of us!

Illo. No more!

Yonder I see our worthy friend^[603:1] approaching With the Lieutenant-General, Piccolomini.

Butler. I fear we shall not go hence as we came.

[604]

And menacing the Emperor's displeasure, Unless he took compassion on this wretchedness.
Isolani. Yes, yes, 'tis comprehensible enough, Wherefore with your commission of to-day You were not all too willing to remember Your former one.	40
Questenberg. Why not, Count Isolan? No contradiction sure exists between them. It was the urgent business of that time To snatch Bavaria from her enemy's hand; And my commission of to-day instructs me To free her from her good friends and protectors.	45
Illo. A worthy office! After with our blood We have wrested this Bohemia from the Saxon, To be swept out of it is all our thanks, The sole reward of all our hard-won victories.	50
Questenberg. Unless that wretched land be doomed to suffer Only a change of evils, it must be Freed from the scourge alike of friend and foe.	55
Illo. What? 'Twas a favourable year; the Boors Can answer fresh demands already.
Questenberg. Nay, If you discourse of herds and meadow-grounds—
Isolani. The war maintains the war. Are the Boors ruined, The Emperor gains so many more new soldiers.	60
Questenberg. And is the poorer by even so many subjects.
Isolani. Poh! We are all his subjects.
Questenberg. Yet with a difference, General! The one fill With profitable industry the purse, The others are well skilled to empty it. The sword has made the Emperor poor; the plough Must reinvigorate his resources.	65
Isolani. Sure! Times are not yet so bad. Methinks I see [Examining with his eye the dress and ornaments of Questenberg. Good store of gold that still remains uncoined.
Questenberg. Thank Heaven! that means have been found out to hide Some little from the fingers of the Croats.	70
Illo. There! The Stawata and the Martinitz, On whom the Emperor heaps his gifts and graces, To the heart-burning of all good Bohemians— Those minions of court favour, those court harpies, Who fatten on the wrecks of citizens Driven from their house and home—who reap no harvests Save in the general calamity— Who now, with kingly pomp, insult and mock The desolation of their country—these, Let these, and such as these, support the war, The fatal war, which they alone enkindled!	75 80
Butler. And those state-parasites, who have their feet So constantly beneath the Emperor's table, Who cannot let a benefice fall, but they Snap at it with dog's hunger—they, forsooth, Would pare the soldier's bread, and cross his reckoning!	85
Isolani. My life long will it anger me to think, How when I went to court seven years ago, To see about new horses for our regiment, How from one antechamber to another They dragged me on, and left me by the hour	90
To kick my heels among a crowd of simpering Feast-fattened slaves, as if I had come thither A mendicant suitor for the crumbs of favour That fall beneath their tables. And, at last, Whom should they send me but a Capuchin!	95

[605]

[606]

Straight I began to muster up my sins For absolution—but no such luck for me! This was the man, this Capuchin, with whom I was to treat concerning the army horses: And I was forced at last to quit the field, The business unaccomplished. Afterwards		100
The Duke procured me in three days, what I Could not obtain in thirty at Vienna. Questenberg. Yes, yes! your travelling bills soon found th	eir way to us:	105
Too well I know we have still accounts to settle. Illo. War is a violent trade; one cannot always	J

With due deliberation had selected The smallest out of four-and-twenty evils,

To make the best of a bad thing once past. A bitter and perplexed 'what shall I do?' Is worse to man than worst necessity.
Questenberg. Ay, doubtless, it is true: the Duke does span The troublesome task of choosing.	re us	120
Butler. Yes, the Duke Cares with a father's feelings for his troops; But how the Emperor feels for us, we see.
Questenberg. His cares and feelings all ranks share alike Nor will he offer one up to another.	,	125
Isolani. And therefore thrusts he us into the deserts As beasts of prey, that so he may preserve His dear sheep fattening in his fields at home.
Questenberg. Count, this comparison you make, not I.
Butler. Why, were we all the Court supposes us, 'Twere dangerous, sure, to give us liberty.		130
Questenberg. You have taken liberty—it was not given yo And therefore it becomes an urgent duty To rein it in with curbs.	u.
Octavio. My noble friend, This is no more than a remembrancing That you are now in camp, and among warriors. The soldier's boldness constitutes his freedom.		135
Could he act daringly, unless he dared Talk even so? One runs into the other. The boldness of this worthy officer, Which now has but mistaken in its mark, Preserved, when nought but boldness could preserve it, To the Emperor his capital city, Prague,	[pointing to Butler.	140
In a most formidable mutiny Of the whole garrison. Hah! here they come!	[Military music at a distance.	145
Illo. The sentries are saluting them: this signal Announces the arrival of the Duchess.
Octavio. Then my son Max too has returned. 'Twas he Fetched and attended them from Carnthen hither.		150
Isolani (to Illo). Shall we not go in company to greet them	n?
Illo. Well, let us go.—Ho! Colonel Butler, come.	[To Octavio.
You'll not forget, that yet ere noon we meet The noble Envey at the Conoral's palace

MAX PICCOLOMINI, OCTAVIO PICCOLOMINI, QUESTENBERG.

 $\it Max.$ Ha! there he is himself. Welcome, my father! You are engaged, I see. I'll not disturb you.

Octavio. How, Max? Look closer at this visitor; Attention, Max, an old friend merits—Reverence Belongs of right to the envoy of your sovereign.

Max. Von Questenberg!—Welcome—if you bring with you Aught good to our head quarters.

Questenberg (seizing his hand). Nay, draw not Your hand away, Count Piccolomini! Not on mine own account alone I seized it, 5

	And nothing common will I say therewith.		10
	Octavio—Max Piccolomini! O saviour names, and full of happy omen! Ne'er will her prosperous genius turn from Austria, While two such stars, with blessed influences Beaming protection, shine above her hosts.	[Taking the hands of both.	15
[612]	Max. Heh!—Noble minister! You miss your part. You came not here to act a panegyric. You're sent, I know, to find fault and to scold us—I must not be beforehand with my comrades.
	Octavio. He comes from court, where people are not quite So well contented with the duke, as here.		20
	Max. What now have they contrived to find out in him? That he alone determines for himself What he himself alone doth understand? Well, therein he does right, and will persist in 't.		25
	Heaven never meant him for that passive thing That can be struck and hammered out to suit Another's taste and fancy. He'll not dance To every tune of every minister.
	It goes against his nature—he can't do it. He is possessed by a commanding spirit, And his too is the station of command. And well for us it is so! There exist		30
	Few fit to rule themselves, but few that use Their intellects intelligently.—Then Well for the whole, if there be found a man, Who makes himself what nature destined him,		35
	The pause, the central point to thousand thousands— Stands fixed and stately, like a firm-built column, Where all may press with joy and confidence. Now such a man is Wallenstein; and if Another better suits the court—no other But such a one as he can serve the army.		40
	Questenberg. The army? Doubtless!
	Octavio (aside). Hush! suppress it, friend! Unless some end were answered by the utterance.— Of him there you'll make nothing.		45
	Max. In their distress They call a spirit up, and when he comes, Straight their flesh creeps and quivers, and they dread him More than the ills for which they called him up. The uncommon, the sublime, must seem and be Like things of every day.—But in the field, Aye, there the Present Being makes itself felt. The personal must command, the actual eye		50
[613]	Examine. If to be the chieftain asks All that is great in nature, let it be Likewise his privilege to move and act In all the correspondencies of greatness. The oracle within him, that which lives, He must invoke and question—not dead books,		55
	Not ordinances, not mould-rotted papers. Octavio. My son! of those old narrow ordinances		60
	Let us not hold too lightly. They are weights Of priceless value, which oppressed mankind Tied to the volatile will of their oppressors. For always formidable was the league And partnership of free power with free will. The way of ancient ordinance, though it winds, Is yet no devious way. Straight forward goes		65
	The lightning's path, and straight the fearful path Of the cannon-ball. Direct it flies and rapid, Shattering that it may reach, and shattering what it reaches. My son! the road the human being travels,		70
	That on which blessing comes and goes, doth follow The river's course, the valley's playful windings, Curves round the corn-field and the hill of vines, Honouring the holy bounds of property! And thus secure though late leads to its and		75

 $\it Questenberg.$ O hear your father, noble youth! hear him, Who is at once the hero and the man.

[614]

[615]

Octavio. My son, the nursling of the camp spoke in thee!	80
A war of fifteen years
Hath been thy education and thy school. Peace hast thou never witnessed! There exists
A higher than the warrior's excellence.
In war itself war is no ultimate purpose.	85
The vast and sudden deeds of violence,
Adventures wild, and wonders of the moment,
These are not they, my son, that generate
The calm, the blissful, and the enduring mighty!	0.0
Lo there! the soldier, rapid architect!	90
Builds his light town of canvas, and at once The whole scene moves and bustles momently,
With arms, and neighing steeds, and mirth and quarrel
The motley market fills; the roads, the streams
Are crowded with new freights, trade stirs and hurries!	95
But on some morrow morn, all suddenly,
The tents drop down, the horde renews its march.
Dreary, and solitary as a church-yard
The meadow and down-trodden seed-plot lie,	100
And the year's harvest is gone utterly.	100
Max. O let the Emperor make peace, my father!
Most gladly would I give the blood-stained laurel
For the first violet $\frac{[614:1]}{[614:1]}$ of the leafless spring,
Plucked in those quiet fields where I have journeyed!
Octavio. What ails thee? What so moves thee all at once?	105
Max. Peace have I ne'er beheld? I have beheld it.
From thence am I come hither: O! that sight,
It glimmers still before me, like some landscape
Left in the distance,—some delicious landscape!	440
My road conducted me through countries where	110
The war has not yet reached. Life, life, my father—
My venerable father, life has charms Which we have ne'er experienced. We have been
But voyaging along its barren coasts,
Like some poor ever-roaming horde of pirates,	115
That, crowded in the rank and narrow ship,
House on the wild sea with wild usages,
Nor know aught of the main land, but the bays
Where safeliest they may venture a thieves' landing.	400
Whate'er in the inland dales the land conceals	120
Of fair and exquisite, O! nothing, nothing, Do we behold of that in our rude voyage.
v v
Octavio. And so your journey has revealed this to you?
Max. 'Twas the first leisure of my life. O tell me,
What is the meed and purpose of the toil,	125
The painful toil, which robbed me of my youth,
Left me a heart unsoul'd and solitary, A spirit uninformed, unornamented.
For the camp's stir and crowd and ceaseless larum,
The neighing war-horse, the air-shattering trumpet,	130
The unvaried, still-returning hour of duty,	100
Word of command, and exercise of arms—
There's nothing here, there's nothing in all this
To satisfy the heart, the gasping heart!
Mere bustling nothingness, where the soul is not—	135
This cannot be the sole felicity, These cannot be man's best and only pleasures.
These cannot be man's best and only pleasures.
Octavio. Much hast thou learnt, my son, in this short journey.
Max. O! day thrice lovely! when at length the soldier
Returns home into life; when he becomes	140
A fellow-man among his fellow-men.
The colours are unfurled, the cavalcade
Marshals, and now the buzz is hushed, and hark!
Now the soft peace-march beats, home, brothers, home!	145
The caps and helmets are all garlanded With green boughs, the last plundering of the fields.	145
The city gates fly open of themselves,
110 day gave ii open or memorive,

They need no longer the petard to tear them. The ramparts are all filled with men and women,
With peaceful men and women, that send onwards	150
Kisses and welcomings upon the air,
Which they make breezy with affectionate gestures.
From all the towers rings out the merry peal,
The joyous vespers of a bloody day.
O happy man, O fortunate! for whom	155
The well-known door, the faithful arms are open,
The faithful tender arms with mute embracing.
Questenberg. O! that you should speak
Of such a distant, distant time, and not
Of the to-morrow, not of this to-day.	160
of the to morrow, not of this to day.	100
Max. Where lies the fault but on you in Vienna?
I will deal openly with you, Questenberg.
Just now, as first I saw you standing here,
(I'll own it to you freely) indignation
Crowded and pressed my inmost soul together.	165
'Tis ye that hinder peace, ye!—and the warrior,
It is the warrior that must force it from you.
Ye fret the General's life out, blacken him,
Hold him up as a rebel, and Heaven knows
What else still worse, because he spares the Saxons,	170
And tries to awaken confidence in the enemy;
Which yet 's the only way to peace: for if War intermit not during war, how then
And whence can peace come?—Your own plagues fall on you!	4
Even as I love what's virtuous, hate I you.	175
And here make I this vow, here pledge myself;
My blood shall spurt out for this Wallenstein,
And my heart drain off, drop by drop, ere ye	[P-it
Shall revel and dance jubilee o'er his ruin.	[Exit.

QUESTENBERG, OCTAVIO PICCOLOMINI.

Questenberg. Alas, alas! and stands it so? What, friend! and do we let him go away! In this delusion—let him go away? Not call him back immediately, not open His eyes upon the spot?

Octavio. He has now opened mine, And I see more than pleases me.

Questenberg. Nay, but explain yourself.

Octavio. And that I should not Foresee it, not prevent this journey! Wherefore Did I keep it from him?—You were in the right. I should have warned him! Now it is too late.

15

Questenberg. But what's too late? Bethink yourself, my friend, That you are talking absolute riddles to me.

20

Octavio. Come!—to the Duke's. 'Tis close upon the hour Which he appointed you for audience. Come! A curse, a threefold curse, upon this journey!

I wronged my destiny. Here upon this head
So lovely in its maiden bloom will I Let fall the garland of a life of war, Nor deem it lost, if only I can wreath it Transmitted to a regal ornament, Around these beauteous brows.

[He clasps her in his arms as Piccolomini enters.

SCENE IX

Enter Max Piccolomini, and some time after Count Tertsky, the others remaining as before.

Countess. There comes the Paladin who protected us.

Wallenstein. Max! Welcome, ever welcome! Always wert thou The morning star of my best joys!

Max. My General——

Wallenstein. 'Till now it was the Emperor who rewarded thee, I but the instrument. This day thou hast bound The father to thee, Max! the fortunate father, And this debt Friedland's self must pay.

Max. My prince! You made no common hurry to transfer it. I come with shame: yea, not without a pang!

[623]

For scarce have I arrived here, scarce delivered The mother and the daughter to your arms,

10

But there is brought to me from your equerry A splendid richly-plated hunting dress

So to remunerate me for my troubles—— Yes, yes, remunerate me! Since a trouble It must be, a mere office, not a favour

Which I leapt forward to receive, and which I came already with full heart to thank you for

I came already with full heart to thank you for. No! 'twas not so intended, that my business Should be my highest best good fortune!

[Tertsky enters, and delivers letters to the Duke, which he breaks open hurryingly.

Countess (to Max). Remunerate your trouble! For his joy He makes you recompense. 'Tis not unfitting For you, Count Piccolomini, to feel So tenderly—my brother it beseems

To shew himself for ever great and princely.

Thekla. Then I too must have scruples of his love: For his munificent hands did ornament me Ere yet the father's heart had spoken to me.

Max. Yes; 'tis his nature ever to be giving And making happy.

How my heart pours out

30

Its all of thanks to him: O! how I seem To utter all things in the dear name Friedland.

While I shall live, so long will I remain

The captive of this name: in it shall bloom My every fortune, every lovely hope.

35

Inextricably as in some magic ring
In this name hath my destiny charm-bound me!

Countess. My brother wishes us to leave him. Come.

Wallenstein (turns himself round quick, collects himself, and speaks with cheerfulness to the Duchess). Once more I bid thee welcome to the camp,

Thou art the hostess of this court. You, Max, Will now again administer your old office,

40

While we perform the sovereign's business here.

[Max Piccolomini offers the Duchess his arm, the Countess accompanies the Princess.

Tertsky (calling after him). Max, we depend on seeing you at the meeting.

WALLENSTEIN, COUNT TERTSKY

WALLENGIEM, GOOM TENTOM.
Wallenstein (to himself). She hath seen all things as they are—It is so And squares completely with my other notices. They have determined finally in Vienna, Have given me my successor already; It is the king of Hungary, Ferdinand, The Emperor's delicate son! he's now their saviour, He's the new star that's rising now! Of us They think themselves already fairly rid, And as we were deceased, the heir already Is entering on possession—Therefore—dispatch! [As he turns round he observes Tertsky, and gives him a letter. Count Altringer will have himself excused, And Galas too—I like not this!	5
Tertsky. And if Thou loiterest longer, all will fall away, One following the other.
Wallenstein. Altringer Is master of the Tyrole passes. I must forthwith Send some one to him, that he let not in The Spaniards on me from the Milanese. ——Well, and the old Sesin, that ancient trader In contraband negotiations, he	15
Has shewn himself again of late. What brings he From the Count Thur?	20
Tertsky. The Count communicates, He has found out the Swedish chancellor At Halberstadt, where the convention's held, Who says, you've tired him out, and that he'll have No further dealings with you.
Wallenstein. And why so?	25
[625:1] Tertsky. He says, you are never in earnest in your speeches, That you decoy the Swedes—to make fools of them, Will league yourself with Saxony against them, And at last make yourself a riddance of them With a paltry sum of money.
Wallenstein. So then, doubtless, Yes, doubtless, this same modest Swede expects That I shall yield him some fair German tract For his prey and booty, that ourselves at last On our own soil and native territory,	30
May be no longer our own lords and masters! An excellent scheme! No, no! They must be off, Off, off! away! we want no such neighbours.	35
Tertsky. Nay, yield them up that dot, that speck of land— It goes not from your portion. If you win The game what matters it to you who pays it?	40
Wallenstein. Off with them, off! Thou understand'st not this. Never shall it be said of me, I parcelled My native land away, dismembered Germany, Betrayed it to a foreigner, in order
To come with stealthy tread, and filch away My own share of the plunder—Never! never!— No foreign power shall strike root in the empire, And least of all, these Goths! these hunger-wolves! Who send such envious, hot and greedy glances	45
T'wards the rich blessings of our German lands!	50

[625]

I'll have their aid to cast and draw my nets, But not a single fish of all the draught

Shall they come in for.

Tertsky. You will deal, however, More fairly with the Saxons? They lose patience While you shift ground and make so many curves. Say, to what purpose all these masks? Your friends Are plunged in doubts, baffled, and led astray in you. There's Oxenstirn, there's Arnheim—neither knows What he should think of your procrastinations. And in the end I prove the liar: all	55
Passes through me. I have not even your hand-writing.	00
Wallenstein. I never give my handwriting; thou knowest it.
Tertsky. But how can it be known that you're in earnest, If the act follows not upon the word? You must yourself acknowledge, that in all Your intercourses hitherto with the enemy You might have done with safety all you have done, Had you meant nothing further than to gull him For the Emperor's service.	65
Wallenstein (after a pause, during which he looks narrowly on Tertsky). And from whence dost thou know That I'm not gulling him for the Emperor's service? Whence knowest thou that I'm not gulling all of you? Dost thou know me so well? When made I thee The intendant of my secret purposes?	70
I am not conscious that I ever open'd My inmost thoughts to thee. The Emperor, it is true,	75
Hath dealt with me amiss; and if I would, I could repay him with usurious interest For the evil he hath done me. It delights me To know my power; but whether I shall use it, Of that, I should have thought that thou could'st speak No wiselier than thy fellows.	80

Tertsky. So hast thou always played thy game with us.

[Enter Illo.

FOOTNOTES:

[625:1] This passing off of his real irresolution and fancy-dalliance for depth of Reserve and for Plan formed within the magic circle of his own inapproachable spirits is very fine; but still it is not tragic—nay scarce obvious enough to be altogether dramatic, if in this word we involve theatre-representation. Iago (so far only analogous to Wallenstein as in him an Impulse is the source of his conduct rather than the motive), always acting is not the object of Interest, [but] derives a constant interest from Othello, on whom he is acting; from Desdemona, Cassio, every one; and, besides, for the purpose of theatric comprehensibility he is furnished with a set of outside motives that actually pass with the groundling for the true springs of action. *MS. 	Ere it slips from you. Seldom comes the moment
	In life, which is indeed sublime and weighty.
	To make a great decision possible, O! many things, all transient and all rapid,	50

	Time long enough for wisdom, though too short,
	Far, far too short a time for doubt and scruple!
	This is that moment. See, our army chieftains,	55
[000]	Our best, our noblest, are assembled around you,

[631] Scene XII

Wallenstein, Tertsky, Illo.—To them enter Questenberg, Octavio, and Max Piccolomini, Butler, Isolani, Maradas, and three other Generals. Wallenstein motions Questenberg, who in consequence takes the Chair directly opposite to him; the others follow, arranging themselves according to their rank.

Wallenstein. I have understood, 'tis true, the sum and import Of your instructions, Questenberg, have weighed them, And formed my final, absolute resolve; Yet it seems fitting, that the Generals Should hear the will of the Emperor from your mouth. May't please you then to open your commission Before these noble Chieftains.

Questenberg. I am ready
To obey you; but will first entreat your Highness,
And all these noble Chieftains, to consider,
The Imperial dignity and sovereign right
Speaks from my mouth, and not my own presumption.

Wallenstein. We excuse all preface.

Questenberg. When his Majesty
The Emperor to his courageous armies
Presented in the person of Duke Friedland
A most experienced and renowned commander,
He did it in glad hope and confidence
To give thereby to the fortune of the war
A rapid and auspicious change. The onset

Was favourable to his royal wishes.
Bohemia was delivered from the Saxons, The Swede's career of conquest checked! These	lands 20
Began to draw breath freely, as Duke Friedland	idilds
From all the streams of Germany forced hither
The scattered armies of the enemy,	25
Hither invoked as round one magic circle The Rhinegrave, Bernhard, Banner, Oxenstirn,	25
Yea, and that never-conquered King himself;
Here finally, before the eye of Nürnberg,
The fearful game of battle to decide.
Wallenstein. May't please you to the point.	30
Questenberg. In Nürnberg's camp the Swedisl	h monarch left
His fame—in Lützen's plains his life. But who Stood not astounded, when victorious Friedland
After this day of triumph, this proud day, Marched toward Bohemia with the speed of fligl	ht, 35
And vanished from the theatre of war;
While the young Weimar hero forced his way
Into Franconia, to the Danube, like	chas
Some delving winter-stream, which, where it rus Makes its own channel; with such sudden speed
He marched, and now at once 'fore Regenspurg
Stood to the affright of all good Catholic Christia
Then did Bavaria's well-deserving Prince
Entreat swift aidance in his extreme need; The Emperor sends seven horsemen to Duke Fri	iedland. 45
Seven horsemen couriers sends he with the entr
He superadds his own, and supplicates
Where as the sovereign lord he can command.
In vain his supplication! At this moment The Duke hears only his old hate and grudge,	50
Barters the general good to gratify	50
Private revenge—and so falls Regenspurg.
Wallenstein. Max, to what period of the war al	lludes he?
My recollection fails me here.	nuucs ne:
Max. He means
When we were in Silesia.
Wallenstein. Ay! Is it so! But what had we to do there?	55
Max. To beat out
The Swedes and Saxons from the province.
Wallenstein. True.
In that description which the Minister gave
I seemed to have forgotten the whole war.	[To Questenberg.
Well, but proceed a little.	[10 QUESTENBERG.
.	00
Questenberg. Yes! at length Beside the river Oder did the Duke	60
Assert his ancient fame. Upon the fields
Of Steinau did the Swedes lay down their arms,
Subdued without a blow. And here, with others,	-
The righteousness of Heaven to his avenger Delivered that long-practised stirrer-up	65
Of insurrection, that curse-laden torch
And kindler of this war, Matthias Thur.
But he had fallen into magnanimous hands;
Instead of punishment he found reward, And with rich presents did the Duke dismiss	70
The arch-foe of his Emperor.
Wallenstein (laughs). I know,
I know you had already in Vienna Your windows and balconies all forestalled
To see him on the executioner's cart.	75
I might have lost the battle, lost it too
With infamy, and still retained your graces—
But, to have cheated them of a spectacle, Oh! that the good folks of Vienna never,
No, never can forgive me.

[632]

[633]

Questenberg. So Silesia Was freed, and all things loudly called the Duke	80
Into Bavaria, now pressed hard on all sides. And he did put his troops in motion: slowly,
Quite at his ease, and by the longest road He traverses Bohemia; but ere ever	85
He hath once seen the enemy, faces round,	63
Breaks up the march, and takes to winter quarters.
Wallenstein. The troops were pitiably destitute Of every necessary, every comfort.
The winter came. What thinks his Majesty	90
His troops are made of? Arn't we men? subjected Like other men to wet, and cold, and all
The circumstances of necessity? O miserable lot of the poor soldier!
Wherever he comes in, all flee before him,	95
And when he goes away, the general curse Follows him on his route. All must be seized,
Nothing is given him. And compelled to seize From every man, he's every man's abhorrence.
Behold, here stand my Generals. Karaffa!	100
Count Deodate! Butler! Tell this man How long the soldiers' pay is in arrears.
Butler. Already a full year.
Wallenstein. And 'tis the hire
That constitutes the hireling's name and duties,	4.05
The soldier's pay is the soldier's covenant. [634:1]	105
Questenberg. Ah! this is a far other tone from that In which the Duke spoke eight, nine years ago.
Wallenstein. Yes! 'tis my fault, I know it: I myself
Have spoilt the Emperor by indulging him. Nine years ago, during the Danish war,	110
I raised him up a force, a mighty force, Forty or fifty thousand men, that cost him
Of his own purse no doit. Through Saxony
The fury goddess of the war marched on, E'en to the surf-rocks of the Baltic, bearing	115
The terrors of his name. That was a time! In the whole Imperial realm no name like mine
Honoured with festival and celebration—
And Albrecht Wallenstein, it was the title Of the third jewel in his crown!	120
But at the Diet, when the Princes met	120
At Regenspurg, there, there the whole broke out, There 'twas laid open, there it was made known,
Out of what money-bag I had paid the host. And what was now my thank, what had I now,	125
That I, a faithful servant of the Sovereign,	120
Had loaded on myself the people's curses, And let the Princes of the empire pay
The expenses of this war, that aggrandizes	130
The Emperor alone—What thanks had I! What? I was offered up to their complaints,	130
Dismissed, degraded!
Questenberg. But your Highness knows What little freedom he possessed of action
In that disastrous diet.
Wallenstein. Death and hell!	105
I had that which could have procured him freedom. No! Since 'twas proved so inauspicious to me	135
To serve the Emperor at the empire's cost, I have been taught far other trains of thinking
Of the empire, and the diet of the empire.	4.40
From the Emperor, doubtless, I received this staff, But now I hold it as the empire's general—	140
For the common weal, the universal interest,
And no more for that one man's aggrandizement! But to the point. What is it that's desired of me?
Questenberg. First, his imperial Majesty hath willed	145
That without pretexts of delay the army

Of eight horse-regiments from the army here.
Wallenstein. Yes, yes! I understand!—Eight regiments! Well,
Right well concerted, father Lamormain! Eight thousand horse! Yes, yes! 'Tis as it should be! I see it coming!	200
Questenberg. There is nothing coming.
All stands in front: the counsel of state-prudence, The dictate of necessity!—— Wallenstein. What then?
What, my Lord Envoy? May I not be suffered To understand, that folks are tired of seeing	205
The sword's hilt in my grasp: and that your court
Snatch eagerly at this pretence, and use The Spanish title, to drain off my forces,
To lead into the empire a new army
Unsubjected to my control. To throw me	210
Plumply aside,—I am still too powerful for you To venture that. My stipulation runs,
That all the Imperial forces shall obey me
Where'er the German is the native language.
Of Spanish troops and of Prince Cardinals That take their route, as visitors, through the empire,	215
There stands no syllable in my stipulation.
No syllable! And so the politic court
Steals in a-tiptoe, and creeps round behind it;	220
First makes me weaker, then to be dispensed with, Till it dares strike at length a bolder blow	220
And make short work with me.
What need of all these crooked ways, Lord Envoy?
Straight-forward man! His compact with me pinches The Emperor. He would that I moved off!—	225
Well!—I will gratify him!
[Here there commences an agitation among the Generals which increases continually.]
It grieves me for my noble officers' sakes! I see not yet, by what means they will come at
The moneys they have advanced, or how obtain
The recompense their services demand.	230
Still a new leader brings new claimants forward, And prior merit superannuates quickly.
There serve here many foreigners in the army,
And were the man in all else brave and gallant,	225
I was not wont to make nice scrutiny After his pedigree or catechism.	235
This will be otherwise, i'the time to come.
Well—me no longer it concerns.
[He seats himself.
Max Piccolomini. Forbid it. Heaven, that it should come to this!
Our troops will swell in dreadful fermentation— The Emperor is abused—it cannot be.	240
Isolani. It cannot be; all goes to instant wreck.
Wallenstein. Thou hast said truly, faithful Isolani!
What we with toil and foresight have built up,	245
Will go to wreck—all go to instant wreck. What then? another chieftain is soon found,	245
Another army likewise (who dares doubt it?)
Will flock from all sides to the Emperor At the first beat of his recruiting drum.
At the first beat of his recruiting drum.
[During this speech, Isolani, Tertsky, Illo and Maradas talk confusedly with great agitation.
Max Piccolomini (busily and passionately going from one to another, and soothing them). Hear, my commander! Hear me, generals!	250
Let me conjure you, Duke! Determine nothing, Till we have met and represented to you
Our joint remonstrances.—Nay, calmer! Friends!
I hope all may be yet set right again.
Tertsky. Away! let us away! in the antechamber	255
Find we the others. [They go.

 ${\it Butler}$ (to ${\it Questenberg}$). If good counsel gain Due audience from your wisdom, my Lord Envoy!

[637]

[638]

[Commotions heard from without.

Wallenstein. A salutary counsel——Thou, Octavio! Wilt answer for the safety of our guest. Farewell, Von Questenberg!

[Questenberg is about to speak.

Nay, not a word. Not one word more of that detested subject! You have performed your duty—We know how To separate the office from the man.

[As Questenberg is going off with Octavio, Goetz, Tiefenbach, Kolatto, press in; several other Generals following them.

Goetz. Where's he who means to rob us of our general?

Tiefenbach (at the same time). What are we forced to hear? That thou wilt leave us?

Kolatto (at the same time). We will live with thee, we will die with thee.

Wallenstein (pointing to Illo). There! the Field-Marshal knows our will.

[Exit.

——Und sein Sold Muss dem Soldaten werden, darnach heisst er.

It might perhaps have been thus rendered:

'And that for which he sold his services, The soldier must receive.'

But a false or doubtful etymology is no more than a dull pun.

ACT II

Scene I

Scene—A small Chamber.

Illo and Tertsky.

[639]

Illo. Attend! We frame a formal declaration, Wherein we to the Duke consign ourselves Collectively, to be and to remain His both with life and limb, and not to spare The last drop of our blood for him, provided So doing we infringe no oath nor duty,	5
We may be under to the Emperor.—Mark! This reservation we expressly make In a particular clause, and save the conscience. Now hear! This formula so framed and worded Will be presented to them for perusal	10
Before the banquet. No one will find in it Cause of offence or scruple. Hear now further! After the feast, when now the vap'ring wine Opens the heart, and shuts the eyes, we let A counterfeited paper, in the which This one particular clause has been left out, Go round for signatures.	15
Tertsky. How? think you then That they'll believe themselves bound by an oath, Which we had tricked them into by a juggle?	20
Illo. We shall have caught and caged them! Let them then Beat their wings bare against the wires, and rave Loud as they may against our treachery, At court their signatures will be believed Far more than their most holy affirmations. Traitors they are, and must be; therefore wisely Will make a virtue of necessity.	25
Tertsky. Well, well, it shall content me; let but something Be done, let only some decisive blow Set us in motion.	30
Illo. Besides, 'tis of subordinate importance How, or how far, we may thereby propel The generals. 'Tis enough that we persuade The Duke, that they are his—Let him but act In his determined mood, as if he had them, And he will have them. Where he plunges in, He makes a whirlpool, and all stream down to it.	35
Tertsky. His policy is such a labyrinth, That many a time when I have thought myself Close at his side, he's gone at once, and left me Ignorant of the ground where I was standing.	40
He lends the enemy his ear, permits me To write to them, to Arnheim; to Sesina Himself comes forward blank and undisguised; Talks with us by the hour about his plans, And when I think I have him—off at once—— He has slipped from me, and appears as if He had no scheme, but to retain his place.	45 50
Illo. He give up his old plans! I'll tell you, friend! His soul is occupied with nothing else, Even in his sleep—They are his thoughts, his dreams, That day by day he questions for this purpose The motions of the planets—	30
Tertsky. Ay! you know This night, that is now coming, he with Seni Shuts himself up in the astrological tower To make joint observations—for I hear, It is to be a night of weight and crisis; And something great, and of long expectation,	55 60
Is to make its procession in the heaven. Illo. Come! be we bold and make dispatch. The work In this next day or two must thrive and grow More than it has for years. And let but only Things first turn up auspicious here below—— Mark what I say—the right stars too will shew themselves.	65
Come, to the generals. All is in the glow,

[640]

And must be beaten while 'tis malleable. Tertsky. Do you go thither, Illo. I must stay And wait here for the Countess Tertsky. Know 70 That we too are not idle. I am not quite certain, I must confess it, Countess, whether or not We are earning the Duke's thanks hereby. You know, 5 No ray has broken from him on this point. My cloudy Duke! we understand each other—

And without words. What, could I not unriddle,

Wherefore the daughter should be sent for hither,

Why first he, and no other, should be chosen

To fetch her hither! This sham of betrothing her

To a bridegroom, [641:1] whom no one knows—No! no!——

This may blind others! I see through thee, Brother!

But it beseems thee not, to draw a card

At such a game. Not yet!—It all remains

Mutely delivered up to my finessing——

Well—thou shalt not have been deceived, Duke Friedland!

Tertsky. All rests upon his undersigning.

Countess, Max Piccolomini.

Max. Aunt Tertsky? may I venture?

[Advances to the middle of the stage, and looks around him with uneasiness. She's not here!

Where is she?

Countess. Look but somewhat narrowly In yonder corner, lest perhaps she lie Conceal'd behind that screen.

Max. There lie her gloves! [642:1]

[Snatches at them, but the Countess takes them herself.

You unkind Lady! You refuse me this—You make it an amusement to torment me.

Countess. And this the thanks you give me for my trouble?

Max. O, if you felt the oppression at my heart! Since we've been here, so to constrain myself— With such poor stealth to hazard words and glances— These, these are not my habits!

Countess. You have still Many new habits to acquire, young friend! But on this proof of your obedient temper I must continue to insist; and only On this condition can I play the agent For your concerns.

Max. But wherefore comes she not? Where is she?

Countess. Into my hands you must place it Whole and entire. Whom could you find, indeed, More zealously affected to your interest? No soul on earth must know it—not your father. He must not above all.

Max. Alas! what danger? Here is no face on which I might concentre All the enraptured soul stirs up within me. O Lady! tell me. Is all changed around me? Or is it only I?

I find myself, As among strangers! Not a trace is left Of all my former wishes, former joys. Where has it vanished to? There was a time

	When even, methought, with such a world as this I was not discontented. Now how flat! How stale! No life, no bloom, no flavour in it! My comrades are intolerable to me. My father—Even to him I can say nothing. My arms, my military duties—O! They are such wearying toys!	30
,	Countess. But, gentle friend! I must entreat it of your condescension, You would be pleased to sink your eye, and favour With one short glance or two this poor stale world, Where even now much, and of much moment, Is on the eve of its completion.	35
	Max. Something, I can't but know, is going forward round me. I see it gathering, crowding, driving on, In wild uncustomary movements. Well,	40
	In due time, doubtless, it will reach even me. Where think you I have been, dear lady? Nay, No raillery. The turmoil of the camp, The spring-tide of acquaintance rolling in, The pointless jest, the empty conversation,	45
	Oppress'd and stifled me. I gasped for air— I could not breathe—I was constrain'd to fly, To seek a silence out for my full heart; And a pure spot wherein to feel my happiness. No smiling, Countess! In the church was I.	50
	There is a cloister here to the heaven's gate, [644:1] Thither I went, there found myself alone. Over the altar hung a holy mother; A wretched painting 'twas, yet 'twas the friend That I was seeking in this moment. Ah,	55
	How oft have I beheld that glorious form In splendour, mid ecstatic worshippers; Yet, still it moved me not! and now at once Was my devotion cloudless as my love.	60
	Countess. Enjoy your fortune and felicity! Forget the world around you. Meantime, friendship Shall keep strict vigils for you, anxious, active. Only be manageable when that friendship Points you the road to full accomplishment. How long may it be since you declared your passion? Max. This morning did I hazard the first word.	65
	Countess. This morning the first time in twenty days? Max. 'Twas at that hunting-castle, betwixt here And Nepomuck, where you had joined us, and— That was the last relay of the whole journey!	70
	In a balcony we were standing mute, And gazing out upon the dreary field: Before us the dragoons were riding onward, The safe-guard which the Duke had sent us—heavy The inquietude of parting lay upon me, And trombling worthyred Lat length these words.	75
,	And trembling ventured I at length these words: This all reminds me, noble maiden, that To-day I must take leave of my good fortune. A few hours more, and you will find a father, Will see yourself surrounded by new friends, And I henceforth shall be but as a stranger,	80
	Lost in the many—'Speak with my aunt Tertsky!' With hurrying voice she interrupted me. She faltered. I beheld a glowing red Possess her beautiful cheeks, and from the ground Raised slowly up her eye met mine—no longer Did I control myself.	85
	[The Princess Thekla appears at the door, and remains standing, observed by the Countess, but not by Piccolomini.

With instant boldness
I caught her in my arms, my mouth touched hers;
There was a rustling in the room close by;
It parted us—'Twas you. What since has happened,

[644]

[645]

90

You know.

Countess. And is it your excess of modesty; Or are you so incurious, that you do not Ask me too of my secret?

95

Max.

Of your secret?

Countess. Why, yes! When in the instant after you I stepped into the room, and found my niece there, What she in this first moment of the heart Ta'en with surprise—

Max.

Well?

SCENE IV

THEKLA (hurries forward), Countess, Max Piccolomini.

Thekla (to the Countess). Spare yourself the trouble: That hears he better from myself.

Max. My Princess!

What have you let her hear me say, aunt Tertsky?

Thekla (to the Countess). Has he been here long?

Countess. Yes; and soon must go.

Where have you stayed so long?

Thekla. Alas! my mother Wept so again! and I—I see her suffer, Yet cannot keep myself from being happy.

5

Max. Now once again I have courage to look on you.

To-day at noon I could not.

The dazzle of the jewels that play'd round you Hid the beloved from me.

Thekla. Then you saw me With your eye only—and not with your heart?

Max. This morning, when I found you in the circle Of all your kindred, in your father's arms, Beheld myself an alien in this circle, O! what an impulse felt I in that moment

[646]

To fall upon his neck, to call him father!
But his stern eye o'erpowered the swelling passion—
It dared not but be silent. And those brilliants, That like a crown of stars enwreathed your brows,		20
They scared me too! O wherefore, wherefore should he		20
At the first meeting spread as 'twere the ban
Of excommunication round you, wherefore
Dress up the angel as for sacrifice,
And cast upon the light and joyous heart		25
The mournful burthen of his station? Fitly May love dore was for love, but such a splendour.
May love dare woo for love; but such a splendour Might none but monarchs venture to approach.
ranging notice but informations venture to approach.
Thekla. Hush! not a word more of this mummery.
You see how soon the burthen is thrown off.		30
	[To the Countess.
He is not in spirits. Wherefore is he not?
'Tis you, aunt, that have made him all so gloomy! He had quite another nature on the journey—
So calm, so bright, so joyous eloquent.	[To Max.
It was my wish to see you always so,	[10 MAX.	35
And never otherwise!
Max. You find yourself
In your great father's arms, belovéd lady!
All in a new world, which does homage to you,
And which, wer't only by its novelty,
Delights your eye.
Thekla. Yes; I confess to you		40
That many things delight me here: this camp,
This motley stage of warriors, which renews
So manifold the image of my fancy,
And binds to life, binds to reality,
What hitherto had but been present to me		45
As a sweet dream!
Max. Alas! not so to me.
It makes a dream of my reality.
Upon some island in the ethereal heights
I've lived for these last days. This mass of men
Forces me down to earth. It is a bridge		50
That, reconducting to my former life,
Divides me and my heaven.
Thekla. The game of life
Looks cheerful, when one carries in one's heart
The inalienable treasure. 'Tis a game,
Which having once reviewed, I turn more joyous		55
Back to my deeper and appropriate bliss.
In this short time that I've been present here,
What new unheard-of things have I not seen!
And yet they all must give place to the wonder
Which this mysterious castle guards.
Countess. And what		60
Can this be then? Methought I was acquainted		00
With all the dusky corners of this house.
11.1011 (11.1 01.10 01.001.10 01.10 11.0 01.0 0
Thekla. Ay, but the road thereto is watched by spirits,
Two griffins still stand sentry at the door.
Countage (laugha) The patrological toward. How happens it		65
Countess (laughs). The astrological tower!—How happens it That this same sanctuary, whose access		03
Is to all others so impracticable,
Opens before you even at your approach?
Thekla. A dwarfish old man with a friendly face
And snow-white hairs, whose gracious services		70
Were mine at first sight, opened me the doors.
Max. That is the Duke's astrologer, old Seni.
Thekla. He questioned me on many points; for instance,
When I was born, what month, and on what day,
Whether by day or in the night.
Countess. He wished		75
To erect a figure for your horoscope.		-

[647]

Thekla. My hand too he examined, shook his head With much sad meaning, and the lines methought, Did not square over truly with his wishes.

	Countage Well Princess and what found you in this tower?	80
	Countess. Well, Princess, and what found you in this tower? My highest privilege has been to snatch A side-glance, and away!	80
	Thekla. [647:1] It was a strange
[648]	Thekla. 1047:11 It was a strange Sensation that came o'er me, when at first
	From the broad sunshine I stepped in; and now
	The narrowing line of day-light, that ran after	85
	The closing door, was gone; and all about me 'Twas pale and dusky night, with many shadows
	Fantastically cast. Here six or seven
	Colossal statues, and all kings, stood round me
	In a half-circle. Each one in his hand	90
	A sceptre bore, and on his head a star; And in the tower no other light was there
	But from these stars: all seemed to come from them.
	'These are the planets,' said that low old man,
	'They govern worldly fates, and for that cause	95
	Are imaged here as kings. He farthest from you,
	Spiteful, and cold, an old man melancholy, With bent and yellow forehead, he is Saturn.
	He opposite, the king with the red light,
	An arm'd man for the battle, that is Mars:	100
	And both these bring but little luck to man.'
	But at his side a lovely lady stood, The star upon her head was soft and bright,
	And that was Venus, the bright star of joy.
	On the left hand, lo! Mercury, with wings.	105
	Quite in the middle glittered silver-bright
	A cheerful man, and with a monarch's mien; And this was Jupiter, my father's star:
	And at his side I saw the Sun and Moon.
	Max. O never rudely will I blame his faith	110
	In the might of stars and angels! 'Tis not merely	110
	The human being's Pride that peoples space
	With life and mystical predominance;
	Since likewise for the stricken heart of Love	115
	This visible nature, and this common world, Is all too narrow: yea, a deeper import	115
	Lurks in the legend told my infant years
	Than lies upon that truth, we live to learn.
	For fable is Love's world, his home, his birth-place;	100
	Delightedly dwells he 'mong fays and talismans, And spirits; and delightedly believes	120
	Divinities, being himself divine.
[649]	The intelligible forms of ancient poets,
	The fair humanities of old religion,	125
	The Power, the Beauty, and the Majesty, That had their haunts in dale, or piny mountain,	125
	Or forest by slow stream, or pebbly spring,
	Or chasms and wat'ry depths; all these have vanished.
	They live no longer in the faith of reason!	400
	But still the heart doth need a language, still Doth the old instinct bring back the old names,	130
	And to yon starry world they now are gone,
	Spirits or gods, that used to share this earth
	With man as with their friend; $649:1$ and to the lover
	Yonder they move, from yonder visible sky	135
	Shoot influence down: and even at this day 'Tis Jupiter who brings whate'er is great,
	And Venus who brings every thing that's fair!
	Thekla. And if this be the science of the stars, I too, with glad and zealous industry,	140
	Will learn acquaintance with this cheerful faith.	140
	It is a gentle and affectionate thought,
	That in immeasurable heights above us,
	At our first birth, the wreath of love was woven, With sparkling stars for flowers.
	Countess. Not only roses,	145
	But thorns too hath the heaven; and well for you

Leave they your wreath of love inviolate; What Venus twined, the bearer of glad fortune, The sullen orb of Mars soon tears to pieces.

Max. Soon will his gloomy empire reach its close. Blest be the General's zeal: into the laurel Will he inweave the olive-branch, presenting Peace to the shouting nations. Then no wish	150
Will have remained for his great heart! Enough Has he performed for glory, and can now	155
Live for himself and his. To his domains Will he retire; he has a stately seat
Of fairest view at Gitschin; Reichenberg,
And Friedland Castle, both lie pleasantly—	4.00
Even to the foot of the huge mountains here Stretches the chase and covers of his forests:	160
His ruling passion, to create the splendid,
He can indulge without restraint; can give
A princely patronage to every art,
And to all worth a Sovereign's protection.	165
Can build, can plant, can watch the starry courses—
Countess. Yet I would have you look, and look again, Before you lay aside your arms, young friend! A gentle bride, as she is, is well worth it,
That you should woo and win her with the sword.	170

Max. O, that the sword could win her!

[650]

Countess. What was that? Did you hear nothing? Seem'd, as if I heard Tumult and larum in the banquet-room.

[Exit Countess.

FOOTNOTES:

In truth, Max's reply after the first nine lines is almost my own, as are the first seven lines of Thekla's description. The remainder I take a little pride in as a specimen of translation, fully equal, and in diction and rhythmic feeling superior, to the original. S. T. C. MS. R.

Thekla. O, not yet! It has been scarce a moment.

Max. There is no hurry, aunt.

Countess. Away! Away! The folks begin to miss you. Twice already His father has asked for him.

Thekla. Ha! his father?

Countess. You understand that, niece!

Thekla. Why needs he To go at all to that society?
'Tis not his proper company. They may Be worthy men, but he's too young for them. In brief, he suits not such society.

Countess. You mean, you'd rather keep him wholly here?

Thekla. Yes! you have hit it, aunt! That is my meaning. Leave him here wholly! Tell the company—

15

Countess. What? have you lost your senses, niece?—Count, you remember the conditions. Come!

Max (to Thekla). Lady, I must obey. Farewell, dear lady!

[Thekla turns away from him with a quick motion.

What say you then, dear lady?

Thekla (without looking at him). Nothing. Go!

20

Max. Can I, when you are angry--

[He draws up to her, their eyes meet, she stands silent a moment, then throws herself into his arms; he presses her fast to his heart.

Countess. Off! Heavens! if any one should come! Hark! What's that noise? It comes this way.——Off!

[Max tears himself away out of her arms, and goes. The Countess accompanies him. Thekla follows him with her eyes at first, walks restlessly across the room, then stops, and remains standing, lost in thought. A guitar lies on the table, she seizes it as by a sudden emotion, and after she has played a while an irregular and melancholy symphony, she falls gradually into the music and sings.

Thekla (plays and sings).

The cloud doth gather, the greenwood roar,

The damsel paces along the shore;

The billows they tumble with might, with might;

And she flings out her voice to the darksome night;

Her bosom is swelling with sorrow;
The world it is empty, the heart will die,
There's nothing to wish for beneath the sky:
Thou Holy One, call thy child away!
I've lived and loved, and that was to-day—

FOOTNOTES:

[653]

[653:1] I found it not in my power to translate this song with literal fidelity, preserving at the same time the Alcaic Movement, and have therefore added the original with a prose translation. Some of my readers may be more fortunate.

Thekla (spielt und singt).

Der Eichwald brauset, die Wolken ziehn,
Das Mägdlein wandelt an Ufers Grün,
Es bricht sich die Welle mit Macht, mit Macht,
Und sie singt hinaus in die finstre Nacht,
Das Auge von Weinen getrübet:
Das Herz ist gestorben, die Welt ist leer,
Und weiter giebt sie dem Wunsche nichts mehr.
Du Heilige, rufe dein Kind zurück,
Ich habe genossen das irdische Glück,
Ich habe gelebt und geliebet.

LITERAL TRANSLATION.

Thekla (plays and sings).

The oak-forest bellows, the clouds gather, the damsel walks to and fro on the green of the shore; the wave breaks with might, with might, and she sings out into the dark night, her eye discoloured with weeping: the heart is dead, the world is empty, and further gives it nothing more to the wish. Thou Holy One, call thy child home. I have enjoyed the happiness of this world, I have lived and have loved.

I cannot but add here an imitation of this song, with which the author of The Tale of Rosamond Gray and Blind Margaret has favoured me, and which appears to me to have caught the happiest manner of our old ballads.

The clouds are black'ning, the storms threat'ning,
The cavern doth mutter, the greenwood moan;
Billows are breaking, the damsel's heart aching,
Thus in the dark night she singeth alone,
Her eye upward roving:
The world is empty, the heart is dead surely,
In this world plainly all seemeth amiss;
To thy heaven, Holy One, take home thy little one,
I have partaken of all earth's bliss,
Both living and loving.

The text of Lamb's version as printed in Works, 1818, i. 42 is as follows:

BALLAD.

From the German.

The clouds are blackening, the storms threatening,
And ever the forest maketh a moan:
Billows are breaking, the damsel's heart aching,
Thus by herself she singeth alone,
Weeping right plenteously.
The world is empty, the heart is dead surely,
In this world plainly all seemeth amiss:
To thy breast, holy one, take now thy little one,
I have had earnest of all earth's bliss
Living most lovingly.

[654] Scene VII

Countess (returns), Thekla.

Countess. Fie, lady niece! to throw yourself upon him, Like a poor gift to one who cares not for it, And so must be flung after him! For you, Duke Friedland's only child, I should have thought It had been more beseeming to have shewn yourself More chary of your person.

Thekla.

And what mean you?

Countess. I mean, niece, that you should not have forgotten Who you are, and who he is. But perchance That never once occurred to you.
Thekla. What then?
Countess. That you're the daughter of the Prince-Duke Friedland.	10
Thekla. Well—and what farther?
Countess. What? a pretty question!
Thekla. He was born that which we have but become. He's of an ancient Lombard family, Son of a reigning princess.
Countess. Are you dreaming? Talking in sleep? An excellent jest, forsooth! We shall no doubt right courteously entreat him To honour with his hand the richest heiress In Europe.	15
Thekla. That will not be necessary.
Countess. Methinks 'twere well though not to run the hazard.
Thekla. His father loves him, Count Octavio Will interpose no difficulty——	20
Countess. His! His father! his! But yours, niece, what of yours?
Thekla. Why I begin to think you fear his father, So anxiously you hide it from the man! His father, his, I mean.
Countess (looks at her). Niece, you are false.	25
Thekla. Are you then wounded? O, be friends with me!
Countess. You hold your game for won already. Do not Triumph too soon!—
Thekla. Nay now, be friends with me.
Countess. It is not yet so far gone.
Thekla. I believe you.
Countess. Did you suppose your father had laid out His most important life in toils of war, Denied himself each quiet earthly bliss, Had banished slumber from his tent, devoted His noble head to care, and for this only, To make a happy pair of you? At length To draw you from your convent, and conduct In easy triumph to your arms the man That chanc'd to please your eyes! All this, methinks,	30 35
He might have purchased at a cheaper rate. Thekla. That which he did not plant for me might yet	40
Bear me fair fruitage of its own accord. And if my friendly and affectionate fate, Out of his fearful and enormous being, Will but prepare the joys of life for me—
[655:1] Countess. Thou seest it with a love-lorn maiden's eyes. Cast thine eye round, bethink thee who thou art. Into no house of joyance hast thou stepped, For no espousals dost thou find the walls	45
Deck'd out, no guests the nuptial garland wearing. Here is no splendour but of arms. Or think'st thou That all these thousands are here congregated To lead up the long dances at thy wedding?	50
Thou see'st thy father's forehead full of thought, Thy mother's eye in tears: upon the balance Lies the great destiny of all our house. Leave now the puny wish, the girlish feeling, O thrust it far behind thee! Give thou proof, Thou'rt the daughter of the Mighty—his	55

[655]

[656]

Who where he moves creates the wonderful. Not to herself the woman must belong, Annexed and bound to alien destinies. But she performs the best part, she the wisest, Who can transmute the alien into self, Meet and disarm necessity by choice; And what must be, take freely to her heart, And bear and foster it with mother's love.	60 65
Thekla. Such ever was my lesson in the convent. I had no loves, no wishes, knew myself Only as his—his daughter—his, the Mighty! His fame, the echo of whose blast drove to me From the far distance, wakened in my soul No other thought than this—I am appointed To offer up myself in passiveness to him.	70
Countess. That is thy fate. Mould thou thy wishes to it. I and thy mother gave thee the example.	75
Thekla. My fate hath shewn me him, to whom behoves it That I should offer up myself. In gladness Him will I follow.
Countess. Not thy fate hath shewn him! Thy heart, say rather—'twas thy heart, my child!
Thekla. Fate hath no voice but the heart's impulses. I am all his! His Present—his alone, Is this new life, which lives in me. He hath A right to his own creature. What was I Ere his fair love infused a soul into me?	80
Countess. Thou would'st oppose thy father then, should he Have otherwise determined with thy person? [Thekla remains silent. The Countess continues.	85
Thou mean'st to force him to thy liking?—Child, His name is Friedland.
Thekla. My name too is Friedland. He shall have found a genuine daughter in me.
Countess. What? he has vanquished all impediment, And in the wilful mood of his own daughter Shall a new struggle rise for him? Child! child! As yet thou hast seen thy father's smiles alone;	90
The eye of his rage thou hast not seen. Dear child, I will not frighten thee. To that extreme, I trust, it ne'er shall come. His will is yet Unknown to me: 'tis possible his aims May have the same direction as thy wish.	95
But this can never, never be his will, That thou, the daughter of his haughty fortunes, Should'st e'er demean thee as a love-sick maiden; And like some poor cost-nothing, fling thyself Toward the man, who, if that high prize ever	100
Be destined to await him, yet, with sacrifices The highest love can bring, must pay for it. [Exit Countess.	105
Thekla. I thank thee for the hint. It turns My sad presentiment to certainty. And it is so!—Not one friend have we here, Not one true heart! we've nothing but ourselves!
O she said rightly—no auspicious signs Beam on this covenant of our affections. This is no theatre, where hope abides. The dull thick noise of war alone stirs here.	110
And love himself, as he were armed in steel, Steps forth, and girds him for the strife of death.	115
[Music from the banquet-room is heard. There's a dark spirit walking in our house, And swiftly will the Destiny close on us. It drove me hither from my calm asylum,
It mocks my soul with charming witchery, It lures me forward in a seraph's shape, I see it near, I see it nearer floating, It draws, it pulls me with a god-like power— And lo! the abyss—and thither am I moving—	120

[657]

I have no power within me not to move!

[The music from the banquet-room becomes louder.]

O when a house is doomed in fire to perish,

Many a dark heaven drives his clouds together,

Yea, shoots his lightnings down from sunny heights,
Flames burst from out the subterraneous chasms,
And fiends and angels mingling in their fury,

[658]

[Exit Thekla.

Scene VIII

A large Saloon lighted up with festal Splendour; in the midst of it, and in the Centre of the Stage, a Table richly set out, at which eight Generals are sitting, among whom are Octavio Piccolomini, Tertsky, and Maradas. Right and left of this, but farther back, two other Tables, at each of which six Persons are placed. The Middle Door, which is standing open, gives to the Prospect a Fourth Table, with the same Number of Persons. More forward stands the sideboard. The whole front of the Stage is kept open for the Pages and Servants in waiting. All is in Motion. The Band of Music belonging to Tertsky's Regiment march across the Stage, and draw up round the Tables. Before they are quite off from the Front of the Stage,

Max Piccolomini appears, Tertsky advances towards him with a Paper, Isolani comes up to meet him with a Beaker or Service-cup.

Tertsky, Isolani, Max Piccolomini.

Isolani. Here brother, what we love! Why, where hast been? Off to thy place—quick! Tertsky here has given The mother's holiday wine up to free booty. Here it goes on as at the Heidelberg castle. Already hast thou lost the best. They're giving 5 At yonder table ducal crowns in shares; There's Sternberg's lands and chattels are put up, With Egenberg's, Stawata's, Lichtenstein's, And all the great Bohemian feodalities. Be nimble, lad! and something may turn up 10 For thee—who knows? off—to thy place! quick! march! Tiefenbach and Goetz (call out from the second and third tables). Count Piccolomini! Tertsky. Stop, ye shall have him in an instant.—Read This oath here, whether as 'tis here set forth, The wording satisfies you. They've all read it, 15 Each in his turn, and each one will subscribe His individual signature. Max (reads). 'Ingratis servire nefas.' Isolani. That sounds to my ears very much like Latin, And being interpreted, pray what may't mean? 20 Tertsky. No honest man will serve a thankless master. Max. 'Inasmuch as our supreme Commander, the illustrious Duke of Friedland, in consequence of the manifold affronts and grievances which he has received, had expressed his determination to guit the Emperor, but on our unanimous entreaty has graciously consented to remain still with the army, and not to 25 part from us without our approbation thereof, so we, collectively and each in particular, in the stead of an oath personally taken, do hereby oblige ourselves—likewise by him honourably and faithfully to hold, and in nowise whatsoever from him to part, and to be ready to shed for his interests the last drop of 30 our blood, so far, namely, as our oath to the Emperor will permit it. (These last words are repeated by Isolani.) In testimony of which we subscribe our names.' Tertsky. Now!—are you willing to subscribe this paper? Isolani. Why should he not? All officers of honour 35 Can do it, aye, must do it.—Pen and ink here! Tertsky. Nay, let it rest till after meal. Isolani (drawing Max along). Come, Max. [Both seat themselves at their table. LINENOTES: [9] feodalities] feodalties 1800.

Scene IX

TERTSKY, NEUMANN.

Tertsky (beckons to Neumann who is waiting at the side-table, and steps forward with him to the edge of the stage). Have you the copy with you, Neumann? Give it.

It may be changed for the other?

Neumann. I have copied it Letter by letter, line by line; no eye Would e'er discover other difference, Save only the omission of that clause, According to your Excellency's order.

[659]

Tertsky. Right! lay it yonder, and away with this—It has performed its business—to the fire with it—

Neumann lays the copy on the table and steps back again to the side-table.

SCENE X

ILLO (comes out from the second chamber), Tertsky.

Illo. How goes it with young Piccolomini?

Tertsky. All right, I think. He has started no objection.

Illo. He is the only one I fear about— He and his father. Have an eye on both!

Tertsky. How looks it at your table: you forget not To keep them warm and stirring?

Illo. O, quite cordial,
They are quite cordial in the scheme. We have them.
And 'tis as I predicted too. Already
It is the talk, not merely to maintain

The Duke in station. 'Since we're once for all Together and unanimous, why not,' Says Montecuculi, 'aye, why not onward,

10

And make conditions with the Emperor There in his own Vienna?' Trust me, Count, Were it not for these said Piccolomini,

15

We might have spared ourselves the cheat.

And Butler?

How goes it there? Hush!

Tertskv.

[661]

Scene XI

To them enter Butler from the second table.

Butler. Don't disturb yourselves. Field Marshal, I have understood you perfectly. Good luck be to the scheme; and as to me, You may depend upon me.

Illo. May we, Butler?

Butler. With or without the clause, all one to me! You understand me? My fidelity
The Duke may put to any proof—I'm with him!
Tell him so! I'm the Emperor's officer,
As long as 'tis his pleasure to remain
The Emperor's general! and Friedland's servant,
As soon as it shall please him to become
His own lord.

10

Tertsky. You would make a good exchange. No stern economist, no Ferdinand, Is he to whom you plight your services.

15

Butler. I do not put up my fidelity
To sale, Count Tertsky! Half a year ago
I would not have advised you to have made me
An overture to that, to which I now
Offer myself of my own free accord.—
But that is past! and to the Duke, Field Marshal,
I bring myself together with my regiment.
And mark you, 'tis my humour to believe,
The example which I give will not remain
Without an influence.

20

The example which I give will not remain Without an influence.

Illo. Who is ignorant,

25

That the whole army look to Colonel Butler, As to a light that moves before them?

Butler. Ey?

Then I repent me not of that fidelity Which for the length of forty years I held, If in my sixtieth year my old good name Can purchase for me a revenge so full. Start not at what I say, sir Generals! My real motives—they concern not you. And you yourselves, I trust, could not expect That this your game had crooked my judgment—or That fickleness, quick blood, or such light cause, Had driven the old man from the track of honour, Which he so long had trodden.—Come, my friends! I'm not thereto determined with less firmness, Because I know and have looked steadily		30 35
At that on which I have determined.
Illo. Say, And speak roundly, what are we to deem you?		40
Butler. A friend! I give you here my hand! I'm yours With all I have. Not only men, but money Will the Duke want.——Go, tell him, sirs! I've earned and laid up somewhat in his service, I lend it him; and is he my survivor, It has been already long ago bequeathed him. He is my heir. For me, I stand alone, Here in the world; nought know I of the feeling		45
That binds the husband to a wife and children. My name dies with me, my existence ends.		50
Illo. 'Tis not your money that he needs—a heart Like yours weighs tons of gold down, weighs down millions!
Butler. I came a simple soldier's boy from Ireland To Prague—and with a master, whom I buried. From lowest stable-duty I climbed up, Such was the fate of war, to this high rank, The plaything of a whimsical good fortune. And Wallenstein too is a child of luck, I love a fortune that is like my own.		55 60
Illo. All powerful souls have kindred with each other.
Butler. This is an awful moment! to the brave, To the determined, an auspicious moment. The Prince of Weimar arms, upon the Maine To found a mighty dukedom. He of Halberstadt, That Mansfeld, wanted but a longer life To have marked out with his good sword a lordship That should reward his courage. Who of these Equals our Friedland? there is nothing, nothing So high, but he may set the ladder to it!		65 70
Tertsky. That's spoken like a man!		. •
Butler. Do you secure the Spaniard and Italian— I'll be your warrant for the Scotchman Lesly. Come! to the company!
Tertsky. Where is the master of the cellar? Ho! Let the best wines come up. Ho! cheerly, boy! Luck comes to-day, so give her hearty welcome.		75
	[Exeunt, each to his table.

SCENE XII

The Master of the Cellar advancing with Neumann, Servants passing backwards and forwards.

[663]

[664]

Master of the Cellar. The best wine! O! if my old mistress, his lady mother, could but see these wild goings on, she would turn herself round in her grave. Yes, yes, sir officer! 'tis all down the hill with this noble house! no end, no moderation! And this marriage with the Duke's sister, a 5 splendid connection, a very splendid connection! but I tell you, sir officer, it bodes no good. Neumann. Heaven forbid! Why, at this very moment the whole prospect is in bud and blossom! Master of the Cellar. You think so?-Well, well! much 10 may be said on that head. First Servant (comes). Burgundy for the fourth table. Master of the Cellar. Now, sir lieutenant, if this isn't the seventieth flask--First Servant. Why, the reason is, that German lord, 15 Tiefenbach, sits at that table. Master of the Cellar (continuing his discourse to Neumann). They are soaring too high. They would rival kings and electors in their pomp and splendour; and wherever the Duke leaps, not a minute does my gracious master, the Count, loiter on the brink——(To the Servants)—What do 20 you stand there listening for? I will let you know you have legs presently. Off! see to the tables, see to the flasks! Look there! Count Palfi has an empty glass before him! Runner (comes). The great service-cup is wanted, sir; that rich gold cup with the Bohemian arms on it. The Count 25 says you know which it is. Master of the Cellar. Ay! that was made for Frederick's coronation by the artist William—there was not such another prize in the whole booty at Prague. Runner. The same!—a health is to go round in him. 30 Master of the Cellar. This will be something for the tale-bearers—this goes to Vienna. Neumann. Permit me to look at it.—Well, this is a cup indeed! How heavy! as well it may be, being all gold.—And what neat things are embossed on it! how natural 35 and elegant they look! There, on that first quarter, let me see. That proud Amazon there on horseback, she that is taking a leap over the crosier and mitres, and carries on a wand a hat together with a banner, on which there's a goblet represented. Can you tell me what all this signifies? 40 Master of the Cellar. The woman whom you see there on horseback, is the Free Election of the Bohemian Crown. That is signified by the round hat, and by that fiery steed on which she is riding. The hat is the pride of man; for he who cannot keep his hat on before kings and emperors 45 is no free man. Neumann. But what is the cup there on the banner? Master of the Cellar. The cup signifies the freedom of the Bohemian Church, as it was in our forefathers' times. Our forefathers in the wars of the Hussites forced from the Pope 50 this noble privilege: for the Pope, you know, will not grant the cup to any layman. Your true Moravian values nothing beyond the cup; it is his costly jewel, and has cost the Bohemians their precious blood in many and many a battle. Neumann. And what says that chart that hangs in the air 55 there, over it all? Master of the Cellar. That signifies the Bohemian letter royal, which we forced from the Emperor Rudolph—a precious, never to be enough valued parchment that secures to the new Church the old privileges of free ringing and open psalmody. But since he of Steiermärk has ruled over us, that is at an end; and after the battle of Prague, in which Count Palatine Frederick lost crown and empire, our faith hangs upon the pulpit and the altar—and our brethren look at their homes over their shoulders; but the letter royal the Emperor himself cut to pieces with his scissors.	65

Neumann. Why, my good Master of the Cellar! you are deep read in the chronicles of your country!
Master of the Cellar. So were my forefathers, and for that reason were they minstrels, and served under Procopius and Ziska. Peace be with their ashes! Well, well! they fought for a good cause though—There! carry it up!	70
Neumann. Stay! let me but look at this second quarter. Look there! That is, when at Prague Castle the Imperial Counsellors, Martinitz and Stawata were hurled down head over heels. 'Tis even so! there stands Count Thur who commands it.	75
[Runner takes the ser	vice-cup and goes off with it.
Master of the Cellar. O let me never more hear of that day. It was the three and twentieth of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand, six hundred, and eighteen. It seems to me as it were but yesterday—from that unlucky day it all began, all the heart-aches of the country. Since that day it is now sixteen years, and there has never once been peace on the earth.	80
[Health drui	nk aloud at the second table.
The Prince of Weimar! Hurra!
[4	At the third and fourth table.
Long live Prince William! Long live Duke Bernard!	85
Hurra!	[Music strikes up.
First Servant. Hear 'em! Hear 'em! What an uproar!
Second Servant (comes in running). Did you hear? They have drunk the Prince of Weimar's health.
Third Servant. The Swedish Chief Commander!	90
First Servant (speaking at the same time). The Lutheran!
Second Servant. Just before, when Count Deodate gave out the Emperor's health, they were all as mum as a nibbling mouse.
Master of the Cellar. Po, po! When the wine goes in, strange things come out. A good servant hears, and hears not!—You should be nothing but eyes and feet, except when you are called.	95
Second Servant (to the Runner, to whom he gives secretly a flas of wine, keeping his eye on the Master of the Cellar, standing between him and the Runner). Quick, Thomas! before the Master of the Cellar runs this way—'tis a flask of Frontignac!—Snapped it up at the third table.—Canst go off with it?	100
Runner (hides it in his pocket). All right!
	[Exit the Second Servant.
Third Servant (aside to the First). Be on the hark, Jack! that we may have right plenty to tell to father Quivoga—He will give us right plenty of absolution in return for it.	105
First Servant. For that very purpose I am always having something to do behind Illo's chair.—He is the man for speeches to make you stare with!
Master of the Cellar (to Neumann). Who, pray, may that swarthy man be, he with the cross, that is chatting so confidentially with Esterhats?	110
Neumann. Ay! he too is one of those to whom they confide too much. He calls himself Maradas, a Spaniard is he.
Master of the Cellar (impatiently). Spaniard! Spaniard!—I tell you, friend; nothing good comes of those Spaniards. All these out-landish [665:1] fellows are little better than rogues.	115
Neumann, Fv. fv! you should not say so, friend. There are

Master of the Cellar (taking the flask out of the Runner's pocket). My son, it will be broken to pieces in your pocket.

> [Tertsky hurries in, fetches away the paper, and calls to a Servant for pen and ink, and goes to the back of the stage.

Master of the Cellar (to the Servants). The Lieutenant-General stands up.—Be on the watch.—Now! They break up.—Off, and move back the forms.

> [They rise at all the tables, the Servants hurry off the front of the stage to the tables; part of the guests come forward.

FOOTNOTES:

There is a humour in the original which cannot be given in the translation. Our word wallnuts, I suppose, means outlandish nuts—Wallae nuces, in German 'Welschnüsse'.—T.

SCENE XIII

Octavio Piccolomini enters in conversation with Maradas, and both place themselves quite on the edge of the stage on one side of the proscenium. On the side directly opposite, Max Piccolomini, by himself, lost in thought, and taking no part in any thing that is going forward. The middle space between both, but rather more distant from the edge of the stage, is filled up by Butler, Isolani, GOETZ, TIEFENBACH, and KOLATTO.

Isolani (while the company is coming forward). Good night, good night, Kolatto! Good night, Lieutenant-General!—I should rather say, good morning.

Goetz (to Tiefenbach). Noble brother!

Tiefenbach. Ay! 'twas a royal feast indeed.

Goetz. Yes, my Lady Countess understands these matters. Her mother-in-law, heaven rest her soul, taught her!—Ah! that was a housewife for you!

Tiefenbach. There was not her like in all Bohemia for setting out a table.

Octavio (aside to Maradas). Do me the favour to talk to me—talk of what you will—or of nothing. Only preserve the appearance at least of talking. I would not wish to stand by myself, and yet I conjecture that there will be goings on here worthy of our attentive observation.

Isolani (on the point of going). Lights! lights!

Tertsky (advances with the paper to Isolani). Noble brother! two minutes longer!—Here is something to subscribe.

[667] Isolani. Subscribe as much as you like—but you must excuse me from reading it.

Tertsky. There is no need. It is the oath which you have already read.—Only a few marks of your pen!

Tertsky. Nay, nay, precedence here.	first come	first served.	There	is 1	no

[Octavio runs over the paper with apparent indifference. Tertsky watches him at some distance.

Goetz (to Tertsky). Noble Count! with your permission—Good night.

Tertsky. Where's the hurry? Come, one other composing draught. (To the Servants)—Ho!

Goetz. Excuse me—an't able.

Tertsky. A thimble-full!

Goetz. Excuse me.

Tiefenbach (sits down). Pardon me, nobles!—This standing does not agree with me.

Tertsky. Consult only your own convenience, General!

Tiefenbach. Clear at head, sound in stomach—only my legs won't carry me any longer.

Isolani. Poor legs! how should they? Such an unmerciful load!

[Octavio subscribes his name, and reaches over the paper to Tertsky, who gives it to Isolani; and he goes to the table to sign his name.

Tiefenbach. 'Twas that war in Pomerania that first brought it on. Out in all weathers—ice and snow—no help for it.—I shall never get the better of it all the days of my life.

Goetz. Why, in simple verity, your Swede makes no nice enquiries about the season.

Tertsky (observing Isolani, whose hand trembles excessively, so that he can scarce direct his pen). Have you had that ugly complaint long, noble brother?—Dispatch it.

Isolani. The sins of youth! I have already tried the Chalybeate waters. Well—I must bear it.

[Tertsky gives the paper to Maradas; he steps to the table to subscribe.

Octavio (advancing to Butler). You are not over fond of the orgies of Bacchus, Colonel! I have observed it. You would, I think, find yourself more to your liking in the uproar of a battle, than of a feast.

[668] Butler. I must confess, 'tis not in my way.

Octavio. Nor in mine either, I can assure you; and I am not a little glad, my much honoured Colonel Butler, that we agree so well in our opinions. A half dozen good friends at most, at a small round table, a glass of genuine Tokay, open hearts, and a rational conversation—that's my taste!

Butler. And mine too, when it can be had.

[The paper comes to Tiefenbach, who glances over it at the same time with Goetz and Kolatto. Maradas in the mean time returns to Octavio, all this takes place, the conversation with Butler proceeding uninterrupted.

Octavio (introducing Maradas to Butler). Don Balthasar Maradas! likewise a man of our stamp, and long ago your admirer.

Octavio (continuing). You are a stranger here—'twas but yesterday you arrived—you are ignorant of the ways and means here. 'Tis a wretched place—I know, at our age, one loves to be snug and quiet—What if you moved your lodgings?—Come, be my visitor. (Butler makes a low bow.) Nay, without compliment!—For a friend like you, I have still a corner remaining.

Butler. Your obliged humble servant, my Lord Lieutenant-General!

[The paper comes to Butler, who goes to the table to subscribe it.

The front of the stage is vacant, so that both the Piccolominis, each on the side where he had been from the commencement of the scene, remain alone.

Octavio (after having some time watched his son in silence, advances somewhat nearer to him). You were long absent from us, 70 friend! Max. I—urgent business detained me. Octavio. And, I observe, you are still absent! Max. You know this crowd and bustle always makes me 75 silent. Octavio. May I be permitted to ask what business 'twas that detained you? Tertsky knows it without asking! Max. What does Tertsky know? Octavio. He was the only one who did not miss you. [669] Isolani. Well done, father! Rout out his baggage! Beat 80 up his quarters! there is something there that should not be. Tertsky (with the paper). Is there none wanting? Have the whole subscribed? Octavio. All. Tertsky (calling aloud). Ho! Who subscribes? 85 Butler (to Tertsky). Count the names. There ought to be just thirty. Tertsky. Here is a cross. Tiefenbach. That's my mark. Isolani. He cannot write; but his cross is a good cross, and 90 is honoured by Jews as well as Christians. Octavio (presses on to Max). Come, general! let us go. It is late. Tertsky. One Piccolomini only has signed. Isolani (pointing to Max). Look! that is your man, that statue there, who has had neither eye, ear, nor tongue for us the 95 whole evening. ACT III

Scene.—A Chamber in Piccolomini's Mansion.—Night.
Octavio Piccolomini. A Valet de Chambre, with Lights.

Octavio.——And when my son comes in, conduct him hither. What is the hour?

Valet. 'Tis on the point of morning.

Lived in incomprehensible illusion.

Before thine eyes is Treason drawing out
As black a web as e'er was spun for venom:
A power of hell o'erclouds thy understanding.

I dare no longer stand in silence—dare No longer see thee wandering on in darkness, Nor pluck the bandage from thine eyes.

[673]

Octavio. Set down the light. We mean not to undress. You may retire to sleep.

[Exit Valet. Octavio paces, musing, across the chamber; Max Piccolomini enters unobserved, and looks at his father for some moments in silence.

Max. My father! Yet, ere thou speak'st, a moment's pause of thought!
If your disclosures should appear to be Conjectures only—and almost I fear They will be nothing further—spare them! I	45
Am not in that collected mood at present, That I could listen to them quietly.
Octavio. The deeper cause thou hast to hate this light, The more impatient cause have I, my son, To force it on thee. To the innocence And wisdom of thy heart I could have trusted thee	50
With calm assurance—but I see the net Preparing—and it is thy heart itself Alarms me for thine innocence—that secret, Which thou concealest, forces mine from me. Know, then, they are duping thee!—a most foul game	55
With thee and with us all—nay, hear me calmly— The Duke even now is playing. He assumes The mask, as if he would forsake the army; And in this moment makes he preparations That army from the Emperor to steal,	60
And carry it over to the enemy! Max. That low Priest's legend I know well, but did not Expect to hear it from thy mouth.	65
Octavio. That mouth, From which thou hearest it at this present moment, Doth warrant thee that it is no Priest's legend.
Max. How mere a maniac they supposed the Duke! What, he can meditate?—the Duke?—can dream That he can lure away full thirty thousand Tried troops and true, all honourable soldiers, More than a thousand noblemen among them,	70
From oaths, from duty, from their honour lure them, And make them all unanimous to do A deed that brands them scoundrels?	75
Octavio. Such a deed, With such a front of infamy, the Duke
No wise desires—what he requires of us Bears a far gentler appellation. Nothing
He wishes, but to give the Empire peace. And so, because the Emperor hates this peace, Therefore the Duke—the Duke will force him to it. All parts of the Empire will he pacify,	80
And for his trouble will retain in payment (What he has already in his gripe)—Bohemia!	85
Max. Has he, Octavio, merited of us, That we—that we should think so vilely of him?
Octavio. What we would think is not the question here. The affair speaks for itself—and clearest proofs! Hear me, my son—'tis not unknown to thee, In what ill credit with the Court we stand.	90
But little dost thou know, or guess, what tricks, What base intrigues, what lying artifices, Have been employed, for this sale and, to say
Have been employed—for this sole end—to sow Mutiny in the camp! All bands are loosed— Loosed all the bands, that link the officer To his liege Emperor, all that bind the soldier	95
Affectionately to the citizen. Lawless he stands, and threateningly beleaguers The state he's bound to guard. To such a height 'Tis swoln, that at this hour the Emperor	100
Before his armies—his own armies—trembles; Yea, in his capital, his palace, fears The traitor's poniards, and is meditating
To hurry off and hide his tender offspring—— Not from the Swedes, not from the Lutherans— No! from his own troops hide and hurry them!	105
Max. Cease, cease! thou tortur'st, shatter'st me. I know That oft we tremble at an empty terror;
But the false phantasm brings a real misery.	110

[674]

[675]

Octavio. It is no phantasm. An intestine war, Of all the most unnatural and cruel, Will burst out into flames, if instantly We do not fly and stifle it. The Generals Are many of them long ago won over; The subalterns are vacillating—whole Regiments and garrisons are vacillating. To foreigners our strong holds are entrusted; To that suspected Schafgotch is the whole Force of Silesia given up: to Tertsky Five regiments, foot and horse—to Isolani, To Illo, Kinsky, Butler, the best troops.	115 120
Max. Likewise to both of us.
Octavio. Because the Duke Believes he has secured us—means to lure us Still further on by splendid promises. To me he portions forth the princedoms, Glatz And Sagan; and too plain I see the angle With which he doubts not to catch thee.	125
Max. No! no! I tell thee—no!
Octavio. O open yet thine eyes! And to what purpose think'st thou he has called us Hither to Pilsen?—to avail himself Of our advice?—O when did Friedland ever Need our advice?—Be calm, and listen to me.	130
To sell ourselves are we called hither, and, Decline we that—to be his hostages. Therefore doth noble Galas stand aloof; Thy father, too, thou would'st not have seen here, If higher duties had not held him fettered.	135
Max. He makes no secret of it—needs make none— That we're called hither for his sake—he owns it. He needs our aidance to maintain himself— He did so much for us; and 'tis but fair That we too should do somewhat now for him.	140
Octavio. And know'st thou what it is which we must do? That Illo's drunken mood betrayed it to thee. Bethink thyself—what hast thou heard, what seen? The counterfeited paper—the omission Of that particular clause, so full of meaning, Does it not prove, that they would bind us down To nothing good?	145
Max. That counterfeited paper Appears to me no other than a trick Of Illo's own device. These underhand Traders in great men's interests ever use	150
To urge and hurry all things to the extreme. They see the Duke at variance with the court, And fondly think to serve him, when they widen The breach irreparably. Trust me, father, The Duke knows nothing of all this.	155
Octavio. It grieves me That I must dash to earth, that I must shatter A faith so specious; but I may not spare thee! For this is not a time for tenderness. Thou must take measures, speedy ones—must act. I therefore will confess to thee, that all Which I've entrusted to thee now—that all	160
Which seems to thee so unbelievable, That—yes, I will tell thee—Max! I had it all From his own mouth—from the Duke's mouth I had it.	165
Max. No!—no!—never!
Octavio. Himself confided to me What I, 'tis true, had long before discovered By other means—himself confided to me, That 'twas his settled plan to join the Swedes; And, at the head of the united armies, Compel the Emperor—	170

[677]

Max. May I know it?
Octavio (seizes the patent). Max! ——In this disclosure place I in thy hands The Empire's welfare and thy father's life. Dear to thy inmost heart is Wallenstein: A powerful tie of love, of veneration, Hath knit thee to him from thy earliest youth. Thou nourishest the wish.—O let me still Anticipate thy loitering confidence! The hope thou nourishest to knit thyself Yet closer to him——	[A pause. 255
Max. Father——
Octavio. I trust thy heart undoubtingly. But am I Equally sure of thy collectedness? Wilt thou be able, with calm countenance, To enter this man's presence, when that I Have trusted to thee his whole fate?	260
Max. According As thou dost trust me, father, with his crime.	265
[Octavio takes a paper out of his escrutoire, and gives	s it to him.
Max. What? how? a full Imperial patent!
Octavio. Read it.
Max (just glances on it). Duke Friedland sentenced and condemned!
Octavio. Even so.
Max (throws down the paper). O this is too much! O unhappy error!	270
Octavio. Read on. Collect thyself.
Max (after he has read further, with a look of affright and astonishment on hi what! Thou! thou!	is father). How!
Octavio. But for the present moment, till the King Of Hungary may safely join the army, Is the command assigned to me.
Max. And think'st thou, Dost thou believe, that thou wilt tear it from him? O never hope it!—Father! father! father! An inauspicious office is enjoined thee. This paper here—this! and wilt thou enforce it? The mighty in the middle of his host, Surrounded by his thousands, him would'st thou	275 280
Disarm—degrade! Thou art lost, both thou and all of us. Octavio. What hazard I incur thereby, I know. In the great hand of God I stand. The Almighty Will cover with his shield the Imperial house, And shatter, in his wrath, the work of darkness. The Emperor hath true servants still; and even Here in the camp, there are enough brave men,	285

[679]

[680]

Who for the good cause will fight gallantly. The faithful have been warned—the dangerous Are closely watched. I wait but the first step, And then immediately—	290
Max. What! on suspicion? Immediately?
Octavio. The Emperor is no tyrant. The deed alone he'll punish, not the wish. The Duke hath yet his destiny in his power. Let him but leave the treason uncompleted, He will be silently displaced from office, And make way to his Emperor's royal son. An honourable exile to his castles Will be a benefaction to him rather Than punishment. But the first open step——	295 300
Max. What callest thou such a step? A wicked step Ne'er will he take; but thou mightest easily, Yea, thou hast done it, misinterpret him.
Octavio. Nay, howsoever punishable were Duke Friedland's purposes, yet still the steps Which he hath taken openly, permit A mild construction. It is my intention To leave this paper wholly uninforced Till some act is committed which convicts him Of a high-treason, without doubt or plea, And that shall sentence him.	305 310
Max. But who the judge?
Octavio. Thyself.
Max. For ever, then, this paper will lie idle.
Octavio. Too soon, I fear, its powers must all be proved. After the counter-promise of this evening, It cannot be but he must deem himself Secure of the majority with us; And of the army's general sentiment He hath a pleasing proof in that petition Which thou delivered'st to him from the regiments. Add this too—I have letters that the Rhinegrave	315 320
Hath changed his route, and travels by forced marches
To the Bohemian Forest. What this purports, Remains unknown; and, to confirm suspicion, This night a Swedish nobleman arrived here.	325
Max. I have thy word. Thou'lt not proceed to action Before thou hast convinced me—me myself.	020
Octavio. Is it possible? Still, after all thou know'st, Canst thou believe still in his innocence?
Max. Thy judgment may mistake; my heart can not. These reasons might expound thy spirit or mine; But they expound not Friedland—I have faith: For as he knits his fortunes to the stars,	330
Even so doth he resemble them in secret, Wonderful, still inexplicable courses! Trust me, they do him wrong. All will be solved. These smokes, at once, will kindle into flame— The edges of this black and stormy cloud	335
Will brighten suddenly, and we shall view The Unapproachable glide out in splendour.	340
Octavio. I will await it.

Octavio. Ha! Cornet—is it you? and from Count Galas? Give me your letters.

Cornet. The Lieutenant-General Trusted it not to letters.

Sesina, Cornet. The old negotiator. And you have him? 10 Octavio. Cornet. In the Bohemian Forest Captain Mohrbrand Found and secured him yester morning early: He was proceeding then to Regenspurg, And on him were dispatches for the Swede. Octavio. And the dispatches-The Lieutenant-General 15 Sent them that instant to Vienna, and The prisoner with them. This is, indeed, a tiding! That fellow is a precious casket to us, Enclosing weighty things.—Was much found on him? Cornet. I think, six packets, with Count Tertsky's arms. 20 Octavio. None in the Duke's own hand? Cornet. Not that I know. Octavio. And old Sesina? Cornet. He was sorely frightened, When it was told him he must to Vienna. But the Count Altringer bade him take heart, Would he but make a full and free confession. 25 Octavio. Is Altringer then with your Lord? I heard That he lay sick at Linz. Cornet. These three days past He's with my master, the Lieutenant-General, At Frauenberg. Already have they sixty Small companies together, chosen men; 30 Respectfully they greet you with assurances, That they are only waiting your commands. Octavio. In a few days may great events take place. And when must you return? Cornet. I wait your orders. Octavio. Remain till evening. [Cornet signifies his assent and obeisance, and is going. Octavio. No one saw you—ha? 35 Cornet. No living creature. Through the cloister wicket The Capuchins, as usual, let me in. Octavio. Go, rest your limbs, and keep yourself concealed. I hold it probable, that yet ere evening I shall dispatch you. Max. To the Duke. 5 Octavio. What—— Max. If thou hast believed that I shall act A part in this thy play-Thou hast miscalculated on me grievously. My way must be straight on. True with the tongue, 10 False with the heart—I may not, cannot be: Nor can I suffer that a man should trust me-As his friend trust me—and then lull my conscience With such low pleas as these:—'I ask'd him not— He did it all at his own hazard-and 15 My mouth has never lied to him.'-No, no! What a friend takes me for, that I must be. -I'll to the Duke; ere yet this day is ended Will I demand of him that he do save His good name from the world, and with one stride 20 Break through and rend this fine-spun web of yours. He can, he will!—I still am his believer. Yet I'll not pledge myself, but that those letters May furnish you, perchance, with proofs against him. How far may not this Tertsky have proceeded— 25 What may not he himself too have permitted Himself to do, to snare the enemy, The laws of war excusing? Nothing, save His own mouth shall convict him—nothing less! And face to face will I go question him. 30 Octavio. Thou wilt? MaxI will, as sure as this heart beats. Octavio. I have, indeed, miscalculated on thee. I calculated on a prudent son, Who would have blest the hand beneficent That plucked him back from the abyss—and lo! 35 A fascinated being I discover, Whom his two eyes befool, whom passion wilders, Whom not the broadest light of noon can heal. Go, question him!—Be mad enough, I pray thee. 40 The purpose of thy father, of thy Emperor, Go, give it up free booty:—Force me, drive me To an open breach before the time. And now, Now that a miracle of heaven had guarded My secret purpose even to this hour, And laid to sleep Suspicion's piercing eyes, 45 Let me have lived to see that mine own son, With frantic enterprise, annihilates My toilsome labours and state-policy. Max. Aye—this state-policy! O how I curse it! You will some time, with your state-policy, 50 Compel him to the measure: it may happen, Because ye are determined that he is guilty, Guilty ve'll make him. All retreat cut off, You close up every outlet, hem him in Narrower and narrower, till at length ye force him— 55 Yes, ye,—ye force him, in his desperation, To set fire to his prison. Father! Father! That never can end well—it cannot—will not!

ACT IV

Scene I

Scene—A Room fitted up for astrological Labours, and provided with celestial Charts, with Globes, Telescopes, Quadrants, and other mathematical Instruments.—Seven Colossal Figures, representing the Planets, each with a transparent Star of a different Colour on its Head, stand in a Semi-circle in the Back-ground, so that Mars and Saturn are nearest the Eye.—The remainder of the Scene, and its Disposition, is given in the Fourth Scene of the Second Act.-There must be a Curtain over the Figures, which may be dropped, and conceal them on Occasions.

[In the Fifth Scene of this Act it must be dropped; but in the Seventh Scene, it must be again drawn up wholly or in part.]

No longer draw back at my liking? I
Must do the deed, because I thought of it,
And fed this heart here with a dream? Because	5
I did not scowl temptation from my presence,
Dallied with thoughts of possible fulfilment,
Commenced no movement, left all time uncertain,
And only kept the road, the access open?
By the great God of Heaven! it was not	10
My serious meaning, it was ne'er resolve.
I but amused myself with thinking of it.
The free-will tempted me, the power to do
Or not to do it.—Was it criminal
To make the fancy minister to hope,	15
To fill the air with pretty toys of air,
And clutch fantastic sceptres moving t'ward me?
Was not the will kept free? Beheld I not
The road of duty close beside me—but
One little step, and once more I was in it!	20
Where am I? Whither have I been transported?
No road, no track behind me, but a wall,
Impenetrable, insurmountable,
Rises obedient to the spells I muttered
And meant not—my own doings tower behind me.	25
A punishable man I seem, the guilt,
Try what I will, I cannot roll off from me;
The equivocal demeanour of my life
Bears witness on my prosecutor's party;
And even my purest acts from purest motives	30
Suspicion poisons with malicious gloss.	30
Were I that thing, for which I pass, that traitor,
A goodly outside I had sure reserved,
Had drawn the coverings thick and double round me,
Been calm and chary of my utterance.	35
But being conscious of the innocence	55
Of my intent, my uncorrupted will,
I gave way to my humours, to my passion:
Bold were my words, because my deeds were not.
Now every planless measure, chance event,	40
The threat of rage, the vaunt of joy and triumph,	40
And all the May-games of a heart o'erflowing,
Will they connect, and weave them all together
Into one web of treason; all will be plan,
My eye ne'er absent from the far-off mark,	45
Step tracing step, each step a politic progress;	43
And out of all they'll fabricate a charge
So specious, that I must myself stand dumb.
I am caught in my own net, and only force,	FO
Naught but a sudden rent can liberate me.	50
How else! since that the heart's unbiass'd instinct
Impelled me to the daring deed, which now
Necessity, self-preservation, orders.
Stern is the On-look of Necessity,
Not without shudder many a human hand	55
Grasps the mysterious urn of destiny.
My deed was mine, remaining in my bosom,
Once suffered to escape from its safe corner
Within the heart, its nursery and birthplace,
Sent forth into the Foreign, it belongs	60
For ever to those sly malicious powers
Whom never art of man conciliated.
What is thy enterprize? thy aim? thy object?
Hast honestly confessed it to thyself?
Power seated on a quiet throne thou'dst shake,	65
Power on an ancient consecrated throne,
Strong in possession, founded in old custom;
Power by a thousand tough and stringy roots
Fixed to the people's pious nursery-faith.
This, this will be no strife of strength with strength.	70
That feared I not. I brave each combatant,	70
Whom I can look on, fixing eye to eye,
Who full himself of courage kindles courage
In me too. 'Tis a foe invisible,	7-
The which I fear—a fearful enemy,	75
Which in the human heart opposes me,
By its coward fear alone made fearful to me.
Not that, which full of life, instinct with power,
Makes known its present being, that is not

Wallenstein. I will explain that to you, how it stands— The Austrian has a country, ay, and loves it, And has good cause to love it—but this army, That calls itself the Imperial, this that houses Here in Bohemia, this has none—no country; This is an outcast of all foreign lands, Unclaimed by town or tribe, to whom belongs Nothing, except the universal sun.	85 90
Wrangel. But then the Nobles and the Officers? Such a desertion, such a felony, It is without example, my Lord Duke, In the world's history.
Wallenstein. They are all mine— Mine unconditionally—mine on all terms. Not me, your own eyes you must trust.	95
[He gives him the paper containing the written oath. Wrangel reads it through, and, having read it, lays it on the table, remaining silent.
So then? Now comprehend you?
Wrangel. Comprehend who can! My Lord Duke; I will let the mask drop—yes! I've full powers for a final settlement. The Rhinegrave stands but four days' march from here With fifteen thousand men, and only waits For orders to proceed and join your army. Those orders I give out, immediately We're compromised.	100
Wallenstein. What asks the Chancellor?
Wrangel. Twelve Regiments, every man a Swede—my head The warranty—and all might prove at last Only false play—	105
Wallenstein (starting). Sir Swede!
Wrangel. Am therefore forced T' insist thereon, that he do formally, Irrevocably break with the Emperor, Else not a Swede is trusted to Duke Friedland.	110
Wallenstein. Come, brief and open! What is the demand?
Wrangel. That he forthwith disarm the Spanish regiments Attached to the Emperor, that he seize Prague, And to the Swedes give up that city, with The strong pass Egra.
Wallenstein. That is much indeed! Prague!—Egra's granted—But—but Prague!—'Twon't do. I give you every security Which you may ask of me in common reason— But Prague—Bohemia—these, Sir General, I can myself protect.	115
Wrangel. We doubt it not. But 'tis not the protection that is now Our sole concern. We want security, That we shall not expend our men and money All to no purpose.	120
Wallenstein. 'Tis but reasonable.
Wrangel. And till we are indemnified, so long Stays Prague in pledge.	125

Then trust you us so little?

Wallenstein.

[700]	I see how all will end. The King of Hungary Makes his appearance, and 'twill of itself Be understood, that then the Duke retires.	55
	There will not want a formal declaration. The young King will administer the oath To the whole army; and so all returns
	To the old position. On some morrow morning The Duke departs; and now 'tis stir and bustle Within his castles. He will hunt, and build,	60

	If so I may avoid the last extreme; But ere I sink down into nothingness, Leave off so little, who began so great,
	Ere that the world confuses me with those Poor wretches, whom a day creates and crumbles, This age and after-ages ^[701:1] speak my name	100

	Countess. What is there here, then, So against nature? Help me to perceive it! O let not Superstition's nightly goblins	105
	Subdue thy clear bright spirit! Art thou bid To murder?—with abhorr'd accurséd poniard, To violate the breasts that nourished thee?
	That were against our nature, that might aptly Make thy flesh shudder, and thy whole heart sicken. [701:2]	110
	Yet not a few, and for a meaner object, Have ventured even this, ay, and performed it. What is there in thy case so black and monstrous?

	I nou art accused of treason—whether with	115
	Or without justice is not now the question— Thou art lest if they does not awail they guidely
	Thou art lost if thou dost not avail thee quickly Of the power which thou possessest—Friedland! Duke!
	Tell me, where lives that thing so meek and tame,
	That doth not all his living faculties	120
	Put forth in preservation of his life?	120
	What deed so daring, which necessity
	And desperation will not sanctify?
	Wallenstein. Once was this Ferdinand so gracious to me:
[702]	He loved me; he esteemed me; I was placed	125
	The nearest to his heart. Full many a time
	We like familiar friends, both at one table,
	Have banquetted together. He and I—
	And the young kings themselves held me the bason	100
	Wherewith to wash me—and is't come to this?	130
	Countess. So faithfully preserv'st thou each small favour,
	And hast no memory for contumelies?
	Must I remind thee, how at Regenspurg
	This man repaid thy faithful services?
	All ranks and all conditions in the Empire	135
	Thou hadst wronged, to make him great,—hadst loaded on thee,	 100
	On thee, the hate, the curse of the whole world.
	No friend existed for thee in all Germany,
	And why? because thou hadst existed only
	For the Emperor. To the Emperor alone	140
	Clung Friedland in that storm which gathered round him
	At Regenspurg in the Diet—and he dropped thee!
	He let thee fall! He let thee fall a victim
	To the Bavarian, to that insolent!
	Deposed, stript bare of all thy dignity	145
	And power, amid the taunting of thy foes,
	Thou wert let drop into obscurity.—
	Say not, the restoration of thy honour
	Hath made atonement for that first injustice.
	No honest good-will was it that replaced thee,	150

	I shall therein abuse no confidence.
	Countess. Affection! confidence!—They needed thee.
	Necessity, impetuous remonstrant!
	Who not with empty names, or shews of proxy,
	Is served, who'll have the thing and not the symbol,	160
	Ever seeks out the greatest and the best,
	And at the rudder places him, e'en though
	She had been forced to take him from the rabble—
	She, this Necessity, it was that placed thee
	In this high office, it was she that gave thee	165
[703]	Thy letters patent of inauguration.
	For, to the uttermost moment that they can.
	This race still help themselves at cheapest rate
	With slavish souls, with puppets! At the approach
	Of extreme peril, when a hollow image	170
	Is found a hollow image and no more,
	Then falls the power into the mighty hands
	Of Nature, of the spirit giant-born,
	Who listens only to himself, knows nothing
	Of stipulations, duties, reverences	175
	And, like the emancipated force of fire,
	Unmastered scorches, ere it reaches them,
	Their fine-spun webs, their artificial policy.
	Wallanctain Tie true they come as levere as I am
	Wallenstein. 'Tis true! they saw me always as I am—	180
	Always! I did not cheat them in the bargain. I never held it worth my pains to hide	180
	The bold all-grasping habit of my soul.
	The bold all-grasping habit of my sour.
	Countess. Nay rather—thou hast ever shewn thyself
	A formidable man, without restraint;
	Hast exercised the full prerogatives	185
	Of thy impetuous nature, which had been

	Who has still remained consistant with threaff
	Who hast still remained consistent with thyself, But they are in the wrong, who fearing thee,
	Entrusted such a power in hands they feared.	190
	For, by the laws of Spirit, in the right	130
	Is every individual character
	That acts in strict consistence with itself.
	Self-contradiction is the only wrong.
	Wert thou another being, then, when thou	195
	Eight years ago pursuedst thy march with fire
	And sword, and desolation, through the Circles
	Of Germany, the universal scourge,
	Didst mock all ordinances of the empire,
	The fearful rights of strength alone exertedst,	200
	Trampledst to earth each rank, each magistracy,
	All to extend thy Sultan's domination?
	Then was the time to break thee in, to curb
	Thy haughty will, to teach thee ordinance.
	But no! the Emperor felt no touch of conscience,	205
	What served him pleased him, and without a murmur
	He stamped his broad seal on these lawless deeds.
[704]	What at that time was right, because thou didst it
	For him, to-day is all at once become
	Opprobrious, foul, because it is directed	210
	Against him.—O most flimsy superstition!
	Wallenstein (rising). I never saw it in this light before.
	'Tis even so. The Emperor perpetrated
	Deeds through my arm, deeds most unorderly.
	And even this prince's mantle, which I wear,	215
	I owe to what were services to him,
	But most high misdemeanours 'gainst the empire.
	Countess. Then betwixt thee and him (confess it, Friedland!)
	The point can be no more of right and duty,	220
	Only of power and opportunity.	220
	That opportunity, lo! it comes yonder,
	Approaching with swift steeds; then with a swing
	Throw thyself up into the chariot-seat,
	Seize with firm hand the reins, ere thy opponent	225
	Anticipate thee, and himself make conquest	225
	Of the now empty seat. The moment comes—
	It is already here, when thou must write
	The absolute total of thy life's vast sum.
	The constellations stand victorious o'er thee,	າາຕ
	The planets shoot good fortune in fair junctions,	230
	And tell thee, 'Now's the time!' The starry courses Hast thou thy life long measured to no purpose?
	The quadrant and the circle, were they playthings?
	Pointing to the different objects in the room	,
	The zodiacs, the rolling orbs of heaven,	i.
	Hast pictured on these walls, and all around thee	235
	In dumb, foreboding symbols hast thou placed	200
	These seven presiding Lords of Destiny—
	For toys? Is all this preparation nothing?
	Is there no marrow in this hollow art,
	That even to thyself it doth avail	240
	Nothing, and has no influence over thee	210
	In the great moment of decision?—— in the grout memons of accidion.
	Wallenstein (interrupting the Countess). Send Wrangel to me—I will instantly
	Dispatch three couriers—
[705]	Illo (hurrying out). God in heaven be praised!
	Wallangtoin It is his oxil ganius and mine	245
	Wallenstein. It is his evil genius and mine.	245
	Our evil genius! It chastises him
	Through me, the instrument of his ambition;
	And I expect no less, than that Revenge
	E'en now is whetting for my breast the poniard.	250
	Who sows the serpent's teeth, let him not hope	250
	To reap a joyous harvest. Every crime
	Has, in the moment of its perpetration,
	Its own avenging angel—dark misgiving,
	An ominous sinking at the inmost heart.	255
	He can no longer trust me—Then no longer Can I retreat—so come that which must come.—	230
	Still destiny preserves its due relations, oun desainy preserves its due relations,

The heart within us is its absolute Vicegerent. [To Tertsky. Go, conduct you Gustave Wrangel 260 To my state-cabinet. Myself will speak to The couriers.—And dispatch immediately A servant for Octavio Piccolomini. [To the Countess. No exultation—woman, triumph not! For jealous are the Powers of Destiny. Joy premature, and shouts ere victory, 265 Incroach upon their rights and privileges. We sow the seed, and they the growth determine. [While he is making his exit the curtain drops.

FOOTNOTES:

Could I have hazarded such a Germanism as the use of the word 'after-world' for posterity, 'Es spreche Welt und Nachwelt meinen Nahmen' might have been rendered with more literal fidelity:

'Let world and after-world speak out my name,' &c.

1800, 1828, 1829.

[701:2]I have not ventured to affront the fastidious delicacy of our age with a literal translation of this line:

ACT V

Scene I

Wallenstein (coming forward in conversation). He sends me word from Linz, that he lies sick; But I have sure intelligence, that he Secretes himself at Frauenberg with Galas. Secure them both, and send them to me hither. Remember, thou tak'st on thee the command 5 Of those same Spanish regiments,—constantly Make preparation, and be never ready; And if they urge thee to draw out against me, Still answer yes, and stand as thou wert fettered. I know, that it is doing thee a service 10 To keep thee out of action in this business. Thou lovest to linger on in fair appearances; Steps of extremity are not thy province, Therefore have I sought out this part for thee. Thou wilt this time be of most service to me 15 By thy inertness. The mean time, if fortune Declare itself on my side, thou wilt know What is to do. Enter Max Piccolomini. Now go, Octavio. This night must thou be off, take my own horses: Him here I keep with me-make short farewell-20 Trust me, I think we all shall meet again In joy and thriving fortunes.

Octavio (to his son). I shall see you Yet ere I go.

Scene II

WALLENSTEIN, MAX PICCOLOMINI.

Max (advances to him). My General!

Wallenstein. That am I no longer, if Thou styl'st thyself the Emperor's officer.

Max. Then thou wilt leave the army, General?

We'll join the Swedes—right gallant fellows are they,

And our good friends.

Wallenstein. I have renounced the service of the Emperor.

Max. And thou wilt leave the army?

5 Wallenstein Rather hope I To bind it nearer still and faster to me. [He seats himself. Yes, Max, I have delayed to open it to thee, Even till the hour of acting 'gins to strike. Youth's fortunate feeling doth seize easily The absolute right, yea, and a joy it is 10 To exercise the single apprehension Where the sums square in proof; But where it happens, that of two sure evils One must be taken, where the heart not wholly Brings itself back from out the strife of duties, 15 There 'tis a blessing to have no election, And blank necessity is grace and favour. -This is now present: do not look behind thee.-It can no more avail thee. Look thou forwards! Think not! judge not! prepare thyself to act! 20 The Court—it hath determined on my ruin, Therefore I will to be beforehand with them.

[707]

I have ta'en thee by surprise. Answer me not. I grant thee time to recollect thyself.	25
[He rises, and retires at the back of the stage. Max remains for a long time motionless, in a trance of excessive anguish. At his first motion Wallenstein returns, and places himself before him.
Max. My General, this day thou makest me Of age to speak in my own right and person, For till this day I have been spared the trouble To find out my own road. Thee have I followed With most implicit unconditional faith, Sure of the right path if I followed thee. To-day, for the first time, dost thou refer	30
Me to myself, and forcest me to make Election between thee and my own heart.	35
Wallenstein. Soft cradled thee thy Fortune till to-day; Thy duties thou couldst exercise in sport, Indulge all lovely instincts, act for ever With undivided heart. It can remain
No longer thus. Like enemies, the roads Start from each other. Duties strive with duties. Thou must needs choose thy party in the war Which is now kindling 'twixt thy friend and him Who is thy Emperor.	40
Max. War! is that the name? War is as frightful as heaven's pestilence. Yet it is good, is it heaven's will as that is. Is that a good war, which against the Emperor Thou wagest with the Emperor's own army?	45
O God of heaven! what a change is this. Beseems it me to offer such persuasion To thee, who like the fixed star of the pole Wert all I gazed at on life's trackless ocean? O! what a rent thou makest in my heart!	50
The ingrained instinct of old reverence. The holy habit of obediency, Must I pluck live asunder from thy name? Nay, do not turn thy countenance upon me— It always was as a god looking at me!	55
Duke Wallenstein, its power is not departed: The senses still are in thy bonds, although, Bleeding, the soul hath freed itself.	60
Wallenstein. Max, hear me.
Max. O! do it not, I pray thee, do it not! There is a pure and noble soul within thee, Knows not of this unblest, unlucky doing.
Thy will is chaste, it is thy fancy only Which hath polluted thee—and innocence, It will not let itself be driven away From that world-awing aspect. Thou wilt not,	65
Thou canst not, end in this. It would reduce All human creatures to disloyalty Against the nobleness of their own nature. 'Twill justify the vulgar misbelief, Which holdeth nothing noble in free will, And trusts itself to impotence alone	70
Made powerful only in an unknown power. Wallenstein. The world will judge me sternly, I expect it.	75
Already have I said to my own self All thou canst say to me. Who but avoids The extreme,—can he by going round avoid it? But here there is no choice. Yes—I must use Or suffer violence—so stands the case, There remains nothing possible but that.	80
Max. O that is never possible for thee! 'Tis the last desperate resource of those Cheap souls, to whom their honour, their good name Is their poor saving, their last worthless keep, Which having staked and lost, they stake themselves In the mad rage of gaming. Thou art rich, And glorious; with an unpolluted heart	85
. J,

[708]

	Thou canst make conquest of whate'er seems highest!	90
	But he, who once hath acted infamy,
	Does nothing more in this world.
	Wallenstein (grasps his hand). Calmly, Max!
709]	Much that is great and excellent will we
	Perform together yet. And if we only	0.5
	Stand on the height with dignity, 'tis soon	95
	Forgotten, Max, by what road we ascended. Believe me, many a crown shines spotless now,
	That yet was deeply sullied in the winning.
	To the evil spirit doth the earth belong,
	Not to the good. All, that the powers divine	100
	Send from above, are universal blessings:
	Their light rejoices us, their air refreshes,
	But never yet was man enriched by them:
	In their eternal realm no property Is to be struggled for—all there is general.	105
	The jewel, the all-valued gold we win	103
	From the deceiving Powers, depraved in nature,
	That dwell beneath the day and blessed sun-light.
	Not without sacrifices are they rendered
	Propitious, and there lives no soul on earth	110
	That e'er retired unsullied from their service.
	Max. Whate'er is human, to the human being
	Do I allow—and to the vehement
	And striving spirit readily I pardon
	The excess of action; but to thee, my General!	115
	Above all others make I large concession.
	For thou must move a world, and be the master—
	He kills thee, who condemns thee to inaction. So be it then! maintain thee in thy post
	By violence. Resist the Emperor,	120
	And if it must be, force with force repel:	120
	I will not praise it, yet I can forgive it.
	But not—not to the traitor—yes!—the word
	Is spoken out—	40=
	Not to the traitor can I yield a pardon.	125
	That is no mere excess! that is no error Of human nature—that is wholly different,
	O that is black, black as the pit of hell!
	Thou canst not hear it nam'd, and wilt thou do it?
	O turn back to thy duty. That thou canst,	130
	I hold it certain. Send me to Vienna.
	I'll make thy peace for thee with the Emperor.
[710]	He knows thee not. But I do know thee. He
	Shall see thee, Duke! with my unclouded eye,	125
	And I bring back his confidence to thee.	135
	Wallenstein. It is too late. Thou knowest not what has happened.
	Max. Were it too late, and were things gone so far,
	That a crime only could prevent thy fall, Then—fall! fall honourably, even as thou stood'st.
	Lose the command. Go from the stage of war.	140
	Thou canst with splendour do it—do it too	110
	With innocence. Thou hast liv'd much for others,
	At length live thou for thy own self. I follow thee.
	My destiny I never part from thine.
	Wallenstein. It is too late! Even now, while thou art losing	145
	Thy words, one after the other are the mile-stones	145
	Left fast behind by my post couriers,
	Who bear the order on to Prague and Egra.
	Yield thyself to it. We act as we are forced.
	I cannot give assent to my own shame	150
	And ruin. Thou—no—thou canst not forsake me!
	So let us do, what must be done, with dignity,
	With a firm step. What am I doing worse Than did famed Cæsar at the Rubicon,
	When he the legions led against his country,	155
	The which his country had delivered to him?	130
	Had he thrown down the sword, he had been lost,
	As I were, if I but disarmed myself.
	I trace out something in me of his spirit.
	Give me his luck, that other thing I'll bear.	160

 ${\it Wallenstein.}$ It must be he, whom I myself have chosen; He is well fitted for the business. Therefore I gave it him.

I gave it him.
Illo. Because he's an Italian— Therefore is he well fitted for the business.	30
Wallenstein. I know you love them not—nor sire nor son— Because that I esteem them, love them—visibly Esteem them, love them more than you and others, E'en as they merit. Therefore are they eye-blights, Thorns in your foot-path. But your jealousies, In what affect they me or my concerns? Are they the worse to me because you hate them? Love or hate one another as you will, I leave to each man his own moods and likings; Yet know the worth of each of you to me.	3 5
Illo. Von Questenberg, while he was here, was always Lurking about with this Octavio.
Wallenstein. It happened with my knowledge and permission.
Illo. I know that secret messengers came to him From Galas——	45
Wallenstein. That's not true.
Illo. O thou art blind With thy deep-seeing eyes.
Wallenstein. Thou wilt not shake My faith for me—my faith, which founds itself On the profoundest science. If 'tis false, Then the whole science of the stars is false. For know, I have a pledge from fate itself, That he is the most faithful of my friends.	50
Illo. Hast thou a pledge, that this pledge is not false?
Wallenstein. There exist moments in the life of man, When he is nearer the great soul of the world Than is man's custom, and possesses freely The power of questioning his destiny:	55
And such a moment 'twas, when in the night Before the action in the plains of Lützen, Leaning against a tree, thoughts crowding thoughts, I looked out far upon the ominous plain.	60
My whole life, past and future, in this moment Before my mind's eye glided in procession, And to the destiny of the next morning The spirit, filled with anxious presentiment, Did knit the most removed futurity.	65
Then said I also to myself, 'So many Dost thou command. They follow all thy stars, And as on some great number set their All Upon thy single head, and only man	70
The vessel of thy fortune. Yet a day Will come, when destiny shall once more scatter All these in many a several direction:	70
Few be they who will stand out faithful to thee.' I yearn'd to know which one was faithfullest Of all, this camp included. Great Destiny, Give me a sign! And he shall be the man, Who, on the approaching morning, comes the first	75
To meet me with a token of his love: And thinking this, I fell into a slumber. Then midmost in the battle was I led In spirit. Great the pressure and the tumult! Then was my horse killed under me: I sank:	80
And over me away, all unconcernedly, Drove horse and rider—and thus trod to pieces I lay, and panted like a dying man. Then seized me suddenly a saviour arm; It was Octavio's—I awoke at once, 'Twas broad day, and Octavio stood before me.	85

Which I have chosen for thee. Do it, brother! In love to me. A strong dream warned me so.' It was the swiftness of this horse that snatched me From the hot pursuit of Bannier's dragoons. My cousin rode the dapple on that day. And never more saw I or horse or rider.	95
Illo. That was a chance.
Wallenstein. There's no such thing as chance. In brief, 'tis signed and sealed that this Octavio Is my good angel—and now no word more. [He is reti	iring.
Tertsky. This is my comfort—Max remains our hostage.	100
Illo. And he shall never stir from here alive.
Wallenstein (stops and turns himself round). Are ye not like the women, who for every only recur to their first word, although One had been talking reason by the hour? Know, that the human being's thoughts and deeds Are not, like ocean billows, blindly moved. The inner world, his microcosmus, is The deep shaft, out of which they spring eternally. They grow by certain laws, like the tree's fruit— No juggling chance can metamorphose them. Have I the human kernel first examined? Then I know, too, the future will and action.	er 105 110

Scene—A Chamber in Piccolomini's Dwelling-House.
Octavio Piccolomini, Isolani (entering).
Isolani. Here am I—Well! who comes yet of the others?
Octavio. But, first, a word with you, Count Isolani.
Isolani. Will it explode, ha?—Is the Duke about To make the attempt? In me, friend, you may place Full confidence.—Nay, put me to the proof.	5
Octavio. That may happen.
Isolani. Noble brother, I am Not one of those men who in words are valiant, And when it comes to action skulk away. The Duke has acted towards me as a friend. God knows it is so; and I owe him all— He may rely on my fidelity.	10
Octavio. That will be seen hereafter.
Isolani. Be on your guard, All think not as I think; and there are many Who still hold with the Court—yes, and they say That those stolen signatures bind them to nothing.	15
Octavio. I am rejoiced to hear it.

You rejoice!

Isolani.

[714]

Octavio. That the Emperor has yet such gallant servants And loving friends.
Isolani. Nay, jeer not, I entreat you. They are no such worthless fellows, I assure you.
Octavio. I am assured already. God forbid That I should jest!—In very serious earnest I am rejoiced to see an honest cause So strong.	20
Isolani. The Devil!—what!—why, what means this? Are you not, then——For what, then, am I here?
Octavio. That you may make full declaration, whether You will be called the friend or enemy Of the Emperor.	25
Isolani. That declaration, friend, I'll make to him in whom a right is placed To put that question to me.
Octavio. Whether, Count, That right is mine, this paper may instruct you.	30
Isolani. Why,—why—what! This is the Emperor's hand and seal!	[Reads.
'Whereas the officers collectively Throughout our army will obey the orders Of the Lieutenant-General Piccolomini As from ourselves.'—Hem!—Yes! so!—Yes! yes!— I—I give you joy, Lieutenant-General!	35
Octavio. And you submit you to the order?
Isolani. I—— But you have taken me so by surprise— Time for reflection one must have——
Octavio. Two minutes.	40
Isolani. My God! But then the case is——
Octavio. Plain and simple. You must declare you, whether you determine To act a treason 'gainst your Lord and Sovereign, Or whether you will serve him faithfully.
Isolani. Treason!—My God!—But who talks then of treason?	45
Octavio. That is the case. The Prince-Duke is a traitor—Means to lead over to the enemy The Emperor's army.—Now, Count!—brief and full—Say, will you break your oath to the Emperor?
Sell yourself to the enemy?—Say, will you?	50
Isolani. What mean you? I—I break my oath, d'ye say, To his Imperial Majesty? Did I say so?—When, when have I said that?
Octavio. You have not said it yet—not yet. This instant I wait to hear, Count, whether you will say it.	55
Isolani. Aye! that delights me now, that you yourself Bear witness for me that I never said so.
Octavio. And you renounce the Duke then?
Isolani. If he's planning Treason—why, treason breaks all bonds asunder.
Octavio. And are determined, too, to fight against him?	60
Isolani. He has done me service—but if he's a villain, Perdition seize him!—All scores are rubbed off.
Octavio. I am rejoiced that you're so well disposed. This night break off in the utmost secrecy With all the light-armed troops—it must appear As came the order from the Duke himself.	65

A TRAGEDY

IN FIVE ACTS

PREFACE OF THE TRANSLATOR

TO THE FIRST EDITION

The two Dramas, Piccolomini, or the first part of Wallenstein, and Wallenstein, are introduced in the original manuscript by a Prelude in one Act, entitled Wallenstein's CAMP. This is written in rhyme, and in nine-syllable verse, in the same lilting metre (if that expression may be permitted) with the second Ecloque of Spenser's Shepherd's Calendar.

10

This Prelude possesses a sort of broad humour, and is not deficient in character; but to have translated it into prose, or into any other metre than that of the original, would have given a false notion both of its style and purport; to have translated it into the same metre would have been incompatible with a faithful adherence to the sense of the German, from the comparative poverty of our language in rhymes; and it would have been unadvisable from the incongruity of those lax verses with the present taste of the English Public. Schiller's intention seems to have been merely to have prepared his reader for the Tragedies by a lively picture of the laxity of discipline, and the mutinous dispositions of Wallenstein's soldiery. It is not necessary as a preliminary explanation. For these reasons it has been thought expedient not to translate it.

20

The admirers of Schiller, who have abstracted their conception of that author from the Robbers, and the Cabal and Love, plays in which the main interest is produced by the excitement of curiosity, and in which the curiosity is excited by terrible and extraordinary incident, will not have perused without some portion of disappointment the Dramas, which it has been my employment to translate. They should, however, reflect that these are Historical Dramas, taken from a popular German History; that we must therefore judge of them in some measure with the feelings of Germans; or by analogy, with the interest excited in us by similar Dramas in our own language. Few, I trust, would be rash or ignorant enough to compare Schiller with Shakspeare yet, merely as illustration, I would say that we should proceed to the perusal of Wallenstein, not from Lear or Othello, but from Richard the Second, or the three parts of Henry the Sixth. We scarcely expect rapidity in an Historical Drama; and many prolix speeches are pardoned from characters, whose names and actions have formed the most amusing tales of our early life. On the other hand, there exist in these plays more individual beauties, more passages the excellence of which will bear reflection, than in the former productions of Schiller. The description of the Astrological Tower, and the reflections of the Young Lover, which follow it, form in the original a fine poem; and my translation must have been wretched indeed, if it can have wholly overclouded the beauties of the Scene in the first Act of the first Play between Ouestenberg, Max, and Octavio Piccolomini. If we except the Scene of the setting sun in the Robbers, I know of no part in Schiller's Plays which equals the whole of the first Scene of the fifth Act of the concluding Play. It would be unbecoming in me to be more diffuse on this subject. A Translator stands connected with the original Author by a certain law of subordination, which makes it more decorous to point out excellencies than defects: indeed he is not likely to be a fair judge of either. The pleasure or disgust from his own labour will mingle with the feelings that arise from an afterview of the original. Even in the first perusal of a work in any foreign language which we understand, we are apt to attribute to it more excellence than it really possesses from our own pleasurable sense of difficulty overcome without effect.

[725]

Translator must give a brilliancy to his language without that warmth

Translation of poetry into poetry is difficult, because the

40

of original conception, from which such brilliancy would follow of its own accord. But the translator of a living Author is encumbered with additional inconveniences. If he render his original faithfully, as to the sense of each passage, he must necessarily destroy a considerable portion of the spirit; if he endeavour to give a work executed according to laws of compensation, he subjects himself to imputations of vanity, or misrepresentation. I have thought it my duty to remain bound by the sense of my original, with as few exceptions as the nature of the languages rendered possible.

THE DEATH OF WALLENSTEIN

ACT I

Scene I

Scene—A Chamber in the House of the Duchess of Friedland.

Countess (watching them from the opposite side). So you have nothing, niece, to ask me? Nothing? I have been waiting for a word from you. And could you then endure in all this time Not once to speak his name? [The Countess rises and advances to her. Why, how comes this? Perhaps I am already grown superfluous, 5 And other ways exist, besides through me? Confess it to me, Thekla! have you seen him? Thekla. To-day and yesterday I have not seen him. Countess. And not heard from him either? Come, be open! Thekla. No syllable. Countess. 10 And still you are so calm? Thekla. I am. Countess. May't please you, leave us, Lady Neubrunn! [Exit Lady Neubrunn. Thekla. Exactly at this time? He now knows all. Countess. Twere now the moment to declare himself. Thekla. If I'm to understand you, speak less darkly. 5 Countess. 'Twas for that purpose that I bade her leave us. Thekla, you are no more a child. Your heart Is now no more in nonage: for you love, And boldness dwells with love—that you have proved. Your nature moulds itself upon your father's 10 More than your mother's spirit. Therefore may you Hear, what were too much for her fortitude. Thekla. Enough! no further preface, I entreat you. At once, out with it! Be it what it may, It is not possible that it should torture me 15 More than this introduction. What have you To say to me? Tell me the whole and briefly! Countess. You'll not be frightened— Name it, I entreat you. Thekla. Countess. It lies within your power to do your father A weighty service— Thekla. Lies within my power? 20 Countess. Max Piccolomini loves you. You can link him Indissolubly to your father. Thekla. 13 What need of me for that? And is he not Already linked to him? Countess. He was. Thekla. And wherefore

[727]

Should he not be so now—not be so always?	25
Countess. He cleaves to the Emperor too.
Thekla. Not more than duty And honour may demand of him.
Countess. We ask Proofs of his love, and not proofs of his honour. Duty and honour! Those are ambiguous words with many meanings. You should interpret them for him: his love Should be the sole definer of his honour.	30
Thekla. How?
Countess. The Emperor or you must he renounce.
Thekla. He will accompany my father gladly In his retirement. From himself you heard, How much he wished to lay aside the sword.	35
Countess. He must not lay the sword aside, we mean; He must unsheath it in your father's cause.
Thekla. He'll spend with gladness and alacrity His life, his heart's blood in my father's cause, If shame or injury be intended him.	40
Countess. You will not understand me. Well, hear then! Your father has fallen off from the Emperor, And is about to join the enemy With the whole soldiery—
Thekla. Alas, my mother!	45
Countess. There needs a great example to draw on The army after him. The Piccolomini Possess the love and reverence of the troops; They govern all opinions, and wherever They lead the way, none hesitate to follow. The son secures the father to our interests— You've much in your hands at this moment.	50
Thekla. Ah, My miserable mother! what a death-stroke Awaits thee!—No! She never will survive it.
Countess. She will accommodate her soul to that Which is and must be. I do know your mother. The far-off future weights upon her heart With torture of anxiety; but is it Unalterably, actually present, She soon resigns herself, and bears it calmly.	55 60
Thekla. O my fore-boding bosom! Even now, E'en now 'tis here, that icy hand of horror! And my young hope lies shuddering in its grasp; I knew it well—no sooner had I entered, A heavy ominous presentiment Revealed to me, that spirits of death were hovering Over my happy fortune. But why think I First of myself? My mother! O my mother!	65
Countess. Calm yourself! Break not out in vain lamenting! Preserve you for your father the firm friend, And for yourself the lover, all will yet Prove good and fortunate.	70
Thekla. Prove good? What good? Must we not part? Part ne'er to meet again?
Countess. He parts not from you! He can not part from you.
Thekla. Alas for his sore anguish! It will rend His heart asunder.	75
Countess. If indeed he loves you, His resolution will be speedily taken.

[728]

[729]

Thekla. His resolution will be speedily taken—
O do not doubt of that! A resolution!
Does there remain one to be taken?

Countess. Hush! Collect yourself! I hear your mother coming.

Thekla. How shall I bear to see her?

Collect yourself. Countess.

To them enter the Duchess.

Duchess (to the Countess). Who was here, sister? I heard some one talking, And passionately too.

Countess. Nay! There was no one.

Duchess. I am grown so timorous, every trifling noise Scatters my spirits, and announces to me The footstep of some messenger of evil. And can you tell me, sister, what the event is? Will he agree to do the Emperor's pleasure, And send the horse-regiments to the Cardinal? Tell me, has he dismissed Von Questenberg With a favourable answer?

Countess. No, he has not.

Duchess. Alas! then all is lost! I see it coming, The worst that can come! Yes, they will depose him; The accurséd business of the Regenspurg diet Will all be acted o'er again!

No! never! Countess. Make your heart easy, sister, as to that.

[Thekla throws herself upon her mother, and enfolds her in her arms, weeping.

[730] Duchess. Yes, my poor child!

Thou too hast lost a most affectionate godmother In the Empress. O that stern unbending man! In this unhappy marriage what have I Not suffered, not endured. For ev'n as if I had been linked on to some wheel of fire That restless, ceaseless, whirls impetuous onward, I have passed a life of frights and horrors with him, And ever to the brink of some abyss With dizzy headlong violence he whirls me. Nay, do not weep, my child! Let not my sufferings Presignify unhappiness to thee,

Nor blacken with their shade the fate that waits thee.

There lives no second Friedland: thou, my child, Hast not to fear thy mother's destiny.

Wallenstein.	All	auiet	in	the	cami	ე?

Illo. It is all quiet.

Wallenstein. In a few hours may couriers come from Prague
With tidings, that this capital is ours.
Then we may drop the mask, and to the troops
Assembled in this town make known the measure
And its result together. In such cases
Example does the whole. Whoever is foremost
Still leads the herd. An imitative creature
Is man. The troops at Prague conceive no other,
Than that the Pilsen army has gone through
The forms of homage to us; and in Pilsen
They shall swear fealty to us, because
The example has been given them by Prague.

Illo. At his own bidding, unsolicited, He came to offer you himself and regiment.

Butler, you tell me, has declared himself.

Wallenstein. I find we must not give implicit credence To every warning voice that makes itself Be listened to in the heart. To hold us back, Oft does the lying spirit counterfeit The voice of Truth and inward Revelation, Scattering false oracles. And thus have I To intreat forgiveness, for that secretly I've wrong'd this honourable gallant man, This Butler: for a feeling, of the which I am not master (fear I would not call it), Creeps o'er me instantly, with sense of shuddering, At his approach, and stops love's joyous motion. And this same man, against whom I am warned, This honest man is he, who reaches to me

Illo. And doubt not That his example will win over to you The best men in the army.

Countess. 'Tis long since we've been thus together, brother.

Wallenstein (to the Countess aside). Can she sustain the news? Is she prepared?

Countess. Not yet.

Wallenstein. Come here, my sweet girl! Seat thee by me, For there is a good spirit on thy lips.
Thy mother praised to me thy ready skill:
She says a voice of melody dwells in thee,
Which doth enchant the soul. Now such a voice
Will drive away from me the evil demon
That beats his black wings close above my head.

Have I for this—[pause.] She is the only thing 95 That will remain behind of me on earth; And I will see a crown around her head, Or die in the attempt to place it there. I hazard all—all! and for this alone, To lift her into greatness— 100 Yea, in this moment, in the which we are speaking— [pause. And I must now, like a soft-hearted father, Couple together in good peasant fashion The pair, that chance to suit each other's liking— And I must do it now, even now, when I 105 Am stretching out the wreath that is to twine My full accomplished work—no! she is the jewel, Which I have treasured long, my last, my noblest, And 'tis my purpose not to let her from me For less than a king's sceptre. Duchess. O my husband! 110 You're ever building, building to the clouds, Still building higher, and still higher building, And ne'er reflect, that the poor narrow basis Cannot sustain the giddy tottering column. Wallenstein (to the Countess). Have you announced the place of residence 115 Which I have destined for her? Countess. No! not yet. 'Twere better you yourself disclosed it to her. Duchess. How? Do we not return to Karn then? Wallenstein. No. Duchess. And to no other of your lands or seats? Wallenstein. You would not be secure there. Duchess. Wallenstein. In Holland You'll find protection. 125

Duchess. In a Lutheran country? What? And you send us into Lutheran countries?

Wallenstein. Duke Franz of Lauenburg conducts you thither.

Duchess. Duke Franz of Lauenburg? The ally of Sweden, the Emperor's enemy.

Wallenstein. The Emperor's enemies are mine no longer.

ACT II

Scene I

Scene—A spacious Room in the Duke of Friedland's Palace.

Wallenstein (in armour). Thou hast gained thy point, Octavio! Once more am I Almost as friendless as at Regenspurg. There I had nothing left me, but myself— But what one man can do, you have now experience. The twigs have you hewed off, and here I stand 5 A leafless trunk. But in the sap within Lives the creating power, and a new world May sprout forth from it. Once already have I Proved myself worth an army to you—I alone! Before the Swedish strength your troops had melted; 10 Beside the Lech sank Tilly, your last hope; Into Bavaria, like a winter torrent, Did that Gustavus pour, and at Vienna In his own palace did the Emperor tremble. Soldiers were scarce, for still the multitude 15 Follow the luck: all eyes were turned on me, Their helper in distress; the Emperor's pride

Assemble forces in the desolate camps.	20
I did it. Like a god of war, my name
Went through the world. The drum was beat—and, lo!
The plough, the work-shop is forsaken, all
Swarm to the old familiar long-loved banners;
And as the wood-choir rich in melody	25
Assemble quick around the bird of wonder,
When first his throat swells with his magic song,
So did the warlike youth of Germany
Crowd in around the image of my eagle.
I feel myself the being that I was.	30
It is the soul that builds itself a body,
And Friedland's camp will not remain unfilled.
Lead then your thousands out to meet me—true!
They are accustomed under me to conquer,
But not against me. If the head and limbs	35
Separate from each other, 'twill be soon
Made manifest, in which the soul abode.
(Illo and Tertsky enter.)
Courage, friends! Courage! We are still unvanquished;
I feel my footing firm; five regiments, Tertsky,
Are still our own, and Butler's gallant troops;	40
And a host of sixteen thousand Swedes to-morrow.
I was not stronger, when nine years ago
I marched forth, with glad heart and high of hope,
To conquer Germany for the Emperor.

Scene III

Wallenstein, Tertsky, Illo, Ten Cuirassiers (led by an Anspessade, [745:1] march up and arrange themselves, after the word of command, in one front before the Duke, and make their obeisance. He takes his hat off, and immediately covers himself again).

Anspessade. Halt! Front! Present!

Wallenstein (after he has run through them with his eye, to the Anspessade). I know thee well. Thou art out of Brüggin in Flanders:

Thy name is Mercy.

Anspessade. Henry Mercy.

Wallenstein. Thou wert cut off on the march, surrounded by the Hessians, and didst fight thy way with a hundred and eighty men through their thousand.

	Anspessade. 'Twas even so, General!
	Wallenstein. What reward hadst thou for this gallant exploit?
	Anspessade. That which I asked for: the honour to serve in this corps.	10
[746]	Wallenstein (turning to a second). Thou wert among the volunteers that seized and made booty of the Swedish battery at Altenburg.
	Second Cuirassier. Yes, General!
	Wallenstein. I forget no one with whom I have exchanged words. (A pause). Who sends you?	15
	Anspessade. Your noble regiment, the Cuirassiers of Piccolomini.
	Wallenstein. Why does not your colonel deliver in your request, according to the custom of service?	20
	Anspessade. Because we would first know whom we serve.
	Wallenstein. Begin your address.
	Anspessade (giving the word of command). Shoulder your arms!
	Wallenstein (turning to a third). Thy name is Risbeck, Cologne is thy birthplace.	25
	Third Cuirassier. Risbeck of Cologne.
	Wallenstein. It was thou that broughtest in the Swedish colonel, Diebald, prisoner, in the camp at Nuremberg.
	Third Cuirassier. It was not I, General!
	Wallenstein. Perfectly right! It was thy elder brother: thou hadst a younger brother too: Where did he stay?	30
	Third Cuirassier. He is stationed at Olmutz with the Imperial army.
	Wallenstein (to the Anspessade). Now then—begin.
	Anspessade. There came to hand a letter from the Emperor Commanding us——	35
	Wallenstein. Who chose you?
	Anspessade. Every company Drew its own man by lot.
	Wallenstein. Now! to the business.
	Anspessade. There came to hand a letter from the Emperor Commanding us collectively, from thee
	All duties of obedience to withdraw, Because thou wert an enemy and traitor.	40
	Wallenstein. And what did you determine?
	Anspessade. All our comrades At Brannau, Budweiss, Prague and Olmutz, have
	Obeyed already, and the regiments here, Tiefenbach and Toscana, instantly	45
	Did follow their example. But—but we Do not believe that thou art an enemy And traitor to thy country, hold it merely
[747]	For lie and trick, and a trumped-up Spanish story!	50
	Thyself shalt tell us what thy purpose is, For we have found thee still sincere and true:
	No mouth shall interpose itself betwixt
	The gallant General and the gallant troops.
	Wallenstein. Therein I recognize my Pappenheimers.	55
	Anspessade. And this proposal makes thy regiment to thee: Is it thy purpose merely to preserve
	In thy own hands this military sceptre,
	Which so becomes thee, which the Emperor Made over to thee by a covenant?	60
	Is it thy purpose merely to remain	30
	Supreme commander of the Austrian armies?

We will stand by thee, General! and guarantee
Thy honest rights against all opposition. And should it chance, that all the other regiments	65
Turn from thee, by ourselves will we stand forth
Thy faithful soldiers, and, as is our duty,
Far rather let ourselves be cut to pieces, Then suffer these to fall. But if it he
Than suffer thee to fall. But if it be As the Emperor's letter says, if it be true,	70
That thou in traitorous wise wilt lead us over	70
To the enemy, which God in heaven forbid!
Then we too will forsake thee, and obey
That letter——
Wallenstein. Hear me, children!
Anspessade. Yes, or no! There needs no other answer.
There needs no other answer.
Wallenstein. Yield attention.	75
You're men of sense, examine for yourselves;
Ye think, and do not follow with the herd: And therefore have I always shewn you honour
Above all others, suffered you to reason;
Have treated you as free men, and my orders	80
Were but the echoes of your prior suffrage.—
Anspessade. Most fair and noble has thy conduct been
To us, my General! With thy confidence
Thou hast honoured us, and shewn us grace and favour
Beyond all other regiments; and thou seest	85
We follow not the common herd. We will Stand by thee faithfully. Speak but one word—
Thy word shall satisfy us, that it is not A treason which thou meditatest—that
Thou meanest not to lead the army over	90
To the enemy; nor e'er betray thy country.
Wallenstein. Me, me are they betraying. The Emperor
Hath sacrificed me to my enemies, And I must fall, unless my gallant troops
Will rescue me. See! I confide in you.	95
And be your hearts my strong hold! At this breast
The aim is taken, at this hoary head.
This is your Spanish gratitude, this is our
Requital for that murderous fight at Lutzen! For this we threw the naked breast against	100
The halbert, made for this the frozen earth	100
Our bed, and the hard stone our pillow! never stream
Too rapid for us, nor wood too impervious:
With cheerful spirit we pursued that Mansfield
Through all the turns and windings of his flight;	105
Yea, our whole life was but one restless march; And homeless, as the stirring wind, we travelled O'er the war-wasted earth. And now, even now,
That we have well-nigh finished the hard toil,
The unthankful, the curse-laden toil of weapons,	110
With faithful indefatigable arm
Have rolled the heavy war-load up the hill,
Behold! this boy of the Emperor's bears away The honours of the peace, an easy prize!
He'll weave, forsooth, into his flaxen locks	115
The olive branch, the hard-earn'd ornament
Of this grey head, grown grey beneath the helmet.
Anspessade. That shall he not, while we can hinder it!
No one, but thou, who hast conducted it
With fame, shall end this war, this frightful war.	120
Thou led'st us out into the bloody field
Of death, thou and no other shalt conduct us home,
Rejoicing, to the lovely plains of peace— Shalt share with us the fruits of the long toil—onan onare with as the franco of the folig ton—
Wallenstein. What? Think you then at length in late old age	125
To enjoy the fruits of toil? Believe it not.
Never, no never, will you see the end Of the contest! you and me, and all of us,
This war will swallow up! War, war, not peace,
Is Austria's wish; and therefore, because I	130

[748]

Endeavoured after peace, therefore I fail.
For what cares Austria, how long the war
Wears out the armies and lays waste the world?
She will but wax and grow amid the ruin,
And still win new domains.
[The Cuirassiers express agitation by their gestur	es.
Ye're moved—I see
A noble rage flash from your eyes, ye warriors!
Oh that my spirit might possess you now
Daring as once it led you to the battle!
Ye would stand by me with your veteran arms,
Protect me in my rights; and this is noble!
But think not that you can accomplish it,
Your scanty number! to no purpose will you
Have sacrificed you for your General.
No! let us tread securely, seek for friends;
The Swedes have proffered us assistance, let us
Wear for a while the appearance of good will,
And use them for your profit, till we both
Carry the fate of Europe in our hands,
And from our camp to the glad jubilant world
Lead Peace forth with the garland on her head!
Anspessade. 'Tis then but mere appearances which thou
Dost put on with the Swede? Thou'lt not betray
The Emperor? Wilt not turn us into Swedes?
This is the only thing which we desire
To learn from thee.
Wallenstein. What care I for the Swedes?
I hate them as I hate the pit of hell,
And under Providence I trust right soon
To chase them to their homes across their Baltic.
My cares are only for the whole: I have
A heart—it bleeds within me for the miseries
And piteous groaning of my fellow-Germans.
Ye are but common men, but yet ye think
With minds not common; ye appear to me
Worthy before all others, that I whisper ye
A little word or two in confidence!
See now! already for full fifteen years
The war-torch has continued burning, yet
No rest, no pause of conflict. Swede and German,
Papist and Lutheran! neither will give way
To the other, every hand's against the other.
Each one is party and no one a judge.
Where shall this end? Where's he that will unravel
This tangle, ever tangling more and more.
It must be cut asunder.
I feel that I am the man of destiny, And trust, with your assistance, to accomplish it.
And truck with vour accietance to accomplish it

	See, Duke! All—all would I have owed to thee,	[Taking Thekla by the hand.

	Wallenstein. Max, remain with me. Go you not from me, Max! Hark! I will tell thee— How when at Prague, our winter quarters, thou Wert brought into my tent a tender boy,		80
	Not yet accustomed to the German winters; Thy hand was frozen to the heavy colours; Thou would'st not let them go.— At that time did I take thee in my arms,		85

fortune, allured by thy hospitable form. Suddenly, unexpectedly, in a moment still as night, there is a fermentation in the treacherous gulf of fire; it discharges itself with raging force, and away over all the plantations of men drives the wild stream in frightful devastation. Wallenstein. Thou art portraying thy father's heart; as thou describest, even so is it shaped in his entrails, in this black hypocrite's breast. O, the art of hell has deceived me! The Abyss sent up to me the most spotted of the spirits, the most skilful in lies, and placed him as a friend by my side. Who may withstand the power of hell? I took the basilisk to my bosom, with my heart's blood I nourished him; he sucked himself glutfull at the breasts of my love. I never harboured evil towards him; wide open did I leave the door of my thoughts; I three away the key of wise foresight. Haply The time may come, when you may prove to us 20 A true friend, a good angel at the throne Of the Emperor. Max. You give me hope; you would not Suffer me wholly to despair. No! No! Mine is a certain misery—Thanks to heaven That offers me a means of ending it. 25 [The military music begins again. The stage fills more and more with armed men. Max sees Butler, and addresses him. And you here, Colonel Butler-and will you Not follow me? Well, then! remain more faithful To your new lord, than you have proved yourself To the Emperor. Come, Butler! promise me, Give me your hand upon it, that you'll be 30 The guardian of his life, its shield, its watchman. He is attainted, and his princely head Fair booty for each slave that trades in murder. Now he doth need the faithful eye of friendship, And those whom here I see-[Casting suspicious looks on Illo and Butler. Illo. Go-seek for traitors 35 In Galas', in your father's quarters. Here Is only one. Away! away! and free us From his detested sight! Away! [Max attempts once more to approach Thekla. Wallenstein prevents him. Max stands irresolute, and in apparent anguish. In the mean time the stage fills more and more; and the horns sound from below louder and louder, and each time after a shorter interval. Max. Blow, blow! O were it but the Swedish Trumpets, And all the naked swords, which I see here, 40 Were plunged into my breast! What purpose you? You come to tear me from this place! Beware, Ye drive me not in desperation.—Do it not! Ye may repent it! [The stage is entirely filled with armed men. Yet more! weight upon weight to drag me down! 45 Think what ye're doing. It is not well done To choose a man despairing for your leader; You tear me from my happiness. Well, then, I dedicate your souls to vengeance. Mark! For your own ruin you have chosen me: 50 Who goes with me, must be prepared to perish. [He turns to the background, there ensues a sudden and violent movement among the Cuirassiers; they surround him, and carry him off in wild tumult. Wallenstein remains immovable. Thekla sinks into her mother's arms. The curtain falls. The music becomes loud and overpowering, and passes into a complete warmarch—the orchestra joins it—and continues during the interval between the second and third Act.

The Burgomaster's House at Egra.

BUTLER.

Butler. Here then he is, by his destiny conducted. Here, Friedland! and no farther! From Bohemia Thy meteor rose, traversed the sky awhile, And here upon the borders of Bohemia Must sink.

Thou hast forsworn the ancient colours, Blind man! yet trustest to thy ancient fortunes. Profaner of the altar and the hearth, Against thy Emperor and fellow-citizens Thou mean'st to wage the war. Friedland, beware— The evil spirit of revenge impels thee— Beware thou, that revenge destroy thee not!

Scene II

Butler and Gordon.

Gordon. Is it you? How my heart sinks! The Duke a fugitive traitor! His princely head attainted! O my God!

Butler. You have received the letter which I sent you By a post-courier?

Yes! and in obedience to it Gordon Opened the strong hold to him without scruple. For an imperial letter orders me To follow your commands implicitly. But yet forgive me; when even now I saw The Duke himself, my scruples recommenced. For truly, not like an attainted man, Into this town did Friedland make his entrance; His wonted majesty beamed from his brow, And calm, as in the days when all was right, Did he receive from me the accounts of office: 'Tis said, that fallen pride learns condescension: But sparing and with dignity the Duke Weighed every syllable of approbation, As masters praise a servant who has done His duty, and no more.

15

'Tis all precisely As I related in my letter. Friedland Has sold the army to the enemy, And pledged himself to give up Prague and Egra. On this report the regiments all forsook him, The five excepted that belong to Tertsky, And which have followed him, as thou hast seen. The sentence of attainder is passed on him, And every loyal subject is required To give him in to justice, dead or living.

25

Of ancient custom, are all necessary

30

Gordon. A traitor to the Emperor—Such a noble! Of such high talents! What is human greatness! I often said, this can't end happily. His might, his greatness, and this obscure power Are but a covered pit-fall. The human being May not be trusted to self-government. The clear and written law, the deep trod foot-marks

To keep him in the road of faith and duty. The authority entrusted to this man Was unexampled and unnatural	40
It placed him on a level with his Emperor, Till the proud soul unlearned submission. Wo is me; I mourn for him! for where he fell, I deem Might none stand firm. Alas! dear General, We in our lucky mediocrity	45
Have ne'er experienced, cannot calculate, What dangerous wishes such a height may breed In the heart of such a man.	40
Butler. Spare your laments Till he need sympathy; for at this present He is still mighty, and still formidable. The Swedes advance to Egra by forced marches, And quickly will the junction be accomplished. This must not be! The Duke must never leave This strong hold on free footing; for I have	50
Pledged life and honour here to hold him prisoner, And your assistance 'tis on which I calculate.	55
Gordon. O that I had not lived to see this day! From his hand I received this dignity, He did himself entrust this strong hold to me, Which I am now required to make his dungeon. We subalterns have no will of our own: The free, the mighty man alone may listen	60
To the fair impulse of his human nature. Ah! we are but the poor tools of the law, Obedience the sole virtue we dare aim at!	65
Butler. Nay, let it not afflict you, that your power Is circumscribed. Much liberty, much error! The narrow path of duty is securest.
Gordon. And all then have deserted him, you say? He has built up the luck of many thousands; For kingly was his spirit: his full hand Was ever open! Many a one from dust Hath he selected, from the very dust	70
Hath raised him into dignity and honour. And yet no friend, not one friend hath he purchased, Whose heart beats true to him in the evil hour.	75
Butler. Here's one, I see.
Gordon. I have enjoyed from him No grace or favour. I could almost doubt, If ever in his greatness he once thought on An old friend of his youth. For still my office Kept me at distance from him; and when first He to this citadel appointed me, He was sincere and serious in his duty.	80
I do not then abuse his confidence, If I preserve my fealty in that Which to my fealty was first delivered.	85
Butler. Say, then, will you fulfil the attainder on him?
Gordon. If it be so—if all be as you say— If he've betrayed the Emperor, his master, Have sold the troops, have purposed to deliver	90
The strong holds of the country to the enemy— Yea, truly!—there is no redemption for him! Yet it is hard, that me the lot should destine To be the instrument of his perdition;
For we were pages at the court of Bergau At the same period; but I was the senior.	95
Butler. I have heard so——
Gordon. 'Tis full thirty years since then. A youth who scarce had seen his twentieth year Was Wallenstein, when he and I were friends:
Yet even then he had a daring soul: His frame of mind was serious and severe Beyond his years: his dreams were of great objects. He walked amidst us of a silent spirit,	100

[767]

Transported on a sudden into utterance Of strange conceptions; kindling into splendour His soul revealed itself, and he spake so That we looked round perplexed upon each other, Not knowing whether it were craziness, Or whether it were a god that spoke in him.		105 110
Butler. But was it where he fell two story high From a window-ledge, on which he had fallen asleep; And rose up free from injury? From this day (It is reported) he betrayed clear marks Of a distempered fancy.
Gordon. He became Doubtless more self-enwrapt and melancholy; He made himself a Catholic. Marvellously His marvellous preservation had transformed him. Thenceforth he held himself for an exempted		115
And privileged being, and, as if he were Incapable of dizziness or fall, He ran along the unsteady rope of life. But now our destinies drove us asunder:		120
He paced with rapid step the way of greatness, Was Count, and Prince, Duke-regent, and Dictator. And now is all, all this too little for him; He stretches forth his hands for a king's crown, And plunges in unfathomable ruin.		125

Tertsky. There has been an engagement

At Neustadt; the Swedes gained the victory.

Wallenstein. From whence did you receive the intelligence?

Tertsky. A countryman from Tirschenseil conveyed it.

Soon after sunrise did the fight begin!

A troop of the Imperialists from Fachau

Had forced their way into the Swedish camp;

The cannonade continued full two hours;

There were left dead upon the field a thousand

Imperialists, together with their Colonel;

Further than this he did not know.

Wallenstein. How came

Imperial troops at Neustadt? Altringer,

But yesterday, stood sixty miles from there.

Count Galas' force collects at Frauenberg,

And have not the full complement. Is it possible,

That Suys perchance had ventured so far onward?

It cannot be.

Tertsky. We shall soon know the whole, For here comes Illo, full of haste, and joyous.

Scene V

Illo (to Wallenstein). A courier, Duke! he wishes to speak with thee.

Tertsky. Does he bring confirmation of the victory?

Wallenstein. What does he bring? Whence comes he?

From the Rhinegrave.

And what he brings I can announce to you

Beforehand. Seven leagues distant are the Swedes;

At Neustadt did Max Piccolomini

Throw himself on them with the cavalry;

A murderous fight took place! o'erpower'd by numbers

The Pappenheimers all, with Max their leader,

Were left dead on the field.

Gordon.	What's	this?

[772]

She has lost the man she lov'd-Butler. Young Piccolomini, who fell in the battle.

Gordon. Unfortunate Lady!

You have heard what Illo Butler. Reporteth, that the Swedes are conquerors, And marching hitherward.

Gordon. Too well I heard it. 5

Butler. They are twelve regiments strong, and there are five Close by us to protect the Duke. We have Only my single regiment; and the garrison Is not two hundred strong.

Gordon. 'Tis even so.

Butler. It is not possible with such small force To hold in custody a man like him.

10

Gordon. I grant it.

Butler. Soon the numbers would disarm us. And liberate him.

Gordon. It were to be feared.

Butler (after a pause). Know, I am warranty for the event; With my head have I pledged myself for his, Must make my word good, cost it what it will, And if alive we cannot hold him prisoner, Why—death makes all things certain!

15

Butler! What? Gordon. Do I understand you? Gracious God! You could—

Butler. He must not live.

Gordon. And you can do the deed! 20

Butler. Either you or I. This morning was his last.

Gordon. You would assassinate him.

Butler. 'Tis my purpose.

Gordon. Who leans with his whole confidence upon you!

Butler. Such is his evil destiny!

Your General! The sacred person of your General!

25

Butler. My General he has been.

Gordon. That 'tis only

A 'has been' washes out no villainy.

And without judgment passed?

The execution Butler.

Is here instead of judgment.

Gordon. This were murder, Not justice. The most guilty should be heard.

30

Butler. His guilt is clear, the Emperor has passed judgment, And we but execute his will.

Gordon. We should not Hurry to realize a bloody sentence. A word may be recalled, a life can never be.
Butler. Dispatch in service pleases sovereigns.	35
Gordon. No honest man's ambitious to press forward To the hangman's service.
Butler. And no brave man loses His colour at a daring enterprize.
Gordon. A brave man hazards life, but not his conscience.
Butler. What then? Shall he go forth anew to kindle The unextinguishable flame of war?	40
Gordon. Seize him, and hold him prisoner—do not kill him.
Butler. Had not the Emperor's army been defeated, I might have done so.—But 'tis now past by.
Gordon. O, wherefore opened I the strong hold to him!	45
Butler. His destiny and not the place destroys him.
Gordon. Upon these ramparts, as beseemed a soldier, I had fallen, defending the Emperor's citadel!
Butler. Yes! and a thousand gallant men have perished.
Gordon. Doing their duty—that adorns the man! But murder's a black deed, and nature curses it.	50
Butler (brings out a paper). Here is the manifesto which commands us To gain possession of his person. See— It is addressed to you as well as me. Are you content to take the consequences, If through our fault he escape to the enemy?	55
Gordon. I?—Gracious God!
Butler. Take it on yourself. Let come of it what may, on you I lay it.
Gordon. O God in heaven!
Butler. Can you advise aught else Wherewith to execute the Emperor's purpose? Say if you can. For I desire his fall, Not his destruction.	60
Gordon. Merciful heaven! what must be I see as clear as you. Yet still the heart Within my bosom beats with other feelings!
Butler. Mine is of harder stuff! Necessity In her rough school hath steeled me. And this Illo And Tertsky likewise, they must not survive him.	65
Gordon. I feel no pang for these. Their own bad hearts Impelled them, not the influence of the stars. 'Twas they who strewed the seeds of evil passions In his calm breast, and with officious villainy Watered and nursed the pois'nous plants. May they Receive their earnests to the uttermost mite!	70
Butler. And their death shall precede his! We meant to have taken them alive this evening Amid the merry-making of a feast, And kept them prisoners in the citadels. But this makes shorter work. I go this instant To give the processary orders	75

Tertsky. Our luck is on the turn. To-morrow come The Swedes—twelve thousand gallant warriors, Illo! Then straightways for Vienna. Cheerily, friend! What! meet such news with such a moody face?
Illo. It lies with us at present to prescribe Laws, and take vengeance on those worthless traitors, Those skulking cowards that deserted us; One has already done his bitter penance The Piccolomini, be his the fate	5
Of all who wish us evil! This flies sure To the old man's heart; he has his whole life long Fretted and toiled to raise his ancient house From a Count's title to the name of Prince; And now must seek a grave for his only son.	10
Butler. 'Twas pity though! A youth of such heroic And gentle temperament! The Duke himself, 'Twas easily seen, how near it went to his heart.	15
Illo. Hark'e, old friend! That is the very point That never pleased me in our General— He ever gave the preference to the Italians. Yea, at this very moment, by my soul! He'd gladly see us all dead ten times over, Could he thereby recall his friend to life.	20
Tertsky. Hush, hush! Let the dead rest! This evening's busined Is, who can fairly drink the other down—Your regiment, Illo! gives the entertainment. Come! we will keep a merry carnival—The night for once be day, and mid full glasses Will we expect the Swedish Avantgarde.	ess 25
Illo. Yes, let us be of good cheer for to-day, For there's hot work before us, friends! This sword Shall have no rest, till it be bathed to the hilt In Austrian blood.	30
Gordon. Shame, shame! what talk is this, My Lord Field Marshal? Wherefore foam you so Against your Emperor?
Butler. Hope not too much From this first victory. Bethink you, sirs! How rapidly the wheel of Fortune turns; The Emperor still is formidably strong.	35
Illo. The Emperor has soldiers, no commander, For this King Ferdinand of Hungary Is but a tyro. Galas? He's no luck, And was of old the ruiner of armies. And then this viper, this Octavio, Is excellent at stabbing in the back, But ne'er meets Friedland in the open field.	40 45
Tertsky. Trust me, my friends, it cannot but succeed; Fortune, we know, can ne'er forsake the Duke! And only under Wallenstein can Austria Be conqueror.

Still I must kill him. Gordon. If your heart speak to you, Follow its impulse. 'Tis the voice of God. Think you your fortunes will grow prosperous Bedewed with blood—his blood? Believe it not!
Butler. You know not. Ask not! Wherefore should That the Swedes gained the victory, and hasten With such forced marches hitherward? Fain would Have given him to the Emperor's mercy.—Gordon! I do not wish his blood—But I must ransom The honour of my word—it lies in pledge—And he must die, or——	I 60

Gordon. O! to save such a man——
Butler. What!
Gordon. It is worth A sacrifice.—Come, friend! Be noble-minded! Our own heart, and not other men's opinions, Forms our true honour.	65
Butler. He is a great Lord, This Duke—and I am but of mean importance. This is what you would say? Wherein concerns it The world at large, you mean to hint to me, Whether the man of low extraction keeps Or blemishes his honour— So that the man of princely rank be saved. We all do stamp our value on ourselves.	70
We all do stamp our value on ourselves. The price we challenge for ourselves is given us. There does not live on earth the man so stationed, That I despise myself compared with him. Man is made great or little by his own will; Because I am true to mine, therefore he dies.	75

Scene I

Scene—Butler's Chamber.

Butler, and Major Geraldin.

Butler. Find me twelve strong dragoons, arm them with pikes, For there must be no firing— Conceal them somewhere near the banquet-room, And soon as the dessert is served up, rush all in And cry-Who is loyal to the Emperor? I will overturn the table—while you attack Illo and Tertsky, and dispatch them both. The castle-palace is well barred and guarded, That no intelligence of this proceeding May make its way to the Duke.—Go instantly; Have you yet sent for Captain Devereux And the Macdonald?-

Butler. Is that the objection?
Devereux. Were it my own father, And the Emperor's service should demand it of me, It might be done perhaps—But we are soldiers, And to assassinate our chief commander, That is a sin, a foul abomination, From which no monk or confessor absolves us.	60

See, there's thy loving mother. Thou art in Thy father's arms.	15
Thekla (standing up). Where is he? Is he gone?
Duchess. Who gone, my daughter?
Thekla. He—the man who uttered That word of misery.
Duchess. O! think not of it, My Thekla!
Wallenstein. Give her sorrow leave to talk! Let her complain—mingle your tears with hers, For she hath suffered a deep anguish; but She'll rise superior to it, for my Thekla Hath all her father's unsubdued heart.	20
Thekla. I am not ill. See, I have power to stand. Why does my mother weep? Have I alarmed her? It is gone by—I recollect myself—	25
[She casts her eyes round the room, as seeking some one. Where is he? Please you, do not hide him from me. You see I have strength enough: now I will hear him.
Duchess. No, never shall this messenger of evil Enter again into thy presence, Thekla!	30

Wallenstein. Dearest daughter!
Thekla. I'm not weak— Shortly I shall be quite myself again. You'll grant me one request?
Wallenstein. Name it, my daughter.
Thekla. Permit the stranger to be called to me, And grant me leave, that by myself I may Hear his report and question him.	35
Duchess. No, never!
Countess. 'Tis not advisable—assent not to it.
Wallenstein. Hush! Wherefore would'st thou speak with him, my daughter?
Thekla. Knowing the whole, I shall be more collected; I will not be deceived. My mother wishes Only to spare me. I will not be spared. The worst is said already: I can hear Nothing of deeper anguish!	40
Countess and Duchess. Do it not.
Thekla. The horror overpowered me by surprise. My heart betrayed me in the stranger's presence; He was a witness of my weakness, yea, I sank into his arms; and that has shamed me. I must replace myself in his esteem,	45
And I must speak with him, perforce, that he, The stranger, may not think ungently of me.	50

From the wood thitherward; our vanguard fled Into the camp, and sounded the alarm. Scarce had we mounted, ere the Pappenheimers, Their horses at full speed, broke through the lines, And leapt the trenches; but their heedless courage Had borne them onward far before the others-The infantry were still at distance, only The Pappenheimers followed daringly Their daring leader—

[Thekla betrays agitation in her gestures. The officer pauses till she makes a sign to him to proceed.

Captain. Both in van and flanks With our whole cavalry we now received them; Back to the trenches drove them, where the foot Stretched out a solid ridge of pikes to meet them. They neither could advance, nor yet retreat; And as they stood on every side wedged in, The Rhinegrave to their leader called aloud, Inviting a surrender; but their leader, Young Piccolomini25

[Thekla, as giddy, grasps a chair.

Known by his plume, And his long hair, gave signal for the trenches; Himself leapt first, the regiment all plunged after. His charger, by a halbert gored, reared up, Flung him with violence off, and over him The horses, now no longer to be curbed,— 35

[Thekla, who has accompanied the last speech with all the marks of increasing agony, trembles through her whole frame, and is falling. The Lady Neubrunn runs to her, and receives her in her

Captain. I retire.

Thekla. 'Tis over.

Proceed to the conclusion.

40

Wild despair Inspired the troops with frenzy when they saw Their leader perish; every thought of rescue Was spurn'd; they fought like wounded tigers; their Frantic resistance rous'd our soldiery; A murderous fight took place, nor was the contest Finish'd before their last man fell.

45

And where— Where is—You have not told me all.

Captain (after a pause). We buried him. Twelve youths of noblest birth Did bear him to interment; the whole army Followed the bier. A laurel decked his coffin: The sword of the deceased was placed upon it, In mark of honour, by the Rhinegrave's self. Nor tears were wanting; for there are among us Many, who had themselves experienced The greatness of his mind, and gentle manners; All were affected at his fate. The Rhinegrave Would willingly have saved him; but himself Made vain the attempt—'tis said he wished to die.

Neubrunn (to Thekla who has hidden her countenance). Look up, my dearest lady-

Thekla. Where is his grave?

Captain. At Neustadt, lady; in a cloister church Are his remains deposited, until We can receive directions from his father.

FOOTNOTES:

The soliloquy of Thekla consists in the original of six-and-twenty lines, twenty of which are in rhymes of irregular recurrence. I thought it prudent to abridge it. Indeed the whole scene between Thekla and Lady Neubrunn might, perhaps, have been omitted without injury to the play. 1800, 1828, 1829.

ACTV

Scene I

Scene—A Saloon, terminated by a gallery which extends far into the back-ground. Wallenstein sitting at a table. The Swedish Captain standing before him.

Wallenstein. Commend me to your lord. I sympathize In his good fortune; and if you have seen me Deficient in the expressions of that joy Which such a victory might well demand, Attribute it to no lack of good will, For henceforth are our fortunes one. Farewell, And for your trouble take my thanks. To-morrow The citadel shall be surrendered to you On your arrival.

> [The Swedish Captain retires. Wallenstein sits lost in thought, his eyes fixed vacantly, and his head sustained by his hand. The Countess Tertsky enters, stands before him awhile, unobserved by him; at length he starts, sees her, and recollects himself.

[794]

Wallenstein. Com'st thou from her? Is she restored? How is she?

10

Countess. My sister tells me, she was more collected

After her conversation with the Swede. She has now retired to rest.
Wallenstein. The pang will soften, She will shed tears.
Countess. I find thee altered too, My brother! After such a victory I had expected to have found in thee A cheerful spirit. O remain thou firm! Sustain, uphold us! For our light thou art, Our sun.	15
Wallenstein. Be quiet. I ail nothing. Where's Thy husband?
Countess. At a banquet—he and Illo.	20
Wallenstein (rises). The night's far spent. Betake thee to thy chamber.
Countess. Bid me not go, O let me stay with thee!
Wallenstein (moves to the window). There is a busy motion in the Heaven, The wind doth chase the flag upon the tower, Fast sweep the clouds, the sickle [794:1] of the moon, Struggling dotte enotation of upper to light	25
Struggling, darts snatches of uncertain light. No form of star is visible! That one White stain of light, that single glimmering yonder, Is from Cassiopeia, and therein	30
Is Jupiter. (A pause.) But now The blackness of the troubled element hides him! [He sinks into profound melancholy, and looks vacantly into the distance.	30
Countess (looks on him mournfully, then grasps his hand). What art thou brooding on?
Wallenstein. Methinks, If I but saw him, 'twould be well with me. He, is the star of my nativity, And often marvellously hath his aspect Shot strength into my heart.	35
Countess. Thou'lt see him again.
Wallenstein. See him again? O never, never again.
Countess. How?
Wallenstein. He is gone—is dust.
Countess. Whom meanest thou then?
Wallenstein. He, the more fortunate! yea, he hath finished! For him there is no longer any future, His life is bright—bright without spot it was, And cannot cease to be. No ominous hour Knocks at his door with tidings of mishap.	40
Far off is he, above desire and fear; No more submitted to the change and chance Of the unsteady planets. O 'tis well With him! but who knows what the coming hour Veil'd in thick darkness brings for us!	45
Countess. Thou speakest Of Piccolomini. What was his death? The courier had just left thee as I came. [Wallenstein by a motion of his hand makes signs to her to be silent. Turn not thine eyes upon the backward view,	50
Let us look forward into sunny days, Welcome with joyous heart the victory, Forget what it has cost thee. Not to-day, For the first time, thy friend was to thee dead; To thee he died, when first he parted from thee.	55
Wallenstein. I shall grieve down this blow, of that I'm conscious. What does not man grieve down? From the highest, As from the vilest thing of every day He learns to wean himself: for the strong hours Conquer him. Yet I feel what I have lost	60

[795]

[796]

In him. The bloom is vanished from my life. For O! he stood beside me, like my youth, Transformed for me the real to a dream, Clothing the palpable and familiar With golden exhalations of the dawn. Whatever fortunes wait my future toils, The beautiful is vanished—and returns not.	65
Countess. O be not treacherous to thy own power. Thy heart is rich enough to vivify Itself. Thou lov'st and prizest virtues in him, The which thyself did'st plant, thyself unfold.	70
Wallenstein (stepping to the door). Who interrupts us now at this late hour? It is the Governor. He brings the keys Of the Citadel. 'Tis midnight. Leave me, sister!	75
Countess. O 'tis so hard to me this night to leave thee—A boding fear possesses me!
Wallenstein. Fear? Wherefore?
Countess. Should'st thou depart this night, and we at waking Never more find thee!
Wallenstein. Fancies!
Countess. O my soul Has long been weighed down by these dark forebodings. And if I combat and repel them waking, They still rush down upon my heart in dreams, I saw thee yesternight with thy first wife Sit at a banquet gorgeously attired.	80
Wallenstein. This was a dream of favourable omen, That marriage being the founder of my fortunes.	85
Countess. To-day I dreamt that I was seeking thee In thy own chamber. As I entered, lo! It was no more a chamber; the Chartreuse At Gitschin 'twas, which thou thyself hast founded, And where it is thy will that thou should'st be Interred.	90
Wallenstein. Thy soul is busy with these thoughts.
Countess. What dost thou not believe that oft in dreams A voice of warning speaks prophetic to us?
Wallenstein. There is no doubt that there exist such voices. Yet I would not call them Voices of warning that announce to us	95
Only the inevitable. As the sun, Ere it is risen, sometimes paints its image In the atmosphere, so often do the spirits Of great events stride on before the events, And in to-day already walks to-morrow.	100
That which we read of the fourth Henry's death Did ever vex and haunt me like a tale Of my own future destiny. The King Felt in his breast the phantom of the knife, Long ere Ravaillac arm'd himself therewith. His quiet mind forsook him: the phantasma	105
Started him in his Louvre, chased him forth Into the open air: like funeral knells Sounded that coronation festival; And still with boding sense he heard the tread Of those feet that ev'n then were seeking him Throughout the streets of Paris.	110
Countess. And to thee The voice within thy soul bodes nothing?
Wallenstein. Nothing. Be wholly tranquil.	115
Countess. And another time I hastened after thee, and thou ran'st from me Through a long suite, through many a spacious hall,

[797]

There seemed no end of it: doors creaked and clapped;
I followed panting, but could not o'ertake thee;
When on a sudden did I feel myself
Grasped from behind—the hand was cold that grasped me—
'Twas thou, and thou did'st kiss me, and there seemed
A crimson covering to envelop us.

Wallenstein. That is the crimson tapestry of my chamber.

125

Countess (gazing on him). If it should come to that—if I should see thee,

Co

Who standest now before me in the fulness Of life—

[She falls on his breast and weeps.

Wallenstein. The Emperor's proclamation weighs upon thee—Alphabets wound not—and he finds no hands.

130

Countess. If he should find them, my resolve is taken— I bear about me my support and refuge.

[Exit Countess.

FOOTNOTES:

[794:1] These four lines are expressed in the original with exquisite felicity.

'Am Himmel ist geschäftige Bewegung, Des Thurmes Fahne jagt der Wind, schnell geht Der Wolken Zug, die Mondessichel wankt, Und durch die Nacht zeucht ungewisse Helle.'

The word 'moon-sickle' reminds me of a passage in Harris, as quoted by Johnson, under the word 'falcated'. 'The enlightened part of the moon appears in the form of a sickle or reaping-hook, which is while she is moving from the conjunction to the opposition, or from the new moon to the full: but from full to a new again, the enlightened part appears gibbous, and the dark falcated.'

The words 'wanken' and 'schweben' are not easily translated. The English words, by which we attempt to render them, are either vulgar or pedantic, or not of sufficiently general application. So 'der Wolken Zug'—The Draft, the Procession of Clouds.—The Masses of the Clouds sweep onward in swift stream.

Scene II

[798]

Wallenstein. All quiet in the town?

Have passed by powerless o'er my unblanched hair.

[799]

Gordon. The town is quiet. Wallenstein. I hear a boisterous music! and the Castle Is lighted up. Who are the revellers? Gordon. There is a banquet given at the Castle To the Count Tertsky, and Field Marshal Illo. 5 Wallenstein. In honour of the victory.—This tribe Can shew their joy in nothing else but feasting. [Rings. The Groom of the Chamber enters. Unrobe me. I will lay me down to sleep. [Wallenstein takes the keys from Gordon. So we are guarded from all enemies, And shut in with sure friends. 10 For all must cheat me, or a face like this [Fixing his eye on Gordon. Was ne'er a hypocrite's mask. [The Groom of the Chamber takes off his mantle, collar and scarf. Wallenstein. Take care—what is that? Groom of the Chamber. The golden chain is snapped in two. Wallenstein. Well, it has lasted long enough. Here—give it. [He takes and looks at the chain. 'Twas the first present of the Emperor. 15 He hung it round me in the war of Friule, He being then Archduke; and I have worn it Till now from habit-From superstition if you will. Belike, It was to be a talisman to me, 20 And while I wore it on my neck in faith, It was to chain to me all my life long The volatile fortune whose first pledge it was. Well, be it so! Henceforward a new fortune Must spring up for me; for the potency 25 Of this charm is dissolved. [Groom of the Chamber retires with the vestments. Wallenstein rises, takes a stride across the room, and stands at last before GORDON in a posture of meditation. How the old time returns upon me! I Behold myself once more at Burgau, where We two were pages of the Court together. We oftentimes disputed: thy intention 30 Was ever good; but thou wert wont to play The moralist and preacher, and would'st rail at me That I strove after things too high for me, Giving my faith to bold unlawful dreams, 35 And still extol to me the golden mean. -Thy wisdom hath been proved a thriftless friend To thy own self. See, it has made thee early A superannuated man, and (but That my munificent stars will intervene) Would let thee in some miserable corner 40 Go out like an untended lamp. My Prince! With light heart the poor fisher moors his boat, And watches from the shore the lofty ship Stranded amid the storm. Wallenstein. Art thou already In harbour then, old man? Well! I am not. 45 The unconquered spirit drives me o'er life's billows; My planks still firm, my canvas swelling proudly. Hope is my goddess still, and youth my inmate; And while we stand thus front to front almost, I might presume to say, that the swift years 50

[He moves with long strides across the saloon, and remains on the opposite side over against Gordon.

Who now persists in calling Fortune false? To me she has proved faithful, with fond love Took me from out the common ranks of men, And like a mother goddess, with strong arm Carried me swiftly up the steps of life. Nothing is common in my destiny, Nor in the furrows of my hand. Who dares	55
Interpret then my life for me as 'twere One of the undistinguishable many? True in this present moment I appear Fallen low indeed; but I shall rise again. The high flood will soon follow on this ebb; The fountain of my fortune, which now stops Penrossed and bound by some malicious store.	60 65
Repressed and bound by some malicious star, Will soon in joy play forth from all its pipes.	0.0
Gordon. And yet remember I the good old proverb, 'Let the night come before we praise the day.' I would be slow from long-continued fortune To gather hope: for hope is the companion Given to the unfortunate by pitying Heaven. Fear hovers round the head of prosperous men, For still unsteady are the scales of fate.	70
Wallenstein (smiling). I hear the very Gordon that of old Was wont to preach to me, now once more preaching; I know well, that all sublunary things Are still the vassals of vicissitude. The unpropitious gods demand their tribute.	75
This long ago the ancient Pagans knew: And therefore of their own accord they offered To themselves injuries, so to atone The jealousy of their divinities: And human sacrifices bled to Typhon. [After a pause, serious, and in a more subdued manner.	80
I too have sacrific'd to him—For me There fell the dearest friend, and through my fault He fell! No joy from favourable fortune Can overweigh the anguish of this stroke. The envy of my destiny is glutted: Life pays for life. On his pure head the lightning Was drawn off which would else have shattered me.	85 90
Scene III
To these enter Seni.
Wallenstein. Is not that Seni? and beside himself, If one may trust his looks! What brings thee hither At this late hour, Baptista?
Seni. Terror, Duke! On thy account.
Wallenstein. What now?
Seni. Flee ere the day-break! Trust not thy person to the Swedes!
Wallenstein. What now Is in thy thoughts?	5
Seni (with louder voice). Trust not thy person to these Swedes.
Wallenstein. What is it then?
Seni (still more urgently). O wait not the arrival of these Swedes! An evil near at hand is threatening thee From false friends. All the signs stand full of horror! Near, near at hand the net-work of perdition— Yea, even now 'tis being cast around thee!	10
Wallenstein. Baptista, thou art dreaming!—Fear befools thee.
Seni. Believe not that an empty fear deludes me. Come, read it in the planetary aspects;	15

[800]

[801]

Read it thyself, that ruin threatens thee From false friends!
Wallenstein. From the falseness of my friends Has risen the whole of my unprosperous fortunes. The warning should have come before! At present I need no revelation from the stars To know that.	20
Seni. Come and see! trust thine own eyes! A fearful sign stands in the house of life; An enemy, a fiend lurks close behind The radiance of thy planet—O be warned! Deliver not thyself up to these heathens To wage a war against our holy church.	25
Wallenstein (laughing gently). The oracle rails that way! Yes, yes! Now I recollect. This junction with the Swedes Did never please thee—lay thyself to sleep, Baptista! Signs like these I do not fear.	30
Gordon (who during the whole of this dialogue has shewn marks of extreme agitation, and now turns to Wallenstein). My Duke and General! May I dare presume?
Wallenstein. Speak freely.
Gordon. What if 'twere no mere creation Of fear, if God's high providence vouchsaf'd To interpose its aid for your deliverance, And made that mouth its organ.
Wallenstein. Ye're both feverish! How can mishap come to me from the Swedes? They sought this junction with me—'tis their interest.	35
Gordon (with difficulty suppressing his emotion). But what if the arrival of these Swedes—What if this were the very thing that winged The ruin that is flying to your temples?	40
There is yet time, my Prince. [Flings himself at his feet.
Seni. O hear him! hear him!
Gordon (rises). The Rhinegrave's still far off. Give but the orders, This citadel shall close its gates upon him. If then he will besiege us, let him try it.
But this I say; he'll find his own destruction With his whole force before these ramparts, sooner Than weary down the valour of our spirit. He shall experience what a band of heroes,	45
Inspirited by an heroic leader, Is able to perform. And if indeed It be thy serious wish to make amends For that which thou hast done amiss,—this, this Will touch and reconcile the Emperor,	50
Who gladly turns his heart to thoughts of mercy,
And Friedland, who returns repentant to him, Will stand yet higher in his Emperor's favour, Than e'er he stood when he had never fallen.	55

And thou too! But I know why thou dost wish 75 My reconcilement with the Emperor. Poor man! he hath a small estate in Cärnthen, And fears it will be forfeited because He's in my service. Am I then so poor, That I no longer can indemnify My servants? Well! To no one I employ 80 Means of compulsion. If 'tis thy belief That fortune has fled from me, go! Forsake me. This night for the last time mayst thou unrobe me, And then go over to thy Emperor. Gordon, good night! I think to make a long 85 Sleep of it: for the struggle and the turmoil Of this last day or two were great. May't please you! Take care that they awake me not too early.

[Exit Wallenstein, the Groom of the Chamber lighting him. Seni follows. Gordon remains on the darkened stage, following the Duke with his eye, till he disappears at the farther end of the gallery: then by his gestures the old man expresses the depth of his anguish, and stands leaning against a pillar.

GORDON, BUTLER (at first behind the scenes).

Butler (not yet come into view of the stage). Here stand in silence till I give the signal.

Gordon (starts up). 'Tis he, he has already brought the murderers.

Butler. The lights are out. All lies in profound sleep.

Gordon. What shall I do, shall I attempt to save him? Shall I call up the house? Alarm the guards?

Butler (appears, but scarcely on the stage). A light gleams hither from the corridor. It leads directly to the Duke's bedchamber.

Gordon. But then I break my oath to the Emperor; If he escape and strengthen the enemy, Do I not hereby call down on my head All the dread consequences?

Butler (stepping forward). Hark! Who speaks there?

Gordon. 'Tis better, I resign it to the hands Of providence. For what am I, that I Should take upon myself so great a deed? I have not murdered him, if he be murdered: But all his rescue were my act and deed; Mine—and whatever be the consequences, I must sustain them.

Butler (advances). I should know that voice.

Gordon. Butler!

Butler. 'Tis Gordon. What do you want here? Was it so late then, when the Duke dismissed you?

Gordon. Your hand bound up and in a scarf?

Butler. 'Tis wounded.

That Illo fought as he was frantic, till At last we threw him on the ground.

[804]

Butler. Is he in bed? Gordon. Ah, Butler! Butler. Is he? speak. Gordon. He shall not perish! Not through you! The Heaven 25 Refuses your arm. See-'tis wounded!-Butler. There is no need of my arm. Gordon. The most guilty Have perished, and enough is given to justice. [The Groom of the Chamber advances from the gallery with his finger on his mouth, commanding silence. Gordon. He sleeps! O murder not the holy sleep! Butler. No! he shall die awake. [Is going. His heart still cleaves 30 Gordon. To earthly things: he's not prepared to step Into the presence of his God! Butler (going). God's merciful! Gordon (holds him). Grant him but this night's respite. Butler (hurrying off). The next moment May ruin all. Gordon (holds him still). One hour!--Unhold me! What Can that short respite profit him? O-Time 35 Gordon Works miracles. In one hour many thousands Of grains of sand run out; and quick as they, Thought follows thought within the human soul. Only one hour! Your heart may change its purpose, His heart may change its purpose—some new tidings 40 May come; some fortunate event, decisive, May fall from Heaven and rescue him. To these enter Macdonald and Devereux, with the Halberdiers.

Gordon (throwing himself between him and them). No, monster! First over my dead body thou shalt tread. I will not live to see the accursed deed!

Butler (forcing him out of the way). Weak-hearted dotard!

[Trumpets are heard in the distance.

Devereux and Macdonald. Hark! The Swedish trumpets! The Swedes before the ramparts! Let us hasten!

Gordon (rushes out). O, God of Mercy!

Butler (calling after him).

Governor, to your post!

Groom of the Chamber (hurries in). Who dares make larum here? Hush! The Duke sleeps.

Devereux (with loud harsh voice). Friend, it is time now to make larum.

Groom of the Chamber. Help!

Murder!

Butler. Down with him!

Groom of the Chamber (run through the body by Devereux, falls at the entrance of the gallery). Jesus Maria!

Butler. Burst the doors open!

10

[They rush over the body into the gallery—two doors are heard to crash one after the other—Voices deadened by the distance—Clash of arms—then all at once a profound silence.

[806] Scene VI

Countess Tertsky (with a light). Her bed-chamber is empty; she herself

Is no where to be found! The Neubrunn too,

Who watched by her, is missing. If she should

Be flown—But whither flown? We must call up

Every soul in the house. How will the Duke

Bear up against these worst bad tidings? O If that my husband now were but returned Home from the banquet: Hark! I wonder whether

The Duke is still awake! I thought I heard

Voices and tread of feet here! I will go

And listen at the door. Hark! What is that?

'Tis hastening up the steps!

Gordon (rushes in out of breath). 'Tis a mistake.

'Tis not the Swedes-Ye must proceed no further-

Butler! O God! Where is he?

[Then observing the Countess.

Countess. You are come then from the castle? Where's my husband?

Countess! Say——

Gordon. Your husband!—Ask not!—To the Duke——

Countess.

Gordon. On this moment

Does the world hang. For God's sake! to the Duke.

While we are speaking—-

You have discovered to me——

[Calling loudly.

Butler! Butler! God!

Countess. Why, he is at the castle with my husband.

[Butler comes from the gallery.

Has sent me hither, will be here himself Instantly.—You must not proceed.

Butler. He comes

Too late. [Gordon dashes himself against the wall.

Gordon. O God of mercy!

[807]

Who will be here himself? Octavio

Countess. What is it, Seni?

Countess. What is it? For God's sake!

Seni. And do you ask? Within the Duke lies murder'd—and your husband Assassinated at the Castle.

[The Countess stands motionless.

Female Servant (rushing across the stage). Help! Help! the Duchess!

Burgomaster (enters). What mean these confused Loud cries, that wake the sleepers of this house?

Gordon. Your house is cursed to all eternity.

In your house doth the Duke lie murdered!

Burgomaster (rushing out). Heaven forbid!

First Servant. Fly! fly! they murder us all!

Second Servant (carrying silver plate). That way! The lower Passages are blocked up.

Devereux (to Butler). Here is the golden fleece—the Duke's sword—

Macdonald. Is it your order-

Butler (pointing to Octavio). Here stands he who now Hath the sole power to issue orders.

[Devereux and Macdonald retire with marks of obeisance. One drops away after the other, till only Butler, Octavio, and Gordon remain on the stage.

Octavio (turning to Butler). Was that my purpose, Butler, when we parted? O God of Justice! To thee I lift my hand! I am not guilty Of this foul deed.

Butler. Your hand is pure. You have Availed yourself of mine.

10

Octavio. Merciless man! Thus to abuse the orders of thy Lord-And stain thy Emperor's holy name with murder, With bloody, most accursed assassination!

Butler. I've but fulfilled the Emperor's own sentence.

15

Octavio. O curse of Kings, Infusing a dread life into their words, And linking to the sudden transient thought The unchangeable irrevocable deed. Was there necessity for such an eager Despatch? Could'st thou not grant the merciful A time for mercy? Time is man's good Angel. To leave no interval between the sentence, And the fulfilment of it, doth beseem

I always Knew what I did, and therefore no result Hath power to frighten or surprise my spirit. In the pangs of d	eath, my niece has disappeared.

Octavio. O Countess! my house too is desolate.

This house of splendour, and of princely glory, Doth now stand desolated: the affrighted servants Rush forth through all its doors. I am the last Therein; I shut it up, and here deliver

The keys.

10

Countess. Who next is to be murdered? Who is next To be maltreated? Lo! The Duke is dead. The Emperor's vengeance may be pacified! Spare the old servants; let not their fidelity Be imputed to the faithful as a crime— The evil destiny surprised my brother

15

Octavio. Speak not of vengeance! Speak not of maltreatment!

The Emperor is appeased; the heavy fault
Hath heavily been expiated—nothing
Descended from the father to the daughter,

Except his glory and his services.
The Empress honours your adversity,
Takes part in your afflictions, opens to you
Her motherly arms! Therefore no farther fears!
Yield yourself up in hope and confidence
To the Imperial Grace!

Too suddenly; he could not think on them.

25

Countess. To the grace and mercy of a greater Master

Do I yield up myself. Where shall the body
Of the Duke have its place of final rest?
In the Chartreuse, which he himself did found,
At Gitschin rests the Countess Wallenstein;
And by her side, to whom he was indebted
For his first fortunes, gratefully he wished
He might sometime repose in death! O let him
Be buried there. And likewise, for my husband's 30

This sure may well be granted us—one sepulchre Beside the sepulchres of our forefathers!

Remains, I ask the like grace. The Emperor

Is now proprietor of all our castles.

35

Octavio. Countess, you tremble, you turn pale!

40

Octavio. Countess, you tremble, you turn paic:

Countess. You think
More worthily of me, than to believe
I would survive the downfall of my house.
We did not hold ourselves too mean to grasp
After a monarch's crown—the crown did fate
Deny, but not the feeling and the spirit
That to the crown belong! We deem a Courageous death more worthy of our free station

Than a dishonoured life.—I have taken poison.

45

Octavio. Help! Help! Support her!

Countess.

[811]

Nay, it is too late.

50

In a few moments is my fate accomplished.

[Exit Countess.

Gordon. O house of death and horrors!

[An officer enters, and brings a letter with the great seal.

Gordon (steps forward and meets him). What is this? It is the Imperial Seal.

[He reads the Address, and delivers the letter to Octavio with a look of reproach, and with an emphasis on the word.

To the Prince Piccolomini.

[Octavio, with his whole frame expressive of sudden anguish, raises

(The curtain drops.)

LINENOTES:

- [10] Octavio (with a deep anguish). O Countess! 1800, 1828, 1829.
- [27] Countess (with her eye raised to heaven). 1800, 1828, 1829.
- [41] Countess (reassembles all her powers, and speaks with energy and dignity). You think 1800, 1828, 1829.
- [54] Prince 1800, 1828, 1829.

The following mistranslations, which were noted in the Westminster Review, Art. 3, July 1850, are recorded in the Notes affixed to The Dramatic Works of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, 1852, pp. 426-7.

THE PICCOLOMINI.

- Act I, Scene 2, line 106. 'Der Posten' is rendered 'travelling-bills' instead of an 'item' or 'article in an account'.
- Act I, Scene 4, line 27. 'Geschmeidig' is rendered 'hammered out' instead of 'pliant'.
- Act I, Scene 8, line 28. 'Das holde Kind' is rendered 'The voice of my child' instead of 'The charming child'.
- Act I, Scene 9, line 13. 'Jagdzug' is rendered 'hunting dress' instead of 'hunting stud'.
- Act II, Scene 7, line 9. 'Was denn?' is rendered 'What then?' instead of 'What?'
- Act II, Scene 12, lines 94, 95. 'Ist unser Glaub' eine Kanzel und Altar' is rendered 'Our faith hangs upon the pulpit and altar' instead of 'is without pulpit and altar'.
- Act II, Scene 12, line 104. 'Taboriten' is rendered 'minstrels' instead of 'a branch of the Hussites'. [Pointed out by Ferd. Freiligrath, Athenaeum, Aug. 31, 1861.]
- Act IV, Scene 7, line 103. 'Losung' is rendered 'redemption' instead of 'watchword'.

THE DEATH OF WALLENSTEIN.

Act II, Scene 6, Note. 'Verstecktesten' is rendered 'most spotted' instead of 'most secret'.

[812] REMORSE[812:1]

PREFACE

This Tragedy was written in the summer and autumn of the year 1797; at Nether Stowey, in the county of Somerset. By whose recommendation, and of the manner in which both the Play and the Author were treated by the Recommender, let me be permitted to relate: that I knew of its having been received only by a third person; that I could procure neither answer nor the manuscript; and that but for an accident I should have had no copy of the Work itself. That such treatment would damp a young man's exertions may be easily conceived: there was no need of after-misrepresentation and calumny, as an additional sedative.

[812:2] [As an amusing anecdote, and in the wish to prepare future Authors, as young as I then was and as ignorant of the world, of [812:3] the treatment they may meet with, I will add, that the Person [812:4] who by a twice conveyed recommendation (in the year 1797) had urged me to write a Tragedy [812:5]: who on my own objection that I was utterly ignorant of all Stage-tactics had promised that he would himself make the necessary alterations, if the Piece should be at all representable; who together with the copy of the Play (hastened by his means so as to prevent the full developement [812:6] of the characters) received a letter from the Author to this purport, 'that conscious of his inexperience, he had cherished no expectations, and should therefore feel no disappointment from the rejection of the Play; but that if beyond his hopes Mr. — found in it any capability of being adapted to the Stage, it was delivered to him as if it had been his own Manuscript, to add, omit, or alter, as he saw occasion; and that (if it were rejected) the Author would deem himself amply remunerated by the addition to his Experience, which he should receive, if Mr. — would point out [812:7] to him the nature of its unfitness for public Representation';—that this very Person returned [813:1] me no answer, and [813:2], spite of repeated applications, retained my

Manuscript when I was not conscious of any other Copy being in existence (my duplicate having been destroyed by an accident); that $he^{[813:3]}$ suffered this Manuscript to wander about the Town from his house, so that but ten days ago I saw^[813:4] the song in the third Act printed and set to music, without my name, by Mr. Carnaby, in the year 1802; likewise that the same person asserted^[813:5] (as I have been assured) that the Play was rejected, because I would not submit to the alteration of one ludicrous line; and finally^[813:6] in the year 1806 amused and delighted (as who was ever in his company, if I may trust the universal report, without being amused and delighted?) a large company at the house of a highly respectable Member of Parliament, with the ridicule of the^[813:7] Tragedy, as 'a fair specimen', of the whole of which he adduced a line:

'Drip! drip! drip! there's nothing here but dripping.'

In the original copy of the Play, in the first Scene of the fourth Act, Isidore had commenced his Soliloquy in the Cavern with the words:

'Drip! drip! a ceaseless sound of water-drops, [813:8],[813:9]

as far as I can at present recollect: for on the possible ludicrous association being pointed out to me, I instantly and thankfully struck out the line. And as to my obstinate tenacity, not only my old acquaintance, but (I dare boldly aver) both the Managers of Drury Lane Theatre, and every Actor and Actress, whom I have recently met in the Green Room, will repel the accusation: perhaps not without surprise.]

I thought it right to record these circumstances; [814:1] but I turn gladly and with sincere gratitude to the converse. In the close of last year I was advised to present the Tragedy once more to the Theatre. Accordingly having altered the names, I ventured to address a letter to Mr. Whitbread, requesting information as to whom I was to present my Tragedy. My Letter was instantly and most kindly answered, and I have now nothing to tell but a Tale of Thanks. I should scarce know where to begin, if the goodness of the Manager, Mr. Arnold, had not called for my first acknowledgements. Not merely as an acting Play, but as a dramatic Poem, the 'Remorse' has been importantly and manifoldly benefited by his suggestions. I can with severest truth say, that every hint he gave me was the ground of some improvement. In the next place it is my duty to mention Mr. Raymond, the Stage Manager. Had the 'Remorse' been his own Play—nay, that is saying too little—had I been his brother, or his dearest friend, he could not have felt or exerted himself more zealously.

As the Piece is now acting, it may be thought presumptuous in me to speak of the Actors; yet how can I abstain, feeling, as I do, Mrs. GLOVER's [814:2] powerful assistance, and knowing the circumstances [814:3] under which she consented to act Alhadra? A time will come, when without painfully oppressing her feelings, I may speak of this more fully. To Miss Smith I have an equal, though different acknowledgement to make, namely, for her acceptance of a character not fully developed, and quite inadequate to her extraordinary powers. She enlivened and supported many passages, which (though not perhaps wholly uninteresting in the closet) would but for her have hung heavy on the ears of a Theatrical Audience. And in speaking the Epilogue, a composition which (I fear) my hurry will hardly excuse, and which, as unworthy of her name, is here [1828, 1829, 1834] omitted, she made a sacrifice, which only her established character with all judges of Tragic action, could have rendered compatible with her duty to herself. To Mr. DE CAMP's judgement and full conception of Isidore; to Mr. POPE's accurate representation of the partial, yet honourable Father; to Mr. Elliston's energy in the character of Alvar, and who in more than one instance gave it beauties and striking points, which not only delighted but surprised me; and to Mr. RAE^[815:1], to whose zeal, and unwearied study of his part, I am not less indebted as a Man, than to his impassioned realization of Ordonio, as an Author, —to these, and to all concerned with the bringing out of the Play, I can address but one word—Thanks!—but that word is uttered sincerely! and to persons constantly before the eye of the Public, a public acknowledgement becomes appropriate, and a duty.

I defer all answers to the different criticisms on the Piece to an Essay, which I am about to publish immediately, on Dramatic Poetry, relatively to the present State of the Metropolitan Theatres.

From the necessity of hastening the Publication I was obliged to send the Manuscript intended for the Stage: which is the sole cause of the number of directions printed in italics.

S. T. Coleridge.

I am sure you will not be surprised that this did provoke me, and that it justifies to my heart the detail here printed.

'Drip! drip! drip! drip!—in such a place as this It has nothing else to do but drip! drip! drip! I wish it had not dripp'd upon my torch.'

In MS. III the opening lines are erased and the fourth Act opens thus:—

This ceaseless dreary sound of water-drops dropping water

I would they had not fallen upon my Torch!

After the lapse of sixteen years Coleridge may have confused the corrected version with the original. There is no MS. authority for the line as quoted in the Preface.

- [814:3] Mrs. G.'s eldest child was buried on the Thursday—two others were ill, and one, with croup given over (tho' it has since recovered) and spite of her's, the physician's and my most passionate remonstrances, she was forced to act Alhadra on the Saturday!!!

Mrs. Glover (I do not much like her, in some respects) was duped into a marriage with a worthless Sharper, who passed himself off on her as a man of rank and fortune and who now lives and feeds himself and his vices on her salary—and hence all her affections flow in the channel of her maternal feelings. She is a passionately fond mother, and to act Alhadra on the Saturday after the Thursday's Burial! MS. H. (For MS. H see p. 819.)

[815:1] Poor Rae! a good man as Friend, Husband, Father. He did his best! but his person is so insignificant, tho' a handsome man off the stage—and, worse than that, the thinness and an insufficiency of his voice—yet Ordonio has done him service. MS. H.

PROLOGUE

BY C. LAMB[816:1]

Spoken by Mr. Carr

There are, I am told, who sharply criticise Our modern theatres' unwieldy size.

We players shall scarce plead guilty to that charge, Who think a house can never be too large:
Griev'd when a rant, that's worth a nation's ear, Shakes some prescrib'd Lyceum's petty sphere;
And pleased to mark the grin from space to space Spread epidemic o'er a town's broad face.—
O might old Betterton or Booth return
To view our structures from their silent urn,
Could Quin come stalking from Elysian glades,

Or Garrick get a day-rule from the shades—
Where now, perhaps, in mirth which Spirits approve,
He imitates the ways of men above,
And apes the actions of our upper coast,	15
As in his days of flesh he play'd the ghost:—
How might they bless our ampler scope to please,
And hate their own old shrunk up audiences.—
Their houses yet were palaces to those,
Which Ben and Fletcher for their triumphs chose,	20
Shakspeare, who wish'd a kingdom for a stage,
Like giant pent in disproportion'd cage,
Mourn'd his contracted strengths and crippled rage.
He who could tame his vast ambition down
To please some scatter'd gleanings of a town,	25
And, if some hundred auditors supplied
Their meagre meed of claps, was satisfied,
How had he felt, when that dread curse of Lear's
Had burst tremendous on a thousand ears,
While deep-struck wonder from applauding bands	30
Return'd the tribute of as many hands!
Rude were his guests; he never made his bow
To such an audience as salutes us now.
He lack'd the balm of labour, female praise.
Few Ladies in his time frequented plays,	35
Or came to see a youth with awkward art
And shrill sharp pipe burlesque the woman's part.
The very use, since so essential grown,
Of painted scenes, was to his stage unknown.
The air-blest castle, round whose wholesome crest,	40
The martlet, guest of summer, chose her nest—
The forest walks of Arden's fair domain,
Where Jaques fed his solitary vein—
No pencil's aid as yet had dared supply,
Seen only by the intellectual eye.	45
Those scenic helps, denied to Shakspeare's page,
Our Author owes to a more liberal age.
Nor pomp nor circumstance are wanting here;
'Tis for himself alone that he must fear.
Yet shall remembrance cherish the just pride,	50
That (be the laurel granted or denied)
He first essay'd in this distinguished fane,
Severer muses and a tragic strain.

A rejected address—which poor Charles was restless to have used. I fitted him with an Epilogue of the same calibre with his Prologue, but I thought it would be going a little too [816:1] far to publish mine. MS. H.

EPILOGUE

Written by the Author, and spoken by Miss Smith in the character of Teresa.

[As printed in The Morning Chronicle, Jan. 28, 1813.]

Oh! the procrastinating idle rogue, The Poet has just sent his Epilogue; Ay, 'tis just like him!—and the hand!

[817]

	[Poring over the manuscript.
The stick!
I could as soon decipher Arabic!
But, hark! my wizard's own poetic elf	5
Bids me take courage, and make one myself!
An heiress, and with sighing swains in plenty
From blooming nineteen to full-blown five-and-twenty,
Life beating high, and youth upon the wing,
'A six years' absence was a heavy thing!'	10
Heavy!—nay, let's describe things as they are,
With sense and nature 'twas at open war—
Mere affectation to be singular.
Yet ere you overflow in condemnation,
Think first of poor Teresa's education;	15

REMORSE^[819:1]

[S. T. C.]

A TRAGEDY IN FIVE ACTS^[819:2]

DRAMATIS PERSONAE

1797. 1813-1834.

Velez = Marquis Valdez, Father to the two brothers, and Doña Teresa's

Guardian.

ALBERT = Don Alvar, the eldest son.
Osorio = Don Ordonio, the youngest son.

Francesco = Monviedro, a Dominican and Inquisitor.

Maurice = Zulimez, the faithful attendant on Alvar.

Ferdinand = Isidore, a Moresco Chieftain, ostensibly a Christian.

Naomi = Naomi.

Moors, Servants, &c.

Maria = Doña Teresa, an Orphan Heiress.

Alhadra, wife of = Alhadra, Wife of Isidore.

 F_{ERDINAND}

Familiars of the Inquisition. $\,$

Moors, Servants, &c.

Time. The reign of Philip II., just at the close of the civil wars against the Moors, and during the heat of the persecution which raged against them, shortly after the edict which forbade the wearing of Moresco apparel under pain of death.

FOOTNOTES:

[819:1] Remorse, a recast of Osorio, was first played at Drury Lane Theatre, January 23, 1813, and had a run of twenty nights. It was first published as a pamphlet of seventy-two pages in 1813, and ran through three editions. The Second Edition, which numbered seventy-eight pages, was enlarged by an Appendix consisting of a passage which formed part of Act IV,

Scene 2 of Osorio, and had been published in the Lyrical Ballads (1798, 1800, 1802, and 1805) as a separate poem entitled 'The Foster-Mother's Tale' (vide ante, pp. 182-4, 571-4), and of a second passage numbering twenty-eight lines, which was afterwards printed as a footnote to Remorse, Act II, Scene 2, line 42 (vide post, p. 842) 'You are a painter, &c.' The Third Edition was a reissue of the Second. In the Athenæum, April 1, 1896, J. D. Campbell points out that there were three issues of the First Edition, of which he had only seen the first; viz. (1) the normal text [Edition I]; (2) a second issue [Edition I (b)] quoted by the Editor (R. H. Shepherd) of Osorio, 1877, as a variant of Act V, line 252; (3) a third issue quoted by the same writer in his edition of P. W., 1877-80, iii. 154, 155 [Edition I (c)]. There is a copy of Edition I (b) in the British Museum: save in respect of Act V, line 252, it does not vary from Edition I. I have not seen a copy of Edition I (c). Two copies of Remorse annotated by S. T. Coleridge have passed through my hands, (1) a copy of the First Edition presented to the Manager of the Theatre, J. G. Raymond (MS. R.), and (2) a copy of the Second Edition presented to Miss Sarah Hutchinson (MS. H.). Remorse is included in 1828, 1829, and 1834.

[819:2] This Tragedy has a particular advantage—it has the first scene, in which Prologue plays Dialogue with Dumby. (MS. H.)

[820]

ACT I

Scene I

The Sea Shore on the Coast of Granada.

Don Alvar, wrapt in a Boat cloak, and Zulimez (a Moresco), both as just landed.

Zulimez. No sound, no face of joy to welcome us!

Alvar. My faithful Zulimez, for one brief moment Let me forget my anguish and their crimes. If aught on earth demand an unmix'd feeling, 'Tis surely this—after long years of exile, To step forth on firm land, and gazing round us, To hail at once our country, and our birth-place. Hail, Spain! Granada, hail! once more I press Thy sands with filial awe, land of my fathers!

Zulimez. Then claim your rights in it! O, revered Don Alvar, Yet, yet give up your all too gentle purpose. It is too hazardous! reveal yourself, And let the guilty meet the doom of guilt!

10

Alvar. Remember, Zulimez! I am his brother, Injured indeed! O deeply injured! yet Ordonio's brother.

15

Zulimez. Nobly-minded Alvar!
This sure but gives his guilt a blacker dye.

Alvar. The more behoves it I should rouse within him Remorse! that I should save him from himself.

20

Zulimez. Remorse is as the heart in which it grows: If that be gentle, it drops balmy dews
Of true repentance; but if proud and gloomy,
It is a poison-tree, that pierced to the inmost
Weeps only tears of poison!

Alvar. And of a brother,
Dare I hold this, unproved? nor make one effort
To save him?—Hear me, friend! I have yet to tell thee,
That this same life, which he conspired to take,
Himself once rescued from the angry flood,
And at the imminent hazard of his own.
Add too my oath—

25

Zulimez. You have thrice told already The years of absence and of secrecy, To which a forced oath bound you; if in truth A suborned murderer have the power to dictate A binding oath—

30

Alvar. My long captivity

Left me no choice: the very wish too languished
With the fond hope that nursed it; the sick babe
Drooped at the bosom of its famished mother.

But (more than all) Teresa's perfidy;

[821]

35

The assassin's strong assurance, when no interest, No motive could have tempted him to falsehood: In the first pangs of his awaken'd conscience, When with abhorrence of his own black purpose The murderous weapon, pointed at my breast, Fell from his palsied hand—	40
Zulimez. Heavy presumption!
Alvar. It weighed not with me—Hark! I will tell thee all; As we passed by, I bade thee mark the base Of yonder cliff—	45
Zulimez. That rocky seat you mean, Shaped by the billows?—
Alvar. There Teresa met me The morning of the day of my departure. We were alone: the purple hue of dawn Fell from the kindling east aslant upon us, And blending with the blushes on her cheek, Suffused the tear-drops there with rosy light. There seemed a glory round us, and Teresa The angel of the vision! [821:1]	50
Had'st thou seen How in each motion her most innocent soul Beamed forth and brightened, thou thyself would'st tell me, Guilt is a thing impossible in her! She must be innocent!	55
Zulimez. Proceed, my lord!
Alvar. A portrait which she had procured by stealth, (For even then it seems her heart foreboded Or knew Ordonio's moody rivalry) A portrait of herself with thrilling hand She tied around my neck, conjuring me,	60
With earnest prayers, that I would keep it sacred To my own knowledge: nor did she desist, Till she had won a solemn promise from me, That (save my own) no eye should e'er behold it Till my return. Yet this the assassin knew, Knew that which none but she could have disclosed.	65 70
Zulimez. A damning proof!
Alvar. My own life wearied me! And but for the imperative voice within, With mine own hand I had thrown off the burthen. That voice, which quelled me, calmed me: and I sought The Belgic states: there joined the better cause; And there too fought as one that courted death! Wounded, I fell among the dead and dying, In death-like trance: a long imprisonment followed.	75
The fulness of my anguish by degrees Waned to a meditative melancholy; And still the more I mused, my soul became More doubtful, more perplexed; and still Teresa, Night after night, she visited my sleep,	80
Now as a saintly sufferer, wan and tearful, Now as a saint in glory beckoning to me! Yes, still as in contempt of proof and reason, I cherish the fond faith that she is guiltless! Hear then my fix'd resolve: I'll linger here In the disguise of a Moresco chieftain.— The Moorish robes?—	85
Zulimez. All, all are in the sea-cave, Some furlong hence. I bade our mariners Secrete the boat there.	90
Zulimez. Be assured That it remains uninjured.

[822]

Alvar.

Thus disguised

I will first seek to meet Ordonio's—wife! If possible, alone too. This was her wonted walk, And this the hour; her words, her very looks Will acquit her or convict.		95
Zulimez. Will they not know you?
Alvar. With your aid, friend, I shall unfearingly Trust the disguise; and as to my complexion, My long imprisonment, the scanty food, This scar—and toil beneath a burning sun, Have done already half the burnings for us		100
Have done already half the business for us. Add too my youth, since last we saw each other. Manhood has swoln my chest, and taught my voice A hoarser note—Besides, they think me dead: And what the mind believes impossible, The bodily sense is slow to recognize.		105
Zulimez. 'Tis yours, sir, to command, mine to obey. Now to the cave beneath the vaulted rock, Where having shaped you to a Moorish chieftain, I'll seek our mariners; and in the dusk Transport whate'er we need to the small dell In the Alpujarras—there where Zagri lived.		110 115
Alvar. I know it well: it is the obscurest haunt Of all the mountains—[823:1] Voices at a distance! Let us away!	[Both stand listening.

Scene II

Enter Teresa and Valdez.

Teresa. I hold Ordonio dear; he is your son And Alvar's brother.

Valdez. Love him for himself, Nor make the living wretched for the dead.

Teresa. I mourn that you should plead in vain, Lord Valdez,

	But heaven hath heard my vow, and I remain Faithful to Alvar, be he dead or living.	5
	Valdez. Heaven knows with what delight I saw your loves, And could my heart's blood give him back to thee I would die smiling. But these are idle thoughts! Thy dying father comes upon my soul	10
[824]	With that same look, with which he gave thee to me; I held thee in my arms a powerless babe, While thy poor mother with a mute entreaty
	Fixed her faint eyes on mine. Ah not for this, That I should let thee feed thy soul with gloom, And with slow anguish wear away thy life,	15
	The victim of a useless constancy. I must not see thee wretched.
	Teresa. There are woes Ill bartered for the garishness of joy!	20
	If it be wretched with an untired eye To watch those skiey tints, and this green ocean; Or in the sultry hour beneath some rock,	20
	My hair dishevelled by the pleasant sea breeze, To shape sweet visions, and live o'er again
	All past hours of delight! If it be wretched To watch some bark, and fancy Alvar there,	25
	To go through each minutest circumstance Of the blest meeting, and to frame adventures
	Most terrible and strange, and hear him tell them; [824:1] (As once I knew a crazy Moorish maid	30
	Who drest her in her buried lover's clothes, And o'er the smooth spring in the mountain cleft
	Hung with her lute, and played the selfsame tune He used to play, and listened to the shadow
	Herself had made)—if this be wretchedness, And if indeed it be a wretched thing	35
	To trick out mine own death-bed, and imagine That I had died, died just ere his return!
	Then see him listening to my constancy, Or hover round, as he at midnight oft	40
	Sits on my grave and gazes at the moon; Or haply in some more fantastic mood,
	To be in Paradise, and with choice flowers Build up a bower where he and I might dwell,
[825]	And there to wait his coming! O my sire! My Alvar's sire! if this be wretchedness	45
	That eats away the life, what were it, think you, If in a most assured reality
	He should return, and see a brother's infant Smile at him from my arms?	50
	Oh what a thought!
	Valdez. A thought? even so! mere thought! an empty thought. The very week he promised his return—
	Teresa. Was it not then a busy joy? to see him, After those three years' travels! we had no fears—	55
	The frequent tidings, the ne'er failing letter. Almost endeared his absence! Yet the gladness, The tumult of our joy! What then if now——
	Valdez. O power of youth to feed on pleasant thoughts, Spite of conviction! I am old and heartless! Yes, I am old—I have no pleasant fancies—	60
	Hectic and unrefreshed with rest—
	Teresa. My father!
	Valdez. The sober truth is all too much for me! I see no sail which brings not to my mind The home-bound bark in which my son was captured By the Algerine—to perish with his captors!	65
	Teresa. Oh no! he did not!
	Valdez. Captured in sight of land! From yon hill point, nay, from our castle watch-tower We might have seen——

Teresa.	His capture, not his death.

[826]

[827]

'Twas little probable, that Don Ordonio,

	That your illustrious son, who fought so bravely Some four years since to quell these rebel Moors, Should prove the patron of this infidel! The warranter of a Moresco's faith! Now I return.	130
	Alhadra. My Lord, my husband's name Is Isidore. (Ordonio starts.) You may remember it: Three years ago, three years this very week, You left him at Almeria.	135
	Monviedro. Palpably false! This very week, three years ago, my lord, (You needs must recollect it by your wound) You were at sea, and there engaged the pirates, The murderers doubtless of your brother Alvar! What, is he ill, my Lord? how strange he looks!	140
[828]	Valdez. You pressed upon him too abruptly, father! The fate of one, on whom, you know, he doted.	145
	Ordonio. O Heavens! I?—I doted?
	Yes! I doted on him. [Ordonio walks to the end of the stage, Valdez follows.
	Teresa. I do not, can not, love him. Is my heart hard? Is my heart hard? that even now the thought Should force itself upon me?—Yet I feel it!	150
	Monviedro. The drops did start and stand upon his forehead! I will return. In very truth, I grieve To have been the occasion. Ho! attend me, woman!
	Alhadra (to Teresa). O gentle lady! make the father stay, Until my lord recover. I am sure, That he will say he is my husband's friend.	155
	Teresa. Stay, father! stay! my lord will soon recover.
	Ordonio (as they return, to Valdez). Strange, that this Monviedro Should have the power so to distemper me!
	Valdez. Nay, 'twas an amiable weakness, son!	160
	Monviedro. My lord, I truly grieve——
	Ordonio. Tut! name it not. A sudden seizure, father! think not of it. As to this woman's husband, I do know him. I know him well, and that he is a Christian.
	Monviedro. I hope, my lord, your merely human pity Doth not prevail——	165
	Ordonio. 'Tis certain that he was a catholic; What changes may have happened in three years, I can not say; but grant me this, good father: Myself I'll sift him: if I find him sound, You'll grant me your authority and name To liberate his house.	170
	Monviedro. Your zeal, my lord, And your late merits in this holy warfare Would authorize an ampler trust—you have it.
	Ordonio. I will attend you home within an hour.	175
	Valdez. Meantime return with us and take refreshment.
	Alhadra. Not till my husband's free! I may not do it. I will stay here.
[829]	Teresa (aside). Who is this Isidore?
	Valdez. Daughter!
	Teresa. With your permission, my dear lord, I'll loiter yet awhile t' enjoy the sea breeze.	180

[Exeunt Valdez, Monviedro and Ordonio.

Alhadra. Hah! there he goes! a bitter curse go with him, A scathing curse! You hate him, don't you, lady?
Teresa. Oh fear not me! my heart is sad for you.	185
Alhadra. These fell inquisitors! these sons of blood! As I came on, his face so maddened me, That ever and anon I clutched my dagger And half unsheathed it——
Teresa. Be more calm, I pray you.
Alhadra. And as he walked along the narrow path Close by the mountain's edge, my soul grew eager; 'Twas with hard toil I made myself remember That his Familiars held my babes and husband. To have leapt upon him with a tiger's plunge, And hurl'd him down the rugged precipice, O, it had been most sweet!	190 195
Teresa. Hush! hush for shame! Where is your woman's heart?
Alhadra. O gentle lady! You have no skill to guess my many wrongs, Many and strange! Besides, I am a Christian, And Christians never pardon—'tis their faith!	200
Teresa. Shame fall on those who so have shewn it to thee!
Alhadra. I know that man; 'tis well he knows not me. Five years ago (and he was the prime agent), Five years ago the holy brethren seized me.
Teresa. What might your crime be?
Alhadra. I was a Moresco! They cast me, then a young and nursing mother, Into a dungeon of their prison house, Where was no bed, no fire, no ray of light,	205
No touch, no sound of comfort! The black air, It was a toil to breathe it! when the door, Slow opening at the appointed hour, disclosed One human countenance, the lamp's red flame Cowered as it entered, and at once sank down.	210
Oh miserable! by that lamp to see My infant quarrelling with the coarse hard bread Brought daily; for the little wretch was sickly— My rage had dried away its natural food. [830:1]	215
In darkness I remained—the dull bell counting, Which haply told me, that the all-cheering sun Was rising on our garden. When I dozed, My infant's moanings mingled with my slumbers And waked me.—If you were a mother, lady, I should scarce dare to tell you, that its noises And peevish cries so fretted on my brain That I have struck the innocent babe in anger.	220 225
Teresa. O Heaven! it is too horrible to hear.
Alhadra. What was it then to suffer? 'Tis most right That such as you should hear it.—Know you not,
What nature makes you mourn, she bids you heal? ^[830:2] Great evils ask great passions to redress them, And whirlwinds fitliest scatter pestilence.	230
Teresa. You were at length released?
Alhadra. Yes, at length I saw the blessed arch of the whole heaven! 'Twas the first time my infant smiled. No more— For if I dwell upon that moment, Lady, A trance comes on which makes me o'er again All I then was—my knees hang loose and drag, And my lip falls with such an idiot laugh,	235
That you would start and shudder!

But your husband—

Teresa.

[830]

Alhadra. A month's imprisonment would kill him, Lady.	240
Teresa. Alas, poor man!
Alhadra. He hath a lion's courage, Fearless in act, but feeble in endurance; Unfit for boisterous times, with gentle heart He worships nature in the hill and valley, Not knowing what he loves, but loves it all—	245
Enter Alvar disguised as a Moresco, and in Moorish	garments.
Teresa. Know you that stately Moor?
Alhadra. I know him not: But doubt not he is some Moresco chieftain, Who hides himself among the Alpujarras.
Teresa. The Alpujarras? Does he know his danger, So near this seat?
Alhadra. He wears the Moorish robes too, As in defiance of the royal edict.	250
[Alhadra advances to Alvar , who has walked to near the rocks. Teresa drops her veil.	o the back of the stage,
Alhadra. Gallant Moresco! An inquisitor, Monviedro, of known hatred to our race——
Alvar. You have mistaken me. I am a Christian.
Alhadra. He deems, that we are plotting to ensnare him: Speak to him, Lady—none can hear you speak, And not believe you innocent of guile.	255
Teresa. If aught enforce you to concealment, Sir—
Alhadra. He trembles strangely.
[Alvar sinks down and hid	les his face in his robe.
Teresa. See, we have disturbed him.
I pray you, think us friends—uncowl your face, For you seem faint, and the night-breeze blows healing. I pray you, think us friends!	proaches nearer to him. 260
Alvar (raising his head). Calm, very calm! 'Tis all too tranquil for reality! And she spoke to me with her innocent voice, That voice, that innocent voice! She is no traitress!	265
Teresa. Let us retire (haughtily to Alhadra).
Alhadra. He is indeed a Christian.
Alvar (aside). She deems me dead, yet wears no mourning garmed Why should my brother's—wife—wear mourning garments?	ent! 270 [To Teresa.
Your pardon, noble dame! that I disturbed you: I had just started from a frightful dream.	[10 Thusa.
Teresa. Dreams tell but of the past, and yet, 'tis said, They prophesy—
Alvar. The Past lives o'er again In its effects, and to the guilty spirit The ever-frowning Present is its image.	275
Teresa. Traitress!	(Then exide)
TATE	(Then aside.)
What sudden spell o'ermasters me? Why seeks he me, shunning the Moorish woman?	(Then aside.)
	(Then aside.) 280

[832]

And murderers were suborned against my life. But by my looks, and most impassioned words, I roused the virtues that are dead in no man, Even in the assassins' hearts! they made their terms, And thanked me for redeeming them from murder. Alhadra. You are lost in thought: hear him no more, sweet Lady! Teresa. From morn to night I am myself a dreamer, And clickt things bring on me the idle mood!	290
And slight things bring on me the idle mood! Well sir, what happened then?
Alvar. On a rude rock, A rock, methought, fast by a grove of firs, Whose thready leaves to the low-breathing gale Made a soft sound most like the distant ocean, I stayed, as though the hour of death were passed, And I were citting in the world of origins.	295
And I were sitting in the world of spirits— For all things seemed unreal! There I sate— The dews fell clammy, and the night descended, Black, sultry, close! and ere the midnight hour A storm came on, mingling all sounds of fear,	300
That woods, and sky, and mountains, seemed one havock. The second flash of lightning shewed a tree Hard by me, newly scathed. I rose tumultuous: My soul worked high, I bared my head to the storm, And with loud voice and clamorous agony, Kneeling I prayed to the great Spirit that made me, Prayed, that Remorse might fasten on their hearts,	305 310
And cling with poisonous tooth, inextricable As the gored lion's bite!
Teresa. A fearful curse!
Alhadra. But dreamt you not that you returned and killed them? Dreamt you of no revenge?
Alvar. She would have died Died in her guilt—perchance by her own hands! And bending o'er her self-inflicted wounds, I might have met the evil glance of frenzy, And leapt myself into an unblest grave! I prayed for the punishment that cleanses hearts: For still I loved her!	315
Alhadra. And you dreamt all this?	320
Teresa. My soul is full of visions all as wild!
Alhadra. There is no room in this heart for puling love-tales.
Teresa (lifts up her veil, and advances to Alvar). Stranger, farewell! I guess not who you are, Nor why you so addressed your tale to me. Your mien is noble, and, I own, perplexed me, With obscure memory of something past, Which still escaped my efforts, or presented Tricks of a fancy pampered with long wishing.	325
If, as it sometimes happens, our rude startling, Whilst your full heart was shaping out its dream, Drove you to this, your not ungentle, wildness— You have my sympathy, and so farewell! But if some undiscovered wrongs oppress you,	330
And you need strength to drag them into light, The generous Valdez, and my Lord Ordonio, Have arm and will to aid a noble sufferer, Nor shall you want my favourable pleading. [833:1]	335
[Exeunt Teresa and Alhadra.
Alvar (alone). 'Tis strange! It cannot be! my Lord Ordonio!
Her Lord Ordonio! Nay, I will not do it! I cursed him once—and one curse is enough!	340
How sad she looked, and pale! but not like guilt— And her calm tones—sweet as a song of mercy!	-
If the bad spirit retain'd his angel's voice, Hell scarce were Hell. And why not innocent?	- · -
Who meant to murder me, might well cheat her? But ere she married him, he had stained her honour; Ah! there I am hampered. What if this were a lie	345

[833]

[834]

Framed by the assassin? Who should tell it him, If it were truth? Ordonio would not tell him.
Yet why one lie? all else, I know, was truth.	350
No start, no jealousy of stirring conscience!
And she referred to me—fondly, methought!
Could she walk here if she had been a traitress?
Here where we played together in our childhood?
Here where we plighted vows? where her cold cheek	355
Received my last kiss, when with suppressed feelings
She had fainted in my arms? It cannot be!
'Tis not in nature! I will die believing,
That I shall meet her where no evil is,
No treachery, no cup dashed from the lips.	360
I'll haunt this scene no more! live she in peace!
Her husband—aye her husband! May this angel
New mould his canker'd heart! Assist me, heaven,
That I may pray for my poor guilty brother!	[Exit.

ACT II

Scene I

A wild and mountainous country. Ordonio and Isidore are discovered, supposed at a little distance from Isidore's house.

Ordonio. Here we may stop: your house distinct in view, Yet we secured from listeners.

Isidore. Now indeed My house! and it looks cheerful as the clusters

That over-brows it! Patron! Friend! Preserver! Thrice have you saved my life. Once in the battle You gave it me: next rescued me from suicide When for my follies I was made to wander,		5
With mouths to feed, and not a morsel for them: Now but for you, a dungeon's slimy stones Had been my bed and pillow.		10
Ordonio. Good Isidore! Why this to me? It is enough, you know it.
Isidore. A common trick of gratitude, my lord, Seeking to ease her own full heart——
Ordonio. Enough! A debt repaid ceases to be a debt. You have it in your power to serve me greatly.		15
Isidore. And how, my lord? I pray you to name the thing. I would climb up an ice-glazed precipice To pluck a weed you fancied!
Ordonio. Why—that—Lady—
Isidore. 'Tis now three years, my lord, since last I saw you: Have you a son, my lord?		20
Ordonio. O miserable— Isidore! you are a man, and know mankind. I told you what I wished—now for the truth— She loved the man you kill'd.	[Aside.
Isidore. You jest, my lord?
Ordonio. And till his death is proved she will not wed me.		25
Isidore. You sport with me, my lord?
Ordonio. Come, come! this foolery Lives only in thy looks, thy heart disowns it!
Isidore. I can bear this, and any thing more grievous From you, my lord—but how can I serve you here?
Ordonio. Why, you can utter with a solemn gesture Oracular sentences of deep no-meaning, Wear a quaint garment, make mysterious antics—		30
Isidore. I am dull, my lord! I do not comprehend you.
Ordonio. In blunt terms, you can play the sorcerer. She hath no faith in Holy Church, 'tis true: Her lover schooled her in some newer nonsense!		35
Yet still a tale of spirits works upon her. She is a lone enthusiast, sensitive,
Shivers, and can not keep the tears in her eye: And such do love the marvellous too well		40
Not to believe it. We will wind up her fancy With a strange music, that she knows not of— With fumes of frankincense, and mummery,
Then leave, as one sure token of his death,		4.5
That portrait, which from off the dead man's neck I bade thee take, the trophy of thy conquest.		45
Isidore. Will that be a sure sign?
Ordonio. Beyond suspicion.
Fondly caressing him, her favour'd lover, (By some base spell he had bewitched her senses)
She whispered such dark fears of me forsooth, As made this heart pour gall into my veins.		50
And as she coyly bound it round his neck She made him promise silence; and now holds
The secret of the existence of this portrait		_
Known only to her lover and herself. But I had traced her, stolen unnotic'd on them,		55
And unsuspected saw and heard the whole.

 $\it Isidore.$ But now I should have cursed the man who told me

[836]

	You could ask aught, my lord, and I refuse— But this I can not do.
	Ordonio. Where lies your scruple?	60
	Isidore. Why—why, my lord! You know you told me that the lady lov'd you, Had loved you with incautious tenderness; That if the young man, her betrothéd husband, Returned, yourself, and she, and the honour of both Must perish. Now though with no tenderer scruples Than those which being native to the heart, Than those, my lord, which merely being a man—	65
	Ordonio. This fellow is a Man—he killed for hire One whom he knew not, yet has tender scruples!	70
[837]	These doubts, these fears, thy whine, thy stammering— Pish, fool! thou blunder'st through the book of guilt, Spelling thy villainy.
	Isidore. My lord—my lord, I can bear much—yes, very much from you! But there's a point where sufferance is meanness: I am no villain—never kill'd for hire— My gratitude——	75
	Ordonio. O aye—your gratitude! 'Twas a well-sounding word—what have you done with it?
	Isidore. Who proffers his past favours for my virtue—
	Ordonio. Virtue——
	Isidore. Tries to o'erreach me—is a very sharper, And should not speak of gratitude, my lord. I knew not 'twas your brother!	80
	Ordonio. And who told you?
	Isidore. He himself told me.
	Ordonio. Ha! you talk'd with him! And those, the two Morescoes who were with you?
	Isidore. Both fell in a night brawl at Malaga.	85
	Ordonio (in a low voice). My brother—
	Isidore. Yes, my lord, I could not tell you! I thrust away the thought—it drove me wild. But listen to me now—I pray you listen—
	Ordonio. Villain! no more. I'll hear no more of it.
	Isidore. My lord, it much imports your future safety That you should hear it.	90
	Ordonio (turning off from Isidore). Am not I a man! 'Tis as it should be! tut—the deed itself Was idle, and these after-pangs still idler!
	Isidore. We met him in the very place you mentioned. Hard by a grove of firs—
	Ordonio. Enough—enough—	95
	Isidore. He fought us valiantly, and wounded all; In fine, compelled a parley.
	Ordonio. Alvar! brother!
	Isidore. He offered me his purse—
	Ordonio. Yes?
[838]	Isidore. Yes—I spurned it.— He promised us I know not what—in vain! Then with a look and voice that overawed me, He said, What mean you, friends? My life is dear: I have a brother and a promised wife,	100

Who make life dear to me—and if I fall, That brother will roam earth and hell for vengeance. There was a likeness in his face to yours; I asked his brother's name: he said—Ordonio, Son of Lord Valdez! I had well nigh fainted.	105
At length I said (if that indeed I said it, And that no Spirit made my tongue its organ,) That woman is dishonoured by that brother, And he the man who sent us to destroy you. He drove a thrust at me in rage. I told him	110
He wore her portrait round his neck. He look'd As he had been made of the rock that propt his back— Aye, just as you look now—only less ghastly! At length recovering from his trance, he threw His sword away, and bade us take his life, It was not worth his keeping.	115
Ordonio. And you kill'd him? Oh blood hounds! may eternal wrath flame round you! He was his Maker's Image undefac'd! It seizes me—by Hell I will go on! What—would'st thou stop, man? thy pale looks won't save thee! Oh cold—cold—cold! shot through with icy cold!	120
Isidore (aside). Were he alive he had returned ere now. The consequence the same—dead through his plotting!	125
Ordonio. O this unutterable dying away—here— This sickness of the heart!
What if I went And liv'd in a hollow tomb, and fed on weeds? Aye! that's the road to heaven! O fool! fool! What have I done but that which nature destined, Or the blind elements stirred up within me? If good were meant, why were we made these beings? And if not meant—	130
Isidore. You are disturbed, my lord!
Ordonio (starts). A gust of the soul! i'faith it overset me. O 'twas all folly—all! idle as laughter! Now, Isidore! I swear that thou shalt aid me.	135
Isidore (in a low voice). I'll perish first!
Ordonio. What dost thou mutter of?
Isidore. Some of your servants know me, I am certain.
Ordonio. There's some sense in that scruple; but we'll mask you.
Isidore. They'll know my gait: but stay! last night I watched A stranger near the ruin in the wood, Who as it seemed was gathering herbs and wild flowers. I had followed him at distance, seen him scale	140
Its western wall, and by an easier entrance Stole after him unnoticed. There I marked, That mid the chequer work of light and shade With curious choice he plucked no other flowers, But those on which the moonlight fell: and once I heard him muttering o'er the plant. A wizard—	145
Some gaunt slave prowling here for dark employment.	150
Ordonio. Doubtless you question'd him?
Isidore. 'Twas my intention, Having first traced him homeward to his haunt. But lo! the stern Dominican, whose spies Lurk every where, already (as it seemed)
Had given commission to his apt familiar To seek and sound the Moor; who now returning, Was by this trusty agent stopped midway. I, dreading fresh suspicion if found near him	155
In that lone place, again concealed myself: Yet within hearing. So the Moor was question'd, And in your name, as lord of this domain,	160
Proudly he answered, 'Say to the Lord Ordonio, He that can bring the dead to life again!'

[839]

Ordonio. A strange reply!
Isidore. Aye, all of him is strange. He called himself a Christian, yet he wears The Moorish robes, as if he courted death.	165
Ordonio. Where does this wizard live?
Isidore (pointing to the distance). You see that brooklet? Trace its course backward: through a narrow opening It leads you to the place.
Ordonio. How shall I know it?
Isidore. You cannot err. It is a small green dell Built all around with high off-sloping hills, And from its shape our peasants aptly call it The Giant's Cradle. There's a lake in the midst, And round its banks tall wood that branches over,	170
And makes a kind of faery forest grow Down in the water. At the further end	175
A puny cataract falls on the lake; And there, a curious sight! you see its shadow For ever curling, like a wreath of smoke, Up through the foliage of those faery trees. His cot stands opposite. You cannot miss it.	180
Ordonio (in retiring stops suddenly at the edge of the scene, and then turning round to Isidore). Ha!—Who lurks there! Have we been overheard? There where the smooth high wall of slate-rock glitters—

Isidore. 'Neath those tall stones, which propping each the other,

Form a mock portal with their pointed arch?

Pardon my smiles! 'Tis a poor idiot boy,

Who sits in the sun, and twirls a bough about,

His weak eyes seeth'd in most unmeaning tears.

And so he sits, swaying his cone-like head,

And staring at his bough from morn to sun-set,

See-saws his voice in inarticulate noises.

Ordonio. 'Tis well, and now for this same wizard's lair.

Isidore. Some three strides up the hill, a mountain ash Stretches its lower boughs and scarlet clusters O'er the old thatch.

Ordonio. I shall not fail to find it.

[Exeunt Ordonio and Isidore.

[841]

Alvar. O faithful Zulimez! 30
That my return involved Ordonio's death,

[842]	I trust, would give me an unmingled pang, Yet bearable: but when I see my father Strewing his scant grey hairs, e'en on the ground, Which soon must be his grave, and my Teresa— Her husband proved a murderer, and her infants His infants—poor Teresa!—all would perish, All perish—all! and I (nay bear with me) Could not survive the complicated ruin!		35
[843]	Zulimez. Nay now! I have distress'd you—you well I ne'er will quit your fortunes. True,'tis tiresome! You are a painter, [842:1] one of many fancies! You can call up past deeds, and make them live On the blank canvas! and each little herb, That grows on mountain bleak, or tangled forest,	know,	40 45
	You have learnt to name—— Hark! heard you not some fo	otsteps?
	Alvar. What if it were my brother coming onwards I sent a most mysterious message to him.	?
	Enter Ordonic
	Alvar. It is he!
	Ordonio (to himself as he enters). If I distinguish' It was the Moorish woman, Isidore's wife, That passed me as I entered. A lit taper, In the night air, doth not more naturally Attract the night-flies round it, than a conjuror	d right her gait and stature,	50
	Draws round him the whole female neighbourhood.	[Addressing Alvar.	55
	You know my name, I guess, if not my person. I am Ordonio, son of the Lord Valdez.	[Fidulessing Fievalc.
	Alvar. The Son of Valdez!
	[Ordonio walks leisurely round the room	n, and looks attentively at the plants.
	Zulimez (to Alvar). Why, what ails you now? How your hand trembles! Alvar, speak! what wish yo	ou?
	Alvar. To fall upon his neck and weep forgiveness!		60
	Ordonio (returning, and aloud). Plucked in the more Those only, which the pale rays visited! O the unintelligible power of weeds, When a few odd prayers have been muttered o'er the Then they work miracles! I warrant you, There's not a leaf, but underneath it lurks Some serviceable imp. There's one of you Hath sent me a strange message.		65
	Alvar. I am he.
		Haughtily waving his hand to Zulimez.
[844]	And mark you, alone. 'He that can bring the dead to life again!'— Such was your message, Sir! You are no dullard, But one that strips the outward rind of things!	[Exit Zulimez.	70
	Alvar. 'Tis fabled there are fruits with tempting rin That are all dust and rottenness within. Would'st thou I should strip such?	nds,	75
	Ordonio. Thou quibbling fool, What dost thou mean? Think'st thou I journeyed hith To sport with thee?	ier
	Alvar. O no, my lord! to sport Best suits the gaiety of innocence.
	Ordonio (aside). O what a thing is man! the wisest A fool! a fool that laughs at its own folly, Yet still a fool! You are poor!	heart [Looks round the cottage.	80

Alvar. What follows thence?
Ordonio. That you would fain be richer. The inquisition, too—You comprehend me? You are poor, in peril. I have wealth and power, Can quench the flames, and cure your poverty: And for the boon I ask of you but this, That you should serve me—once—for a few hours.		85
Alvar. Thou art the son of Valdez! would to Heaven That I could truly and for ever serve thee.		90
Ordonio. The slave begins to soften. You are my friend, 'He that can bring the dead to life again,' Nay, no defence to me! The holy brethren Believe these calumnies—I know thee better. Thou art a man, and as a man I'll trust thee!	[Aside.	95
Alvar (aside). Alas! this hollow mirth—Declare your business	S.
Ordonio. I love a lady, and she would love me But for an idle and fantastic scruple. Have you no servants here, no listeners?	[Ordonio steps to the door.
Alvar. What, faithless too? False to his angel wife? To such a wife? Well might'st thou look so wan, Ill-starr'd Teresa!—Wretch! my softer soul Is pass'd away, and I will probe his conscience!		100
Ordonio. In truth this lady lov'd another man, But he has perish'd.
Alvar. What! you kill'd him? hey?		105
Ordonio. I'll dash thee to the earth, if thou but think'st it! Insolent slave! how dar'dst thou— [Turns abruptly from	n Alvar, and then to himself.
Why! what's this? 'Twas idiotcy! I'll tie myself to an aspen, And wear a fool's cap—	,
Alvar. Fare thee well—[845:1] I pity thee, Ordonio, even to anguish.	[Alvar is retiring.
Ordonio. Ho!	[Calling to Alvar.	110
Alvar. Be brief, what wish you?
Ordonio. You are deep at bartering—You charge yourself At a round sum. Come, come, I spake unwisely.
Alvar. I listen to you.
Ordonio. In a sudden tempest Did Alvar perish—he, I mean—the lover— The fellow——		115
Alvar. Nay, speak out! 'twill ease your heart To call him villain!—Why stand'st thou aghast? Men think it natural to hate their rivals.
Ordonio. Now, till she knows him dead, she will not wed me
Alvar. Are you not wedded, then? Merciful Heaven! Not wedded to Teresa?		120
Ordonio. Why, what ails thee? What, art thou mad? why look'st thou upward so? Dost pray to Lucifer, Prince of the Air?
Alvar. Proceed. I shall be silent.
Ordonio. To Teresa? Politic wizard! ere you sent that message, You had conn'd your lesson, made yourself proficient In all my fortunes. Hah! you prophesied A golden crop! Well, you have not mistaken— Be faithful to me and I'll pay thee nobly.		125

FOOTNOTES:

[842:1] The following lines I have preserved in this place, not so much as explanatory of the picture of the assassination, as (if I may say so without disrespect to the Public) to gratify my own feelings, the passage being no mere fancy portrait; but a slight, yet not unfaithful, profile of one [842:A], who still lives, nobilitate felix, arte clarior, vitâ colendissimus.

 $\begin{tabular}{ll} Zulimez\ (speaking\ of\ Alvar\ in\ the\ third\ person). Such was the noble Spaniard's own relation. \end{tabular}$

[847]

And his first travels, 'twas his choice or chance To make long sojourn in sea-wedded Venice; There won the love of that divine old man, Courted by mightiest kings, the famous Titian! Who, like a second and more lovely Nature, By the sweet mystery of lines and colours Changed the blank canvas to a magic mirror, That made the absent present; and to shadows Gave light, depth, substance, bloom, yea, thought and motion. He loved the old man, and revered his art: And though of noblest birth and ample fortune, The young enthusiast thought it no scorn But this inalienable ornament, To be his pupil, and with filial zeal By practice to appropriate the sage lessons, Which the gay, smiling old man gladly gave. The art, he honoured thus, requited him: And in the following and calamitous years Beguiled the hours of his captivity.

Alhadra. And then he framed this picture? and unaided By arts unlawful, spell, or talisman!

Alvar. A potent spell, a mighty talisman!
The imperishable memory of the deed,
Sustained by love, and grief, and indignation!
So vivid were the forms within his brain,
His very eyes, when shut, made pictures of them!

[Note in Appendix to the second and later editions of Remorse.]

[842:A] Sir George Beaumont. [Written 1814.] Editions 1828, 1829.

[845:1] The line should run thus:

And wear a fool's cap.

Alvar. Fare thee well! Then aloud]
I pity thee, Ordonio, even to anguish.

(Oh! Brother!) (aside)

Ordonio (aside). Ha! he has been tampering with her?

Alvar. O high-soul'd Maiden! and more dear to me Than suits the stranger's name!—

I swear to thee
I will uncover all concealéd guilt.

Doubt, but decide not! Stand ye from the altar.

[Here a strain of music is heard from behind the scene.

 $\begin{tabular}{ll} Alvar. With no irreverent voice or uncouth charm I call up the departed! \end{tabular}$

Thou hast guess'd ill: Don Alvar's only brother Stands here before thee—a father's blessing on him! He is most virtuous.	100
Alvar (still to Ordonio). What, if his very virtues Had pampered his swoln heart and made him proud? And what if pride had duped him into guilt? Yet still he stalked a self-created god, Not very bold, but exquisitely cunning; And one that at his mother's looking-glass	105
Would force his features to a frowning sternness? Young Lord! I tell thee, that there are such beings— Yea, and it gives fierce merriment to the damn'd, To see these most proud men, that loath mankind, At every stir and buzz of coward conscience, Trick, cant, and lie, most whining hypocrites! Away, away! Now let me hear more music. [Music again.	110
Teresa. 'Tis strange, I tremble at my own conjectures!	115
But whatsoe'er it mean, I dare no longer Be present at these lawless mysteries, This dark provoking of the hidden Powers! Already I affront—if not high Heaven—	110
Yet Alvar's memory!—Hark! I make appeal Against the unholy rite, and hasten hence To bend before a lawful shrine, and seek That voice which whispers, when the still heart listens, Comfort and faithful hope! Let us retire.	120
Alvar (to Teresa). O full of faith and guileless love, thy Spirit Still prompts thee wisely. Let the pangs of guilt Surprise the guilty: thou art innocent! [Exeunt Teresa and Attendant. Music as before.	125
The spell is mutter'd—Come, thou wandering shape, Who own'st no master in a human eye, Whate'er be this man's doom, fair be it, or foul, If he be dead, O come! and bring with thee That which he grasp'd in death! But if he live, Some token of his obscure perilous life. [The whole Music dashes into a Chorus.	130
CHORUS
Wandering demons, hear the spell! Lest a blacker charm compel—	135
[The incense on the altar takes fire suddenly, and an illuminated picture of Alvar's assassination is discovered, and having remained a few seconds is then hidden by ascending flames.
Ordonio (starting). Duped! duped!—the traitor Isidore!
[At this instant the doors are forced open, Monviedro and the Familiars of the Inquisition, Servants, &c., enter and fill the stage.
Monviedro. First seize the sorcerer! suffer him not to speak! The holy judges of the Inquisition Shall hear his first words.—Look you pale, Lord Valdez? Plain evidence have we here of most foul sorcery. There is a dungeon underneath this castle, And as you hope for mild interpretation, Surrender instantly the keys and charge of it.	140
Ordonio (recovering himself as from stupor, to Servants). Why haste you not? Off with him to the dungeon!
[All rush out in tumult.

Accurst assassins! Disarmed, o'erpowered, despairing of defence, At his bared breast he seem'd to grasp some relique More dear than was his life——

[Valdez moves towards the back of the stage to meet Ordonio, during the concluding lines of Teresa's speech appears as eaconversing with him.
Is Alvar dead? what then? The nuptial rites and funeral shall be one! Here's no abiding-place for thee, Teresa.— Away! they see me not—Thou seest me, Alvar! To thee I bend my course.—But first one question, One question to Ordonio.—My limbs tremble—	50
There I may sit unmark'd—a moment will restore me. [Retires out of	sight.
Ordonio (as he advances with Valdez). These are the dungeon keys. Monviedro knew That I too had received the wizard's message, 'He that can bring the dead to life again.' But now he is satisfied, I plann'd this scheme To work a full conviction on the culprit, And he entrusts him wholly to my keeping.	v not, 60
Valdez. 'Tis well, my son! But have you yet discovered (Where is Teresa?) what those speeches meant— Pride, and hypocrisy, and guilt, and cunning? Then when the wizard fix'd his eye on you, And you, I know not why, look'd pale and trembled— Why—why, what ails you now?—	65
Ordonio. Me? what ails me? A pricking of the blood—It might have happen'd At any other time.—Why scan you me?
Valdez. His speech about the corse, and stabs and murderers, Bore reference to the assassins—	70
Ordonio. Dup'd! dup'd! The traitor, Isidore! I tell thee, my dear father! I am most glad of this. Dup'd! dup'd! [A pause, then we have a second contact of the contact	vildly.
Valdez. True—sorcery Merits its doom; and this perchance may guide us To the discovery of the murderers. I have their statures and their several faces So present to me, that but once to meet them Would be to recognize.	75
Ordonio. Yes! yes! we recognize them. I was benumb'd, and staggered up and down Through darkness without light—dark—dark—dark! My flesh crept chill, my limbs felt manacled As had a snake coil'd round them!—Now 'tis sunshine, And the blood dances freely through its channels!	80

ACT IV

Scene I

A cavern, dark, except where a gleam of moonlight is seen on one side at the further end of it; supposed to be cast on it from a crevice in a part of the cavern out of sight. Isdore alone, an extinguished torch in his hand.

Isidore. Faith 'twas a moving letter—very moving! 'His life in danger, no place safe but this! 'Twas his turn now to talk of gratitude.' And yet—but no! there can't be such a villain. It can not be!

	Thanks to that little crevice, Which lets the moonlight in! I'll go and sit by it. To peep at a tree, or see a he-goat's beard, Or hear a cow or two breathe loud in their sleep—	5
[859]	Any thing but this crash of water drops! These dull abortive sounds that fret the silence With puny thwartings and mock opposition! So beats the death-watch to a sick man's ear. [He goes out of sight, opposite to the patch of moonlight: and returns.	10
	A hellish pit! The very same I dreamt of! I was just in—and those damn'd fingers of ice Which clutch'd my hair up! Ha!—what's that—it mov'd.	15
	[Isidore stands staring at another recess in the cavern. In the mean time Ordonio enters with a torch, and halloes to Isidore.
	Isidore. I swear that I saw something moving there! The moonshine came and went like a flash of lightning—— I swear, I saw it move.
	Ordonio (goes into the recess, then returns). A jutting clay stone Drops on the long lank weed, that grows beneath: And the weed nods and drips. [859:1]
	Isidore. A jest to laugh at! It was not that which scar'd me, good my lord.	20
	Ordonio. What scar'd you, then?
	Isidore. You see that little rift? But first permit me!
	[Lights his torch at Ordonio's, and while lighting it. (A lighted torch in the hand Is no unpleasant object here—one's breath Floats round the flame, and makes as many colours	25
	As the thin clouds that travel near the moon.) You see that crevice there? My torch extinguished by these water-drops, And marking that the moonlight came from thence, I stept in to it, meaning to sit there; But scarcely had I measured twenty paces— My body bending forward, yea, o'erbalanced Almost beyond recoil, on the dim brink Of a huge chasm I stept. The shadowy moonshine Filling the void so counterfeited substance,	30 35
[860]	That my foot hung aslant adown the edge. Was it my own fear? Fear too hath its instincts![860:1]
	(And yet such dens as these are wildly told of, And there are beings that live, yet not for the eye) An arm of frost above and from behind me Pluck'd up and snatched me backward. Merciful Heaven! You smile! alas, even smiles look ghastly here! My lord, I pray you, go yourself and view it.	40
	Ordonio. It must have shot some pleasant feelings through you.
	Isidore. If every atom of a dead man's flesh Should creep, each one with a particular life, Yet all as cold as ever—'twas just so! Or had it drizzled needle-points of frost Upon a feverish head made suddenly bald—	45
	Ordonio. Why, Isidore, I blush for thy cowardice. It might have startled, I grant you, even a brave man for a moment— But such a panic—	50
	Isidore. When a boy, my lord! I could have sate whole hours beside that chasm, Push'd in huge stones and heard them strike and rattle Against its horrid sides: then hung my head Low down, and listened till the heavy fragments Sank with faint crash in that still groaning well, Which never thirsty pilgrim blest, which never	55
	A living thing came near—unless, perchance, Some blind-worm battens on the ropy mould	60

	Close at its edge.
	Ordonio. Art thou more coward now?
861]	Isidore. Call him, that fears his fellow-man, a coward! I fear not man—but this inhuman cavern, It were too bad a prison-house for goblins. Beside, (you'll smile, my lord) but true it is, My last night's sleep was very sorely haunted By what had passed between us in the morning. O sleep of horrors! Now run down and stared at By forms so hideous that they mock remembrance— Now seeing nothing and imagining nothing, But only being afraid—stifled with fear! While every goodly or familiar form Had a strange power of breathing terror round me! I saw you in a thousand fearful shapes; And, I entreat your lordship to believe me, In my last dream—		65 70 75
	Ordonio. Well?
	Isidore. I was in the act Of falling down that chasm, when Alhadra Wak'd me: she heard my heart beat.
	Ordonio. Strange enough! Had you been here before?
	Isidore. Never, my lord! But mine eyes do not see it now more clearly, Than in my dream I saw—that very chasm.		80
	Ordonio (after a pause). I know not why it should be! yet it is—Isidore. What is, my lord?
	Ordonio. Abhorrent from our nature To kill a man.—
	Isidore. Except in self-defence.
	Ordonio. Why that's my case; and yet the soul recoils from it— 'Tis so with me at least. But you, perhaps, Have sterner feelings?		85
862]	Isidore. Something troubles you. How shall I serve you? By the life you gave me, By all that makes that life of value to me, My wife, my babes, my honour, I swear to you, Name it, and I will toil to do the thing, If it be innocent! But this, my lord! Is not a place where you could perpetrate, No, nor propose a wicked thing. The darkness, When ten strides off we know 'tis cheerful moonlight,		90 95
	Collects the guilt, and crowds it round the heart. It must be innocent.		50
	Ordonio. Thyself be judge. One of our family knew this place well.
	Isidore. Who? when? my lord?
	Ordonio. What boots it, who or when? Hang up thy torch—I'll tell his tale to thee. [They hang up their torches on some reference of the content of the cont	idae in the cavern.	100

And pressed his soul into a human shape
By accident or malice. In this world
He found no fit companion.

Alas! poor wretch! Mad men are mostly proud.	110
Ordonio. He walked alone, And phantom thoughts unsought-for troubled him. Something within would still be shadowing out All possibilities; and with these shadows His mind held dalliance. Once, as so it happened, A fancy crossed him wilder than the rest: To this in moody murmur and low voice He yielded utterance, as some talk in sleep: The man who heard him.— Why did'st thou look round?	115
Isidore. I have a prattler three years old, my lord! In truth he is my darling. As I went From forth my door, he made a moan in sleep— But I am talking idly—pray proceed! And what did this man?	120
Ordonio. With this human hand He gave a substance and reality To that wild fancy of a possible thing.— Well it was done! Why babblest thou of guilt?	125
The deed was done, and it passed fairly off. And he whose tale I tell thee—dost thou listen?
Isidore. I would, my lord, you were by my fire-side, I'd listen to you with an eager eye, Though you began this cloudy tale at midnight, But I do listen—pray proceed, my lord.	130
Ordonio. Where was I?
Isidore. He of whom you tell the tale—
Ordonio. Surveying all things with a quiet scorn, Tamed himself down to living purposes, The occupations and the semblances Of ordinary men—and such he seemed! But that same over ready agent—he—	135
Isidore. Ah! what of him, my lord?
Ordonio. He proved a traitor, Betrayed the mystery to a brother-traitor, And they between them hatch'd a damnéd plot To hunt him down to infamy and death. What did the Valdez? What trouble had I not, and at last almost fruitless, to teach De Camp the hurried undervoice with which Isidore should utter these two lines, as anticipating Ordonio's scorn, and yet unable to suppress his own superstition—and yet De Camp, spite of voice, person, and inappropriate protrusion of the chest, understood and realised his part better than all the rest—to the man of sense, I mean. *MS. ACT V

Scene I

A Dungeon.

Alvar (alone) rises slowly from a bed of reeds.

Alvar. And this place my forefathers made for man! This is the process of our love and wisdom To each poor brother who offends against us— Most innocent, perhaps—and what if guilty? Is this the only cure? Merciful God! 5 Each pore and natural outlet shrivelled up By ignorance and parching poverty, His energies roll back upon his heart, And stagnate and corrupt, till, chang'd to poison, They break out on him, like a loathsome plague-spot! 10 Then we call in our pampered mountebanks: And this is their best cure! uncomforted And friendless solitude, groaning and tears, And savage faces, at the clanking hour, Seen through the steam and vapours of his dungeon 15 By the lamp's dismal twilight! So he lies Circled with evil, till his very soul

	Unmoulds its essence, hopelessly deformed By sights of evermore deformity! With other ministrations thou, O Nature! Healest thy wandering and distempered child: Thou pourest on him thy soft influences, Thy sunny hues, fair forms, and breathing sweets;		20
[872]	Thy melodies of woods, and winds, and waters! Till he relent, and can no more endure To be a jarring and a dissonant thing Amid this general dance and minstrelsy; But, bursting into tears, wins back his way, His angry spirit healed and harmonized		25
[072]	By the benignant touch of love and beauty.		30
	I am chill and weary! Yon rude bench of stone, In that dark angle, the sole resting-place! But the self-approving mind is its own light And life's best warmth still radiates from the heart Where love sits brooding, and an honest purpose.	[Retires out of sight.	35
	Enter Teresa with a taper.
	Teresa. It has chilled my very life——my own voice scares me; Yet when I hear it not I seem to lose The substance of my being—my strongest grasp Sends inwards but weak witness that I am. I seek to cheat the echo.—How the half sounds Blend with this strangled light! Is he not here— O for one human face here—but to see One human face here to sustain me.—Courage! It is but my own fear! The life within me, It sinks and wayvers like this some of flows	[Looking round.	40
	It sinks and wavers like this cone of flame, Beyond which I scarce dare look onward! Oh!		45
	If I faint? If this inhuman den should be At once my death-bed and my burial vault?	C
	[Faintly screams as ALVAR 6	_
	Alvar (rushes towards her, and catches her as she is falling). O Teresa! Shall I reveal reveals? The andder shall	gracious neaven: it is, it is	50
	Shall I reveal myself? The sudden shock Of rapture will blow out this spark of life, And joy complete what terror has begun. O ye impetuous beatings here, be still! Teresa, best beloved! pale, pale, and cold! Her pulse doth flutter! Teresa! my Teresa!		50 55
[873]	Teresa (recovering). I heard a voice; but often in my dreams I hear that voice! and wake and try—and try— To hear it waking! but I never could— And 'tis so now—even so! Well! he is dead— Murdered perhaps! and I am faint, and feel		60
	As if it were no painful thing to die!		00
	Alvar. Believe it not, sweet maid! Believe it not, Belovéd woman! 'Twas a low imposture Framed by a guilty wretch.
	Teresa. Ha! Who art thou?
	Alvar. Suborned by his brother—
	Teresa. Didst thou murder him? And dost thou now repent? Poor troubled man, I do forgive thee, and may Heaven forgive thee!		65
	Alvar. Ordonio—he—
	Teresa. If thou didst murder him—His spirit ever at the throne of God Asks mercy for thee: prays for mercy for thee, With tears in Heaven!		70
	Alvar. Alvar was not murdered. Be calm! Be calm, sweet maid!
	Teresa. Nay, nay, but tell me! O 'tis lost again!	[A pause.
	This dull confuséd pain—	[A pause.

Mysterious man! Methinks I can not fear thee: for thine eye Doth swim with love and pity—Well! Ordonio— Oh my foreboding heart! And he suborned thee, And they didn't expressly life? Placeings shower on thee	75
And thou didst spare his life? Blessings shower on thee, As many as the drops twice counted o'er In the fond faithful heart of his Teresa!	80
Alvar. I can endure no more. The Moorish sorcerer Exists but in the stain upon his face. That picture—
Teresa. Ha! speak on!
Alvar. Beloved Teresa! It told but half the truth. O let this portrait Tell all—that Alvar lives—that he is here! Thy much deceived but ever faithful Alvar. [Takes her portrait from his neck, and gives it her.	85
Teresa (receiving the portrait). The same—it is the same! Ah! Who art thou? Nay, I will call thee, Alvar! [She falls on his neck.
Alvar. O joy unutterable! But hark! a sound as of removing bars At the dungeon's outer door. A brief, brief while Conceal thyself, my love! It is Ordonio. For the honour of our race, for our dear father; O for himself too (he is still my brother)	90
Let me recall him to his nobler nature, That he may wake as from a dream of murder! O let me reconcile him to himself, Open the sacred source of penitent tears, And be once more his own beloved Alvar.	95
Teresa. O my all virtuous love! I fear to leave thee With that obdurate man.
Alvar. Thou dost not leave me! But a brief while retire into the darkness: O that my joy could spread its sunshine round thee!	100
Teresa. The sound of thy voice shall be my music! Alvar! my Alvar! am I sure I hold thee? Is it no dream? thee in my arms, my Alvar! [Exit.	105
[A noise at the Dungeon door. It opens, and Ordonio enters, with a goblet in his hand.
Ordonio. Hail, potent wizard! in my gayer mood I poured forth a libation to old Pluto,
And as I brimmed the bowl, I thought on thee. Thou hast conspired against my life and honour, Hast tricked me foully; yet I hate thee not. Why should I hate thee? this same world of ours, 'Tis but a pool amid a storm of rain,	110
And we the air-bladders that course up and down, And joust and tilt in merry tournament; And when one bubble runs foul of another, The weaker needs must break.	115
Alvar. I see thy heart! There is a frightful glitter in thine eye Which doth betray thee. Inly-tortured man, This is the revelry of a drunken anguish, Which fain would scoff away the pang of guilt, And quell each human feeling.	120
Ordonio. Feeling! feeling! The death of a man—the breaking of a bubble— 'Tis true I cannot sob for such misfortunes; But faintness, cold and hunger—curses on me If willingly I e'er inflicted them! Come, take the beverage; this chill place demands it. [Ordonio proffers the goblet.	125
Alvar. Yon insect on the wall,

Alvar. You insect on the wall, Which moves this way and that its hundred limbs, Were it a toy of mere mechanic craft,

Alvar rushes through the Moors and catches him in his arms.' After Ordonio's dying speech [ll. 304-307], there are 'shouts of Alvar! Alvar! behind the scenes. A Moor rushes in'—

Moor. We are surprised! away! away! this instant! The country is in arms! Lord Valdez heads them, And still cries out, 'My son! my Alvar lives!' Haste to the shore! they come the opposite road. Your wives and children are already safe. The boat is on the shore—the vessel waits.

APPENDIX

The following Scene, as unfit for the stage, was taken from the tragedy, in the year 1797, and published in the Lyrical Ballads. [1798, pp. 28-31: vide ante, pp. 182-4.]

Enter Teresa and Selma.

Teresa. 'Tis said, he spake of you familiarly, As mine and Alvar's common foster-mother.

Selma. Now blessings on the man, whoe'er he be That joined your names with mine! O my sweet Lady, As often as I think of those dear times, When you two little ones would stand, at eve, On each side of my chair, and make me learn All you had learnt in the day; and how to talk In gentle phrase; then bid me sing to you——'Tis more like heaven to come, than what has been!

Teresa. But that entrance, Selma?

Selma.

Can no one hear? It is a perilous tale!

	Selma. My husband's father told it me,
	Poor old Sesina—angels rest his soul;
	He was a woodman, and could fell and saw
	With lusty arm. You know that huge round beam	15
	Which props the hanging wall of the old chapel?
	Beneath that tree, while yet it was a tree, He found a baby wrapt in mosses, lined
	With thistle-beards, and such small locks of wool
	As hang on brambles. Well, he brought him home,	20
	And reared him at the then Lord Valdez' cost.	20
	And so the babe grew up a pretty boy,
[882]	A pretty boy, but most unteachable——
	And never learn'd a prayer, nor told a bead,
	But knew the names of birds, and mocked their notes,	25
	And whistled, as he were a bird himself.
	And all the autumn 'twas his only play
	To gather seeds of wild flowers, and to plant them
	With earth and water on the stumps of trees.
	A Friar, who gathered simples in the wood,	30
	A grey-haired man, he loved this little boy:
	The boy loved him, and, when the friar taught him,
	He soon could write with the pen; and from that time Lived chiefly at the convent or the castle.
	So he became a rare and learned youth:	35
	But O! poor wretch! he read, and read, and read,	33
	Till his brain turned; and ere his twentieth year
	He had unlawful thoughts of many things:
	And though he prayed, he never loved to pray
	With holy men, nor in a holy place.	40
	But yet his speech, it was so soft and sweet,
	The late Lord Valdez ne'er was wearied with him.
	And once, as by the north side of the chapel
	They stood together chained in deep discourse,
	The earth heaved under them with such a groan,	45
	That the wall tottered, and had well nigh fallen
	Right on their heads. My Lord was sorely frightened;
	A fever seized him, and he made confession Of all the heretical and lawless talk
	Which brought this judgment: so the youth was seized,	50
	And cast into that hole. My husband's father	50
	Sobbed like a child—it almost broke his heart:
	And once he was working near this dungeon,
	He heard a voice distinctly; 'twas the youth's,
	Who sung a doleful song about green fields,	55
	How sweet it were on lake or wide savanna
	To hunt for food, and be a naked man,
	And wander up and down at liberty.
	He always doted on the youth, and now
	His love grew desperate; and defying death,	60
	He made that cunning entrance I described,
	And the young man escaped.
	Teresa. 'Tis a sweet tale:
	Such as would lull a listening child to sleep,
	His rosy face besoiled with unwiped tears.
[883]	And what became of him?
	Selma. He went on shipboard	65
	With those bold voyagers who made discovery
	Of golden lands. Sesina's younger brother Wort likewise, and when he returned to Spain
	Went likewise, and when he returned to Spain, He told Sesina, that the poor mad youth,
	Soon after they arrived in that new world,	70
	In spite of his dissuasion, seized a boat,	70
	And all alone set sail by silent moonlight
	Up a great river, great as any sea,
	And ne'er was heard of more: but 'tis supposed,
	He lived and died among the savage men.	75

ZAPOLYA^[883:1]

Πὰρ πυρὶ χρὴ τοιαῦτα λέγειν χειμῶνος ἐν ὥρα.

APUD ATHENAEUM.

ADVERTISEMENT

The form of the following dramatic poem is in humble imitation of the Winter's Tale of Shakspeare, except that I have called the first part a Prelude instead of a first Act, as a somewhat nearer resemblance to the plan of the ancients, of which one specimen is left us in the Æschylean Trilogy of the Agamemnon, the Orestes, and the Eumenides. Though a matter of form merely, yet two plays, on different periods of the same tale, might seem less bold, than an interval of twenty years between a first and second act. This is, however, in mere obedience to custom. The effect does not, in reality, at all depend on the Time of the interval; but on a very different principle. There are cases in which an interval of twenty hours between the acts would have a worse effect (i. e. render the imagination less disposed to take the position required) than twenty years in other cases. For the rest, I shall be well content if my readers will take it up, read and judge it, as a Christmas tale.

PART I

THE PRELUDE, ENTITLED 'THE USURPER'S FORTUNE'

CHARACTERS

Emerick, Usurping King of Illyria.

RAAB KIUPRILI, an Illyrian Chieftain.

Casimir, Son of Kiuprili.

Chef Ragozzi, a Military Commander.

Zapolya, Queen of Illyria.

Scene I

Front of the Palace with a magnificent Colonnade. On one side a military Guard-house. Sentries pacing backward and forward before the Palace. Chef Ragozzi, at the door of the Guard-house, as looking forwards at some object in the distance.

Chef Ragozzi. My eyes deceive me not, it must be he. Who but our chief, my more than father, who But Raab Kiuprili moves with such a gait? Lo! e'en this eager and unwonted haste But agitates, not quells, its majesty. My patron! my commander! yes, 'tis he! Call out the guards. The Lord Kiuprili comes.

[Drums beat, &c., the Guard turns out.

Enter Raab Kiuprili.

Raab Kiuprili (making a signal to stop the drums, &c.). Silence! enough! This is no time, young friend,

For ceremonious dues. The summoning drum,

Th' air-shattering trumpet, and the horseman's clatter,

Are insults to a dying sovereign's ear.

Soldiers, 'tis well! Retire! your General greets you,

His loyal fellow-warriors.

[Guards retire.

10

Chef Ragozzi. Pardon my surprise.
Thus sudden from the camp, and unattended! What may these wonders prophesy?
Raab Kiuprili. Tell me first, How fares the king? His majesty still lives?	15
Chef Ragozzi. We know no otherwise; but Emerick's friends (And none but they approach him) scoff at hope.
Raab Kiuprili. Ragozzi! I have reared thee from a child, And as a child I have reared thee. Whence this air	20
Of mystery? That face was wont to open Clear as the morning to me, shewing all things. Hide nothing from me.
Chef Ragozzi. O most loved, most honoured, The mystery that struggles in my looks
Betrayed my whole tale to thee, if it told thee That I am ignorant; but fear the worst.	25
And mystery is contagious. All things here Are full of motion: and yet all is silent: And bad men's hopes infect the good with fears.
Raab Kiuprili. I have trembling proof within how true thou speal	xest. 30
Chef Ragozzi. That the prince Emerick feasts the soldiery, Gives splendid arms, pays the commanders' debts, And (it is whispered) by sworn promises
Makes himself debtor—hearing this, thou hast heard All——	35
But what my lord will learn too soon himself.
Raab Kiuprili. Ha!—Well then, let it come! Worse scarce can cor This letter written by the trembling hand	ne.
Of royal Andreas calls me from the camp To his immediate presence. It appoints me, The Queen, and Emerick, guardians of the realm,	40
And of the royal infant. Day by day, Robbed of Zapolya's soothing cares, the king
Yearns only to behold one precious boon, And with his life breathe forth a father's blessing.	45
Chef Ragozzi. Remember you, my lord! that Hebrew leech Whose face so much distempered you?
Raab Kiuprili. Barzoni? I held him for a spy; but the proof failing (More courteously, I own, than pleased myself), I sent him from the camp.
Chef Ragozzi. To him, in chief, Prince Emerick trusts his royal brother's health.	50
Raab Kiuprili. Hide nothing, I conjure you! What of him?
Chef Ragozzi. With pomp of words beyond a soldier's cunning, And shrugs and wrinkled brow, he smiles and whispers!
Talks in dark words of women's fancies; hints That 'twere a useless and a cruel zeal	55
To rob a dying man of any hope, However vain, that soothes him: and, in fine, Denies all chance of offspring from the Queen.
Raab Kiuprili. The venomous snake! My heel was on its head, And (fool!) I did not crush it!	60
Chef Ragozzi. Nay, he fears Zapolya will not long survive her husband.
Raab Kiuprili. Manifest treason! Even this brief delay Half makes me an accomplice——(If he live,) ving toward the palace.

[885]

[886]

Raab Kiuprili.

Thou!

Chef Ragozzi. No place, no name, no rank excepted— Raab Kiuprili. Thou! Chef Ragozzi. This life of mine, O take it, Lord Kiuprili! I give it as a weapon to thy hands, 70 Mine own no longer. Guardian of Illyria, Useless to thee, 'tis worthless to myself. Thou art the framer of my nobler being; Nor does there live one virtue in my soul, 75 One honourable hope, but calls thee father. Yet ere thou dost resolve, know that you palace Is guarded from within, that each access Is thronged by armed conspirators, watched by ruffians Pampered with gifts, and hot upon the spoil Which that false promiser still trails before them. 80 I ask but this one boon—reserve my life Till I can lose it for the realm and thee! Raab Kiuprili. My heart is rent asunder. O my country, O fallen Illyria, stand I here spell-bound? Did my King love me? Did I earn his love? 85 Have we embraced as brothers would embrace? Was I his arm, his thunder-bolt? And now Must I, hag-ridden, pant as in a dream? Or, like an eagle, whose strong wings press up Against a coiling serpent's folds, can I 90 Strike but for mockery, and with restless beak Gore my own breast?—Ragozzi, thou art faithful? Chef Ragozzi. Here before Heaven I dedicate my faith To the royal line of Andreas. Raab Kiuprili. Hark, Ragozzi! Guilt is a timorous thing ere perpetration: 95 Despair alone makes wicked men be bold. Come thou with me! They have heard my voice in flight, Have faced round, terror-struck, and feared no longer The whistling javelins of their fell pursuers. Ha! what is this? [Black flag displayed from the Tower of the Palace: a death-bell tolls, &c. Vengeance of Heaven! He is dead. 100 Chef Ragozzi. At length then 'tis announced. Alas! I fear, That these black death-flags are but treason's signals. Raab Kiuprili. A prophecy too soon fulfilled! See vonder! O rank and ravenous wolves! the death-bell echoes 105 Still in the doleful air—and see! they come. Chef Ragozzi. Precise and faithful in their villainy Even to the moment, that the master traitor Had pre-ordained them. Raab Kiuprili. Was it over-haste, Or is it scorn, that in this race of treason Their guilt thus drops its mask, and blazons forth 110 Their infamous plot even to an idiot's sense? Chef Ragozzi. Doubtless they deem Heaven too usurp'd! Heaven's justice Bought like themselves! Being equal all in crime, Do you press on, ye spotted parricides! For the one sole pre-eminence yet doubtful, 115 The prize of foremost impudence in guilt? Raab Kiuprili. The bad man's cunning still prepares the way For its own outwitting. I applaud, Ragozzi! Ragozzi! I applaud, In thee, the virtuous hope that dares look onward And keeps the life-spark warm of future action 120 Beneath the cloak of patient sufferance. Act and appear, as time and prudence prompt thee: I shall not misconceive the part thou playest. Mine is an easier part—to brave the usurper.

[887]

Raab Kiuprili. (Bought by a bribe!) I know thee now still less.
Casimir. So much of Raab Kiuprili's blood flows here, That no power, save that holy name of father, Could shield the man who so dishonoured me.
Raab Kiuprili. The son of Raab Kiuprili a bought bond-slave, Guilt's pander, treason's mouth-piece, a gay parrot, School'd to shrill forth his feeder's usurp'd titles. And scream, Long live King Emerick!	195
Leaders. Aye, King Emerick! Stand back, my lord! Lead us, or let us pass.
Soldier. Nay, let the general speak!
Soldiers. Hear him! hear him!
Raab Kiuprili. Assembled lords and warriors of Illyria, Hear, and avenge me! Twice ten years have I Stood in your presence, honoured by the king:	200
Beloved and trusted. Is there one among you Accuses Raab Kiuprili of a bribe? Or one false whisper in his sovereign's ear? Who here dares charge me with an orphan's rights Outfaced, or widow's plea left undefended? And shall I now be branded by a traitor,	205
A bought, bribed wretch, who, being called my son, Doth libel a chaste matron's name, and plant Hensbane and aconite on a mother's grave? The underling accomplice of a robber,	210
That from a widow and a widow's offspring Would steal their heritage? To God a rebel, And to the common father of his country A recreant ingrate!	215
Casimir. Sire! your words grow dangerous. High-flown romantic fancies ill-beseem Your age and wisdom. 'Tis a statesman's virtue, To guard his country's safety by what means It best may be protected—come what will Of these monk's morals!	220
Raab Kiuprili (aside). Ha! the elder Brutus Made his soul iron, though his sons repented. They boasted not their baseness. [Draws his sword. Infamous changeling! Recant this instant, and swear loyalty, And strict obedience to thy sovereign's will; Or, by the spirit of departed Andreas,	225

Pass on, friends! to the palace.	230
[Music recommences.—The Procession passes into the Palace.
Emerick. What? Raab Kiuprili? What? a father's sword Against his own son's breast?
Raab Kiuprili. 'Twould best excuse him, Were he thy son, Prince Emerick. I abjure him.
Emerick. This is my thanks, then, that I have commenced A reign to which the free voice of the nobles Hath called me, and the people, by regards Of love and grace to Raab Kiuprili's house?	235
Raab Kiuprili. What right hadst thou, Prince Emerick, to bestow them?

Emerick. By what right dares Kiuprili question me?

[891]

	Raab Kiuprili. By a right common to all loyal subjects— To me a duty! As the realm's co-regent,		240
	Appointed by our sovereign's last free act,
	Writ by himself.—	[Grasping the Patent.
	Emerick. Aye!—Writ in a delirium!
[892]	Raab Kiuprili. I likewise ask, by whose authority The access to the sovereign was refused me?		245
	Emerick. By whose authority dared the general leave His camp and army, like a fugitive?
	Raab Kiuprili. A fugitive, who, with victory for his comrade, Ran, open-eyed, upon the face of death!
	A fugitive, with no other fear, than bodements To be belated in a loyal purpose— At the command, Prince! of my king and thine,		250
	Hither I came; and now again require
	Audience of Queen Zapolya; and (the States Forthwith convened) that thou dost shew at large,		255
	On what ground of defect thou'st dared annul This thy King's last and solemn act—hast dared
	Ascend the throne, of which the law had named,
	And conscience should have made thee, a protector.
	Emerick. A sovereign's ear ill brooks a subject's questioning! Yet for thy past well-doing—and because 'Tis hard to erase at once the fond belief		260
	Long cherished, that Illyria had in thee
	No dreaming priest's slave, but a Roman lover Of her true weal and freedom—and for this, too,		 265
	That, hoping to call forth to the broad day-light		 200
	And fostering breeze of glory all deservings, I still had placed thee foremost.
	Raab Kiuprili. Prince! I listen.
	Emerick. Unwillingly I tell thee, that Zapolya, Maddened with grief, her erring hopes proved idle—		270
	Casimir. Sire! speak the whole truth! Say, her fraud detected!
	Emerick. According to the sworn attests in council Of her physician—
	Raab Kiuprili (aside). Yes! the Jew, Barzoni!
	Emerick. Under the imminent risk of death she lies,
	Or irrecoverable loss of reason,		275
	If known friend's face or voice renew the frenzy.
	Casimir (to Kiuprili). Trust me, my lord! a woman's trick has dupe Us too—but most of all, the sainted Andreas.	d you—
	Even for his own fair fame, his grace prays hourly
	For her recovery, that (the States convened) She may take counsel of her friends.		280
[893]	Emerick. Right, Casimir! Receive my pledge, lord general. It shall stand
	In her own will to appear and voice her claims;
	Or (which in truth I hold the wiser course) With all the past passed by, as family quarrels,		285
	Let the Queen Dowager, with unblenched honours,		200
	Resume her state, our first Illyrian matron.
	Raab Kiuprili. Prince Emerick! you speak fairly, and your pledge t Is such, as well would suit an honest meaning.	00
	Casimir. My lord! you scarce know half his grace's goodness.		290
	The wealthy heiress, high-born fair Sarolta, Bred in the convent of our noble ladies,
	Her relative, the venerable abbess,
	Hath, at his grace's urgence, wooed and won for me.
	Emerick. Long may the race, and long may that name flourish, Which your heroic deeds, brave chief, have rendered Dear and illustrious to all true Illyrians.		295
	Raab Kiuprili. The longest line that ever tracing herald

Or found or feigned, placed by a beggar's soul Hath but a mushroom's date in the comparison: And with the soul, the conscience is coeval, Yea, the soul's essence.	300
Emerick. Conscience, good my lord, Is but the pulse of reason. Is it conscience, That a free nation should be handed down,
Like the dull clods beneath our feet, by chance And the blind law of lineage? That whether infant, Or man matured, a wise man or an idiot,	305
Hero or natural coward, shall have guidance Of a free people's destiny, should fall out In the mere lottery of a reckless nature, Where few the prizes and the blanks are countless? Or haply that a nation's fate should hang On the bald accident of a midwife's handling The unclosed sutures of an infant's skull?	310
Casimir. What better claim can sovereign wish or need Than the free voice of men who love their country? Those chiefly who have fought for't? Who by right, Claim for their monarch one, who having obeyed,	315
So hath best learnt to govern; who, having suffered, Can feel for each brave sufferer and reward him? Whence sprang the name of Emperor? Was it not By Nature's fiat? In the storm of triumph, 'Mid warriors' shouts, did her oracular voice Make itself heard: Let the commanding spirit Possess the station of command!	320
Raab Kiuprili. Prince Emerick, Your cause will prosper best in your own pleading.	325
Emerick (aside to Casimir). Ragozzi was thy school-mate—a bold spirit! Bind him to us!—Thy father thaws apace! [Then aloud. Leave us awhile, my lord!—Your friend, Ragozzi, Whom you have not yet seen since his return, Commands the guard to-day.	330

Shout forth thy titles to yon circling mountains, And with a thousand-fold reverberation Make the rocks flatter thee, and the volleying air, Unbribed, shout back to thee, King Emerick!		360
By wholesome laws to embank the sovereign power, To deepen by restraint, and by prevention Of lawless will to amass and guide the flood In its majestic channel, is man's task And the true patriot's glory! In all else Men safelier trust to Heaven, than to themselves When least themselves in the mad whirl of crowds		365
Where folly is contagious, and too oft Even wise men leave their better sense at home To chide and wonder at them when returned.		370
Emerick (aloud). Is't thus thou scoff'st the people? most The soldiers, the defenders of the people?	of all,
Raab Kiuprili. O most of all, most miserable nation, For whom the imperial power, enormous bubble! Is blown and kept aloft, or burst and shattered By the bribed breath of a lewd soldiery!		375
Chiefly of such, as from the frontiers far, (Which is the noblest station of true warriors) In rank licentious idleness beleaguer City and Court, a venomed thorn i'the side Of virtuous kings, the tyrant's slave and tyrant,		380
Still ravening for fresh largess! But with such What title claim'st thou, save thy birth? What merits Which many a liegeman may not plead as well, Brave though I grant thee? If a life outlaboured Head, heart, and fortunate arm, in watch and war,		385
For the land's fame and weal; if large acquests, Made honest by the aggression of the foe, And whose best praise is, that they bring us safety; If victory, doubly-wreathed, whose under-garland Of laurel-leaves looks greener and more sparkling		390
Thro' the grey olive-branch; if these, Prince Emerick! Give the true title to the throne, not thou— No! (let Illyria, let the infidel enemy Be judge and arbiter between us!) I, I were the rightful sovereign!		395
Emerick. I have faith That thou both think'st and hop'st it. Fair Zapolya, A provident lady—
Raab Kiuprili. Wretch beneath all answer!		400
Emerick. Offers at once the royal bed and throne!
Raab Kiuprili. To be a kingdom's bulwark, a king's glory Yet loved by both, and trusted, and trust-worthy, Is more than to be king; but see! thy rage	7,
Fights with thy fear. I will relieve thee! Ho!	[To the Guard.	405
$\it Emerick.$ Not for thy sword, but to entrap thee, ruffian! Thus long I have listened—Guard—ho! from the Palace.
[The Guard post from the Guard-ho head, and then a number from the Kiuprili's sword, and apprehends h	e Palace—Chef Ragozzi demands
Casimir. O agony! Sire, hear me!	[To Emerick.
Hear me, father!	[To Kiuprili, who turns from him.
Emerick. Take in arrest that traitor and assassin!		410
Who pleads for his life, strikes at mine, his sovereign's. Raab Kiuprili. As the Co-regent of the Realm, I stand		410
Amenable to none save to the States Met in due course of law. But ye are bond-slaves, Yet witness ye that before God and man
I here impeach Lord Emerick of foul treason, And on strong grounds attaint him with suspicion Of murder—		415

[896]

Raab Kiuprili.

The royal orphan's murder: and to the death [897] Defy him, as a tyrant and usurper. [Hurried off by RAGOZZI and the Guard. 420 Emerick. Ere twice the sun hath risen, by my sceptre This insolence shall be avenged. Casimir. O banish him! This infamy will crush me. O for my sake, Banish him, my liege lord! What? to the army? Be calm, young friend! Nought shall be done in anger. 425 The child o'erpowers the man. In this emergence I must take counsel for us both. Retire. [Exit Casimir. Emerick (alone, looks at a Calendar). The changeful planet, now in her decay, Dips down at midnight, to be seen no more. With her shall sink the enemies of Emerick, Cursed by the last look of the waning moon: 430 And my bright destiny, with sharpened horns, Shall greet me fearless in the new-born crescent. [Exit. Scene changes to the back of the Palace—a Wooded Park, and Mountains. Enter Zapolya, with an infant in arms. Zapolya. Hush, dear one! hush! My trembling arm disturbs thee! Thou, the protector of the helpless! Thou, The widow's husband and the orphan's father, 435 Direct my steps! Ah whither? O send down Thy angel to a houseless babe and mother, Driven forth into the cruel wilderness! Hush, sweet one! Thou art no Hagar's offspring: thou art The rightful heir of an anointed king! 440 What sounds are those? It is the vesper chaunt Of labouring men returning to their home! Their queen has no home! Hear me, heavenly Father! And let this darkness-Be as the shadow of thy outspread wings 445 To hide and shield us! Start'st thou in thy slumbers? Thou canst not dream of savage Emerick. Hush! Betray not thy poor mother! For if they seize thee I shall grow mad indeed, and they'll believe Thy wicked uncle's lie. Ha! what? A soldier? 450 [898] [Enter Chef Ragozzi. Chef Ragozzi. Sure Heaven befriends us. Well! he hath escaped! O rare tune of a tyrant's promises That can enchant the serpent treachery From forth its lurking hole in the heart. 'Ragozzi! O brave Ragozzi! Count! Commander! What not?' 455 And all this too for nothing! a poor nothing! Merely to play the underling in the murder Of my best friend Kiuprili! His own son—monstrous! Tyrant! I owe thee thanks, and in good hour Will I repay thee, for that thou thought'st me too 460 A serviceable villain. Could I now But gain some sure intelligence of the queen: Heaven bless and guard her! Zapolya (coming forward). Art thou not Ragozzi? Chef Ragozzi. The Queen! Now then the miracle is full! 465 I see heaven's wisdom is an over-match For the devil's cunning. This way, madam, haste! Zapolya. Stay! Oh, no! Forgive me if I wrong thee! This is thy sovereign's child: Oh, pity us, And be not treacherous! [Kneeling. Chef Ragozzi (raising her). Madam! For mercy's sake! 470 Zapolya. But tyrants have a hundred eyes and arms!

Chef Ragozzi. Take courage, madam! 'Twere too horrible,

Your Queen's murder,

(I can not do't) to swear I'm not a monster!—
Scarce had I barr'd the door on Raab Kiuprili—Zapolya. Kiuprili! How?
Chef Ragozzi. There is not time to tell it,— The tyrant called me to him, praised my zeal— (And be assured I overtopt his cunning And seemed right zealous.) But time wastes: In fine, Bids me dispatch my trustiest friends, as couriers With letters to the army. The thought at once Flashed on me. I disguised my prisoner—	475 480
Zapolya. What, Raab Kiuprili?
Chef Ragozzi. Yes! my noble general! I sent him off, with Emerick's own pacquet, Haste, and post haste—Prepared to follow him——
Zapolya. Ah, how? Is it joy or fear? My limbs seem sinking!—	485
Chef Ragozzi (supporting her). Heaven still befriends us. I have left my charger, A gentle beast and fleet, and my boy's mule, One that can shoot a precipice like a bird, Just where the wood begins to climb the mountains. The course we'll thread will mock the tyrant's guesses, Or scare the followers. Ere we reach the main road The Lord Kiuprili will have sent a troop To escort me. Oh, thrice happy when he finds The treasure which I convoy!	490
Zapolya. One brief moment,
That praying for strength I may have strength. This babe, Heaven's eye is on it, and its innocence	495
Is, as a prophet's prayer, strong and prevailing! Through thee, dear babe, the inspiring thought possessed me, When the loud clamor rose, and all the palace Emptied itself—(They sought my life, Ragozzi!) Like a swift shadow gliding, I made way	500

PART II

THE SEQUEL, ENTITLED 'THE USURPER'S FATE' ADDITIONAL CHARACTERS

OLD BATHORY, a Mountaineer.

Bethlen Bathory, the young Prince Andreas, supposed son of Old Bathory.

LORD RUDOLPH, a Courtier, but friend to the Queen's party.

Laska, Steward to Casimir, betrothed to Glycine.

Pestalutz, an Assassin, in Emerick's employ.

LADY SAROLTA, Wife of LORD CASIMIR.

GLYCINE, Orphan Daughter of CHEF RAGOZZI.

Between the flight of the Queen, and the civil war which immediately followed, and in which Emerick remained the victor, a space of twenty years is supposed to have elapsed.

USURPATION ENDED; OR, SHE COMES AGAIN

ACT I

Scene I

A Mountainous Country. Bathory's Dwelling at the end of the Stage. Enter Lady Sarolta and Glycine.

Glycine. Well then! our round of charity is finished.

Sarolta. What, tired, Glycine? No delicate court-dame, but a mountaineer By choice no less than birth, I gladly use The good strength Nature gave me.
Glycine. That last cottage Is built as if an eagle or a raven Had chosen it for her nest.	5
Sarolta. So many are The sufferings which no human aid can reach, It needs must be a duty doubly sweet To heal the few we can. Well! let us rest.	10
Glycine. There? [Pointing to Bathory's dwelling.
Sarolta. Here! For on this spot Lord Casimir Took his last leave. On yonder mountain-ridge I lost the misty image which so long Lingered, or seemed at least to linger on it.
Glycine. And what if even now, on that same ridge, A speck should rise, and still enlarging, lengthening, As it clomb downwards, shape itself at last To a numerous cavalcade, and spurring foremost, Who but Sarolta's own dear lord returned From his high embassy?	15
Sarolta. Thou hast hit my thought! All the long day, from yester-morn to evening, The restless hope fluttered about my heart. Oh we are querulous creatures! Little less	20
Than all things can suffice to make us happy; And little more than nothing is enough To discontent us.—Were he come, then should I Repine he had not arrived just one day earlier To keep his birth-day here, in his own birth-place.	25
Glycine. But our best sports belike, and gay processions Would to my lord have seemed but work-day sights Compared with those the royal court affords.	30
Sarolta. I have small wish to see them. A spring morning With its wild gladsome minstrelsy of birds And its bright jewelry of flowers and dew-drops (Each orbéd drop an orb of glory in it) Would put them all in eclipse. This sweet retirement Lord Casimir's wish alone would have made sacred: But, in good truth, his loving jealousy Did but command, what I had else entreated.	35
Glycine. And yet had I been born Lady Sarolta, Been wedded to the noblest of the realm, So beautiful besides, and yet so stately——	40
Sarolta. Hush! Innocent flatterer!
Glycine. Nay! to my poor fancy The royal court would seem an earthly heaven, Made for such stars to shine in, and be gracious.	45
Sarolta. So doth the ignorant distance still delude us! Thy fancied heaven, dear girl, like that above thee, In its mere self cold, drear, colourless void, Seen from below and in the large, becomes The bright blue ether, and the seat of gods! Well! but this broil that scared you from the dance? And was not Laska there: he, your betrothed?	50
Glycine. Yes, madam! he was there. So was the maypole, For we danced round it.
Sarolta. Ah, Glycine! why, Why did you then betroth yourself?
Glycine. Because My own dear lady wished it! 'twas you asked me!	55

Rest, Madam! You breathe quick.

[902]

[903]

My poor affectionate girl, to see thee wretched. Thou knowest not yet the duties of a wife.
Glycine. Oh, yes! It is a wife's chief duty, madam! To stand in awe of her husband, and obey him, And, I am sure, I never shall see Laska But I shall tremble.	60
Sarolta. Not with fear, I think, For you still mock him. Bring a seat from the cottage. [Exit Glycine into the cottage, Sarolta continues her speech looking after her. Something above thy rank there hangs about thee, And in thy countenance, thy voice, and motion, Yea, e'en in thy simplicity, Glycine, A fine and feminine grace, that makes me feel	65
More as a mother than a mistress to thee! Thou art a soldier's orphan! that—the courage, Which rising in thine eye, seems oft to give A new soul to its gentleness, doth prove thee! Thou art sprung too of no ignoble blood, Or there's no faith in instinct!	70
[Angry voices and clamour within.
Re-enter Glycine.
Glycine. Oh, madam! there's a party of your servants, And my lord's steward, Laska, at their head, Have come to search for old Bathory's son, Bethlen, that brave young man! 'twas he, my lady, That took our parts, and beat off the intruders, And in more onite and malice, now they shared him.	75 80
And in mere spite and malice, now they charge him With bad words of Lord Casimir and the king.	80
Pray don't believe them, madam! This way! This way! Lady Sarolta's here.— [Calling without.
Sarolta. Be calm, Glycine.
Enter Laska and Servants with Old Bathory.
Laska (to Bathory). We have no concern with you! What needs your presence?
Old Bathory. What! Do you think I'll suffer my brave boy To be slandered by a set of coward-ruffians, And leave it to their malice,—yes, mere malice!— To tell its own tale?	85
[Laska and Servants bow to Lady Sarolta.
Sarolta. Laska! What may this mean?
Laska. Madam! and may it please your ladyship! This old man's son, by name Bethlen Bathory, Stands charged, on weighty evidence, that he, On yester-eve, being his lordship's birth-day, Did traitorously defame Lord Casimir: The lord high steward of the realm, moreover——	90
Sarolta. Be brief! We know his titles!
Laska. And moreover Raved like a traitor at our liege King Emerick. And furthermore, said witnesses make oath, Led on the assault upon his lordship's servants; Yea, insolently tore, from this, your huntsman,	95
His badge of livery of your noble house, And trampled it in scorn.	100
Sarolta (to the Servants who offer to speak). You have had your spokesman! Where is the young man thus accused?
Old Bathory. I know not: But if no ill betide him on the mountains, He will not long be absent!
Sarolta. Thou art his father?	105
Old Bathory. None ever with more reason prized a son; Yet I hate falsehood more than I love him.

Sarolta. Yes, at my lord's request, but never wished,

But more than one, now in my lady's presence, Witnessed the affray, besides these men of malice;

[904]

And if I swerve from truth——
Glycine. Yes! good old man! My lady! pray believe him!		110
Sarolta. Hush, Glycine Be silent, I command you. Speak! we hear you!	[Then to Bathory.
Old Bathory. My tale is brief. During our festive dance, Your servants, the accusers of my son, Offered gross insults, in unmanly sort, To our village maidens. He (could he do less?) Rose in defence of outraged modesty, And so persuasive did his cudgel prove, (Your hectoring sparks so over-brave to women Are always cowards) that they soon took flight, And now in mere revenge, like baffled boasters, Have framed this tale, out of some hasty words Which their own threats provoked.		115 120
Sarolta. Old man! you talk Too bluntly! Did your son owe no respect To the livery of our house?
Old Bathory. Even such respect As the sheep's skin should gain for the hot wolf That hath begun to worry the poor lambs!		125
Laska. Old insolent ruffian!
Glycine. Pardon! pardon, madam! I saw the whole affray. The good old man Means no offence, sweet lady!—You, yourself, Laska! know well, that these men were the ruffians! Shame on you!		130
Sarolta. What! Glycine? Go, retire! Be it then that these men faulted. Yet yourself, Or better still belike the maidens' parents, Might have complained to us. Was ever access Denied you? Or free audience? Or are we Weak and unfit to punish our own servants?	[Exit Glycine.	135
Old Bathory. So then! So then! Heaven grant an old man And must the gardener leave his seedling plants, Leave his young roses to the rooting swine While he goes ask their master, if perchance His leisure serve to scourge them from their ravage?	patience!	140
Laska. Ho! Take the rude clown from your lady's present I will report her further will!	ce!
Sarolta. Wait then, Till thou hast learnt it! Fervent good old man! Forgive me that, to try thee, I put on A face of sternness, alien to my meaning!		145
Hence! leave my presence! and you, Laska! mark me! Those rioters are no longer of my household! If we but shake a dewdrop from a rose In vain would we replace it, and as vainly Restore the tear of wounded modesty To a maiden's eye familiarized to licence.— But these men, Laska—	[Then speaks to the Servants.	150
Laska (aside). Yes, now 'tis coming.
Sarolta. Brutal aggressors first, then baffled dastards, That they have sought to piece out their revenge With a tale of words lured from the lips of anger Stamps them most dangerous; and till I want		155
Fit means for wicked ends, we shall not need Their services. Discharge them! You, Bathory! Are henceforth of my household! I shall place you Near my own person. When your son returns, Present him to us!		160

160

Old Bathory. Ha! what strangers here!

[905]

[906]

Your goodness, lady—and it came so sudden— I can not—must not—let you be deceived. I have yet another tale, but— not for all ears!	[Then to Sarolta aside.
Sarolta. I oft have passed your cottage, and states beauty, and that trim orchard-plot, whose blue The gusts of April showered aslant its thatch. Come, you shall show it me! And, while you bid Farewell, be not ashamed that I should witness The oil of gladness glittering on the water Of an ebbing grief.	ossoms it
Laska (alone). Vexation! baffled! school'd! Ho! Laska! wake! why? what can all this mean? She sent away that cockatrice in anger! Oh the false witch! It is too plain, she loves him And now, the old man near my lady's person, She'll see this Bethlen hourly! [Laska fline]
Glycine. Laska! Laska! Is my lady gone?	igo immoon moo onto ootto onto poopo im
Laska. Gone.
Glycine. Have you yet seen him? Is he returned? Has the seat stung you, Laska?	[Laska starts up.
Laska. No, serpent! no; 'tis you that sting me; What! you would cling to him again?	you!
Glycine. Whom?
Laska. Yes; gaze as if your very eyes embraced him! Ha! you forget the scene of yesterday! Mute ere he came, but then—Out on your screa And your pretended fears!	185
Glycine. Your fears, at least, Were real, Laska! or your trembling limbs And white cheeks played the hypocrites most vi	lely! 190
Laska. I fear! whom? what?
Glycine. I know what I should Were I in Laska's place.	fear,
Laska. What?
Glycine. My own conscience, For having fed my jealousy and envy With a plot, made out of other men's revenges, Against a brave and innocent young man's life! Yet, yet, pray tell me!	195
Laska. You will know too soon.
Glycine. Would I could find my lady! though s Yet this suspense—	he chid me— [Going.
Laska. Stop! stop! one question only—I am quite calm—	-
Glycine. Ay, as the old song says, Calm as a tiger, valiant as a dove. Nay now, I have marred the verse: well! this on	e question—
Laska. Are you not bound to me by your own and is it not as plain—	promise?
Glycine. Halt! that's two questions.
Laska. Pshaw! Is it not as plain as impudence That you're in love with this young swaggering Bethlen Bathory? When he was accused,

[907]

Lady Sarolta could be cruel?

[912]

	Led by a cry, far inward from the track, In the hollow of an oak, as in a nest, Did find thee, Bethlen, then a helpless babe. The robe that wrapt thee was a widow's mantle.
	Bethlen. An infant's weakness doth relax my frame. O say—I fear to ask——	350
	Sarolta. And I to tell thee.
[913]	Bethlen. Strike! O strike quickly! See, I do not shrink. I am stone, cold stone.
	Sarolta. Hid in a brake hard by, Scarce by both palms supported from the earth, A wounded lady lay, whose life fast waning Seemed to survive itself in her fixt eyes, That strained towards the babe. At length one arm Painfully from her own weight disengaging, She pointed first to heaven, then from her bosom Drew forth a golden casket. Thus entreated Thy foster-father took thee in his arms, And kneeling spake: 'If aught of this world's comfort Can reach thy heart, receive a poor man's troth, That at my life's risk I will save thy child!' Her countenance worked, as one that seemed preparing	355 360 365
	A loud voice, but it died upon her lips In a faint whisper, 'Fly! Save him! Hide—hide all!'
	Bethlen. And did he leave her? What! had I a mother? And left her bleeding, dying? Bought I vile life With the desertion of a dying mother? Oh agony!	370
	Glycine. Alas! thou art bewildered, And dost forget thou wert a helpless infant!
	Bethlen. What else can I remember, but a mother Mangled and left to perish?
	Sarolta. Hush, Glycine! It is the ground-swell of a teeming instinct: Let it but lift itself to air and sunshine, And it will find a mirror in the waters It now makes boil above it. Check him not!	375
	Bethlen. O that I were diffused among the waters That pierce into the secret depths of earth, And find their way in darkness! Would that I Could spread myself upon the homeless winds! And I would seek her! for she is not dead! She can not die! O pardon, gracious lady! You were about to say, that he returned—	380
	Sarolta. Deep Love, the godlike in us, still believes Its objects as immortal as itself!
	Bethlen. And found her still—
[914]	Sarolta. Alas! he did return, He left no spot unsearched in all the forest, But she (I trust me by some friendly hand) Had been borne off.	390
	Bethlen. O whither?
	Glycine. Dearest Bethlen! I would that you could weep like me! O do not Gaze so upon the air!
	Sarolta. While he was absent, A friendly troop, 'tis certain, scoured the wood, Hotly pursued indeed by Emerick.
	Bethlen. Emerick. Oh hell!	395
	Glycine. Bethlen!

Hist! I'll curse him in a whisper!

Bethlen.

This gracious lady must hear blessings only. She hath not yet the glory round her head, Nor those strong eagle wings, which make swift way To that appointed place, which I must seek; Or else she were my mother!		400
Sarolta. Noble youth! From me fear nothing! Long time have I owed Offerings of expiation for misdeeds Long past that weigh me down, though innocent! Thy foster-father hid the secret from thee, For he perceived thy thoughts as they expanded, Proud, restless, and ill-sorting with thy state!		405
Vain was his care! Thou'st made thyself suspected E'en where suspicion reigns, and asks no proof But its own fears! Great Nature hath endowed thee With her best gifts! From me thou shalt receive All honourable aidance! But haste hence!		410
Travel will ripen thee, and enterprise Beseems thy years! Be thou henceforth my soldier! And whatsoe'er betide thee, still believe That in each noble deed, achieved or suffered, Thou solvest best the riddle of thy birth! And may the light that streams from thine own honour		415
Guide thee to that thou seekest!
Glycine. Must he leave us?
Bethlen. And for such goodness can I return nothing But some hot tears that sting mine eyes? Some sighs That if not breathed would swell my heart to stifling? May heaven and thine own virtues, high-born lady, Be as a shield of fire, far, far aloof		420
To scare all evil from thee! Yet, if fate Hath destined thee one doubtful hour of danger, From the uttermost region of the earth, methinks, Swift as a spirit invoked, I should be with thee!		425
And then, perchance, I might have power to unbosom These thanks that struggle here. Eyes fair as thine Have gazed on me with tears of love and anguish, Which these eyes saw not, or beheld unconscious; And tones of anxious fondness, passionate prayers,		430
Have been talked to me! But this tongue ne'er soothed A mother's ear, lisping a mother's name! O, at how dear a price have I been loved And no love could return! One boon then, lady! Where'er thou bidd'st, I go thy faithful soldier,		435
But first must trace the spot, where she lay bleeding Who gave me life. No more shall beast of ravine Affront with baser spoil that sacred forest! Or if avengers more than human haunt there, Take they what shape they list, savage or heavenly,		440
They shall make answer to me, though my heart's blood		445
Should be the spell to bind them. Blood calls for blood!	[Exit Bethlen.	445
Sarolta. Ah! it was this I feared. To ward off this Did I withhold from him that old Bathory Returning hid beneath the self-same oak, Where the babe lay, the mantle, and some jewel Bound on his infant arm.
Glycine. Oh, let me fly And stop him! Mangled limbs do there lie scattered Till the lured eagle bears them to her nest. And voices have been heard! And there the plant grows That being eaten gives the inhuman wizard		450
Power to put on the fell hyæna's shape.		455
Sarolta. What idle tongue hath bewitched thee, Glycine? I hoped that thou had'st learnt a nobler faith.
Glycine. O chide me not, dear lady; question Laska, Or the old man.
Sarolta. Forgive me, I spake harshly. It is indeed a mighty sorcery That doth enthral thy young heart, my poor girl		460

[915]

[916]

And what hath Laska told thee?
Glycine. Three days past A courier from the king did cross that wood; A wilful man, that armed himself on purpose: And never hath been heard of from that time!	465
	[Sound of horns without.
Sarolta. Hark! dost thou hear it!
Glycine. 'Tis the sound of horns! Our huntsmen are not out!
Sarolta. Lord Casimir Would not come thus!
Notice not come that:	[Horns again.
Glycine. Still louder!
Sarolta. Haste we hence! For I believe in part thy tale of terror! But, trust me, 'tis the inner man transformed: Beasts in the shape of men are worse than war-wolves.	470

Emerick. Nay, that's too late, man. Say, what thy mother and thy godfather Were pleased to call thee.	475
Laska, my liege sovereign.
Emerick. Well, my liege subject, Laska! And you are Lord Casimir's steward?
Laska. And your majesty's creature.
Emerick. Two gentle dames made off at our approach. Which was your lady?	480
Laska My liege lord, the taller. The other, please your grace, is her poor handmaid, Long since betrothed to me. But the maid's froward— Yet would your grace but speak—
Emerick. Hum, master steward!
I am honoured with this sudden confidence.	485 [to Laska, then to Rudolph.
Lord Rudolph, you'll announce our coming. Greet fair Sarolta from me, and entreat her To be our gentle hostess. Mark, you add	to Labra, mon to radospir
How much we grieve, that business of the state Hath forced us to delay her lord's return.	490

ACT II

Scene I

A savage wood. At one side a cavern, overhung with ivy. Zapolya and Raab Kiuprili discovered: both, but especially the latter, in rude and savage garments.

Raab Kiuprili. Heard you then aught while I was slumbering?

Zapolya. Nothing.

Only your face became convulsed. We miserable!

Is heaven's last mercy fled? Is sleep grown treacherous?

Raab Kiuprili. O for a sleep, for sleep itself to rest in! I dream'd I had met with food beneath a tree,

And I was seeking you, when all at once

My feet became entangled in a net:

Still more entangled as in rage I tore it.

At length I freed myself, had sight of you,

But as I hastened eagerly, again

[918]

I found my frame encumbered: a huge serpent

Twined round my chest, but tightest round my throat.

Zapolya. Alas! 'twas lack of food: for hunger chokes!

Raab Kiuprili. And now I saw you by a shrivelled child Strangely pursued. You did not fly, yet neither Touched you the ground, methought, but close above it Did seem to shoot yourself along the air, And as you passed me, turned your face and shrieked.	15
Zapolya. I did in truth send forth a feeble shriek, Scarce knowing why. Perhaps the mock'd sense craved To hear the scream, which you but seemed to utter. For your whole face looked like a mask of torture! Yet a child's image doth indeed pursue me Shrivelled with toil and penury!	20
Raab Kiuprili. Nay! what ails you?
Zapolya. A wondrous faintness there comes stealing o'er me. Is it Death's lengthening shadow, who comes onward, Life's setting sun behind him?	25
Raab Kiuprili. Cheerly! The dusk Will quickly shroud us. Ere the moon be up, Trust me I'll bring thee food!
Zapolya. Hunger's tooth has Gnawn itself blunt. O, I could queen it well O'er my own sorrows as my rightful subjects. But wherefore, O revered Kiuprili! wherefore	30
Did my importunate prayers, my hopes and fancies, Force thee from thy secure though sad retreat? Would that my tongue had then cloven to my mouth! But Heaven is just! With tears I conquered thee, And not a tear is left me to repent with! Had set thou not done already, had set thou not	35
Had'st thou not done already—had'st thou not Suffered—oh, more than e'er man feigned of friendship?
Raab Kiuprili. Yet be thou comforted! What! had'st thou faith When I turned back incredulous? 'Twas thy light That kindled mine. And shall its out, And leave thy soul in darkness? Yet look up,	40
And think thou see'st thy sainted lord commissioned And on his way to aid us! Whence those late dreams, Which after such long interval of hopeless And silent resignation all at once	45
Night after night commanded thy return Hither? and still presented in clear vision This wood as in a scene? this very cavern? Thou darest not doubt that Heaven's especial hand Worked in those signs. The hour of thy deliverance Is on the stroke:—for misery can not add Grief to thy griefs, or patience to thy sufferance!	50
Zapolya. Can not! Oh, what if thou wert taken from me? Nay, thou said'st well: for that and death were one. Life's grief is at its height indeed; the hard	55

Raab Kiuprili. Emerick?

Glycine. He came this morning—

> [They retire to the cavern, bearing Zapolya. Then enter Bethlen, armed with a boar-spear.

Bethlen. I had a glimpse

Of some fierce shape; and but that Fancy often Is Nature's intermeddler, and cries halves With the outward sight, I should believe I saw it Bear off some human prey. O my preserver! Bathory! Father! Yes, thou deserv'st that name!

Thou did'st not mock me! These are blessed findings!

The secret cypher of my destiny

[Looking at his signet.

Stands here inscribed: it is the seal of fate! Ha!—Had ever monster fitting lair, 'tis yonder! Thou yawning den, I well remember thee! Mine eyes deceived me not. Heaven leads me on! Now for a blast, loud as a king's defiance, To rouse the monster couchant o'er his ravine!

[Blows the horn—then a pause.

Another blast! and with another swell To you, ye charméd watchers of this wood! If haply I have come, the rightful heir Of vengeance: if in me survive the spirits Of those, whose guiltless blood flowed streaming here! 175

Still silent? Is the monster gorged? Heaven shield me!

[Blows again louder.

Thou, faithful spear! be both my torch and guide.

180

[As Bethlen is about to enter, Kiuprili speaks from the cavern unseen.

Raab Kiuprili. Withdraw thy foot! Retract thine idle spear, And wait obedient!

Rethlen Ha! What art thou? speak!

Raab Kiuprili (still unseen). Avengers!

Bethlen. By a dying mother's pangs

E'en such am I. Receive me!

[924]

Raab Kiuprili (still unseen). Wait! Beware! At thy first step, thou treadest upon the light, Thenceforth must darkling flow, and sink in darkness! 185

Bethlen. Ha! see my boar-spear trembles like a reed!— Oh, fool! mine eyes are duped by my own shuddering.-

Those piléd thoughts, built up in solitude, Year following year, that pressed upon my heart 190

As on the altar of some unknown God, Then, as if touched by fire from heaven descending.

Blazed up within me at a father's name-Do they desert me now?—at my last trial? Voice of command! and thou, O hidden Light! I have obeyed! Declare ye by what name I dare invoke you! Tell what sacrifice

195

Will make you gracious. Raab Kiuprili (still unseen). Patience! Truth! Obedience!

Be thy whole soul transparent! so the Light, Thou seekest, may enshrine itself within thee! Thy name?

200

Bethlen. Ask rather the poor roaming savage, Whose infancy no holy rite had blest, To him, perchance, rude spoil or ghastly trophy, In chase or battle won, have given a name. I have none—but like a dog have answered To the chance sound which he that fed me, called me.

	Raab Kiuprili (still unseen). Thy birth-place?
B	Bethlen. Deluding spirits! Do ye	mock me?
	nestion the Night! Bid Darkness tell its birth-place? t hear! Within yon old oak's hollow trunk, here the bats cling, have I surveyed my cradle!
	e mother-falcon hath her nest above it, nd in it the wolf litters!—I invoke you, ll me, ye secret ones! if ye beheld me
As I	I stood there, like one who having delved
	r hidden gold hath found a talisman, tell! what rights, what offices of duty
This	is signet doth command? What rebel spirits
Owe homage to its Lord?
	Raab Kiuprili (still unseen). More, guiltier, mightier, an thou mayest summon! Wait the destined hour!
	Bethlen. O yet again, and with more clamorous prayer, mportune ye! Mock me no more with shadows! is sable mantle—tell, dread voice! did this wrap one fatherless!
Z	Zapolya (unseen). One fatherless!
	Bethlen. A sweeter voice!—A voice of love and pity!
	as it the softened echo of mine own? d echo! but the hope it kill'd was sickly, id ere it died it had been mourned as dead!
	ne other hope yet lives within my soul:
	nick let me ask!—while yet this stifling fear, is stop of the heart, leaves utterance!—Are—are these

ACT III

Scene I

A stately room in Lord Casimir's castle. Enter Emerick and Laska.

Emerick. I do perceive thou hast a tender conscience, Laska, in all things that concern thine own Interest or safety.

In this sovereign presence Laska. I can fear nothing, but your dread displeasure.

Emerick. Perchance, thou think'st it strange, that I of all men Should covet thus the love of fair Sarolta, Dishonouring Casimir?

Far be it from me! Your Majesty's love and choice bring honour with them.

Emerick. Perchance, thou hast heard that Casimir is my friend, Fought for me, yea, for my sake, set at nought A parent's blessing; braved a father's curse?

Laska (aside). Would I but knew now, what his Majesty meant! Oh yes, Sire! 'tis our common talk, how Lord Kiuprili, my Lord's father-

Emerick. 'Tis your talk, Is it, good statesman Laska?

Laska. No, not mine, Not mine, an please your Majesty! There are Some insolent malcontents indeed that talk thus— Nay worse, mere treason. As Bathory's son, The fool that ran into the monster's jaws.

Emerick. Well, 'tis a loyal monster if he rids us Of traitors! But art sure the youth's devoured?

Laska. Not a limb left, an please your Majesty! And that unhappy girl-

Thou followed'st her Emerick. Into the wood? [Laska bows assent.

Henceforth then I'll believe That jealousy can make a hare a lion.

Laska. Scarce had I got the first glimpse of her veil,

When, with a horrid roar that made the leaves Of the wood shake-

Made thee shake like a leaf!

Laska. The war-wolf leapt; at the first plunge he seized her; Forward I rushed!

Emerick. Most marvellous!

Hurled my javelin; 30 Which from his dragon-scales recoiling—

Emerick. Enough! And take, friend, this advice. When next thou tonguest it, Hold constant to thy exploit with this monster, And leave untouched your common talk aforesaid, What your Lord did, or should have done.

[926]

	Those very arms this day Sarolta show'd n k. I'm lost in wild conjectures!	ne—	90

[927]

[928]

Bethlen. O tempt me not, e'en with a wandering guess, To break the first command a mother's will
Imposed, a mother's voice made known to me! 'Ask not, my son,' said she, 'our names or thine.	95
The shadow of the eclipse is passing off	90
The full orb of thy destiny! Already The victor Crescent glitters forth and sheds
O'er the yet lingering haze a phantom light.	400
Thou canst not hasten it! Leave then to Heaven The work of Heaven: and with a silent spirit	100
Sympathize with the powers that work in silence!'
Thus spake she, and she looked as she were then Fresh from some heavenly vision!
[Re-enter Laska, n	not perceiving them.
Laska. All asleep!
[Then observing Bethlen, sta	ands in idiot-affright.
I must speak to it first—Put—put the question! I'll confess all! [St	ammering with fear.
Old Bathory. Laska! what ails thee, man?
Laska (pointing to Bethlen). There!
Old Bathory. I see nothing! where?
Laska. He does not see it!
Bethlen, torment me not!
Bethlen. Soft! Rouse him gently! He hath outwatched his hour, and half asleep,
With eyes half open, mingles sight with dreams.	110
Old Bathory. Ho! Laska! Don't you know us! 'tis Bathory And Bethlen!
Laska. Good now! Ha! ha! An excellent trick.
Afraid? Nay, no offence! But I must laugh. But are you sure now, that 'tis you, yourself?
Bethlen. Would'st be convinced?
Laska. No nearer, pray! consider! If it should prove his ghost, the touch would freeze me To a tombstone. No nearer!	115
Bethlen. The fool is drunk!
Laska. Well now! I love a brave man to my heart.
I myself braved the monster, and would fain Have saved the false one from the fate she tempted.	120
	120
Old Bathory. You, Laska? Bethlen (to Bathory). Mark! Heaven grant it may be so!
Glycine?
Laska. She! I traced her by the voice.
You'll scarce believe me, when I say I heard The close of a song: the poor wretch had been singing:
As if she wished to compliment the war-wolf At once with music and a meal!	125
Bethlen (to Bathory). Mark that!
Laska. At the next moment I beheld her running,
Wringing her hands with, 'Bethlen! O poor Bethlen!' I almost fear, the sudden noise I made,
Rushing impetuous through the brake, alarmed her.	130
She stopt, then mad with fear, turned round and ran Into the monster's gripe. One piteous scream
I heard. There was no second—I—
Bethlen. Stop there!
We'll spare your modesty! Who dares not honour Laska's brave tongue, and high heroic fancy?	135
Laska. You too, Sir Knight, have come back safe and sound! You played the hero at a cautious distance!
- on prayon and more as a continuous distance.

[929]

[930]

Or was it that you sent the poor girl forward To stay the monster's stomach? Dainties quickly Pall on the taste and cloy the appetite!		140
Old Bathory. Laska, beware! Forget not what thou art! Should'st thou but dream thou'rt valiant, cross thyself! And ache all over at the dangerous fancy!
Laska. What then! you swell upon my lady's favour, High Lords and perilous of one day's growth! But other judges now sit on the bench! And haply, Laska hath found audience there, Where to defend the treason of a son		145
Might end in lifting up both son and father Still higher; to a height from which indeed You both may drop, but, spite of fate and fortune, Will be secured from falling to the ground. 'Tis possible too, young man! that royal Emerick, At Laska's rightful suit, may make inquiry By whom seduced, the maid so strangely missing—		150 155
Bethlen. Soft! my good Laska! might it not suffice, If to yourself, being Lord Casimir's steward, I should make record of Glycine's fate?
Laska. 'Tis well! it shall content me! though your fear Has all the credit of these lowered tones. First we demand the manner of her death?		160
Bethlen. Nay! that's superfluous! Have you not just told us, That you yourself, led by impetuous valour, Witnessed the whole? My tale's of later date. After the fate, from which your valour strove In vain to rescue the rash maid, I saw her!		165
Laska. Glycine?
Bethlen. Nay! Dare I accuse wise Laska, Whose words find access to a monarch's ear, Of a base, braggart lie? It must have been Her spirit that appeared to me. But haply I come too late? It has itself delivered Its own commission to you?		170
Old Bathory. 'Tis most likely! And the ghost doubtless vanished, when we entered And found brave Laska staring wide—at nothing!
Laska. 'Tis well! You've ready wits! I shall report them, With all due honour, to his Majesty! Treasure them up, I pray! A certain person, Whom the king flatters with his confidence, Tells you, his royal friend asks startling questions! 'Tis but a hint! And now what says the ghost!		175 180
Bethlen. Listen! for thus it spake: 'Say thou to Laska, Glycine, knowing all thy thoughts engrossed In thy new office of king's fool and knave, Foreseeing thou'lt forget with thine own hand To make due penance for the wrongs thou'st caused her, For thy soul's safety, doth consent to take it		185
From Bethlen's cudgel'—thus. Off! scoundrel! off!	[Beats him off.
	[Laska runs away.
Old Bathory. The sudden swelling of this shallow dastard Tells of a recent storm: the first disruption Of the black cloud that hangs and threatens o'er us.		190
Bethlen. E'en this reproves my loitering. Say where lies The oratory?
Old Bathory. Ascend yon flight of stairs! Midway the corridor a silver lamp Hangs o'er the entrance of Sarolta's chamber, And facing it, the low arched oratory! Me thou'lt find watching at the outward gate: For a petard might burst the bars, unheard		195

Bethlen. There I will meet you! And till then good-night! Dear good old man, good-night!		200
Old Bathory. O yet one moment! What I repelled, when it did seem my own, I cling to, now 'tis parting—call me father! It can not now mislead thee. O my son, Ere yet our tongues have learnt another name, Bethlen!—say 'Father' to me!		205
Bethlen. Now, and for ever My father! other sire than thou, on earth I never had, a dearer could not have! From the base earth you raised me to your arms, And I would leap from off a throne, and kneeling, Ask Heaven's blessing from thy lips. My father!		210
Bathory. Go! Go!	[Exit Bethlen.
May every star now shining over us, Be as an angel's eye, to watch and guard him!	[Exit Bathory.
Scene changes to a splendid Bed-chamber, hung with tape	estry.
Sarolta and an Attendant.
Attendant. We all did love her, madam!
Sarolta. She deserved it! Luckless Glycine! rash, unhappy girl! 'Twas the first time she e'er deceived me.		215
Attendant. She was in love, and had she not died thus, With grief for Bethlen's loss, and fear of Laska, She would have pined herself to death at home.
Sarolta. Has the youth's father come back from his search?		220
Attendant. He never will, I fear me. O dear lady! That Laska did so triumph o'er the old man— It was quite cruel—'You'll be sure,' said he, 'To meet with part at least of your son Bethlen, Or the war-wolf must have a quick digestion! Go! Search the wood by all means! Go! I pray you!'		225
Sarolta. Inhuman wretch!
Attendant. And old Bathory answered With a sad smile, 'It is a witch's prayer, And may Heaven read it backwards.' Though she was rash, 'Twas a small fault for such a punishment!		230
Sarolta. Nay! 'twas my grief, and not my anger spoke.
Small fault indeed! but leave me, my poor girl! I feel a weight that only prayer can lighten.
	[Exit Attendant.

Bethlen. Mother! Queen. Royal Zapolya! name me Andreas! Nor blame thy son, if being a king, he yet Hath made his own arm minister of his justice. So do the gods who launch the thunderbolt!	175
Zapolya. O Raab Kiuprili! Friend! Protector! Guide! In vain we trenched the altar round with waters, A flash from Heaven hath touched the hidden incense—	180
Bethlen. And that majestic form that stood beside thee Was Raab Kiuprili!
Zapolya. It was Raab Kiuprili; As sure as thou art Andreas, and the king.
Old Bathory. Hail Andreas! hail my king!
Andreas. Stop, thou revered one, Lest we offend the jealous destinies By shouts ere victory. Deem it then thy duty To pay this homage, when 'tis mine to claim it.	185
Glycine. Accept thine hand-maid's service!
[Kneeling.
Zapolya. Raise her, son! O raise her to thine arms! she saved thy life, And through her love for thee, she saved thy mother's! Hereafter thou shalt know, that this dear maid Hath other and hereditary claims Upon thy heart, and with Heaven guarded instinct But carried on the work her sire began!	190
Andreas. Dear maid! more dear thou canst not be! the rest Shall make my love religion. Haste we hence: For as I reached the skirts of this high forest, I heard the noise and uproar of the chase, Doubling its echoes from the mountain foot.	195
Glycine. Hark! sure the hunt approaches.

Zapolya. O Kiuprili!	200
Old Bathory. The demon-hunters of the middle air Are in full cry, and scare with arrowy fire The guilty! Hark! now here, now there, a horn Swells singly with irregular blast! the tempest Has scattered them!
[Horns at a distance.
Zapolya. O Heavens! where stays Kiuprili?	205
Old Bathory. The wood will be surrounded! leave me here.
Andreas. My mother! let me see thee once in safety. I too will hasten back, with lightning's speed, To seek the hero!
Old Bathory. Haste! my life upon it I'll guide him safe.
Andreas (thunder). Ha! what a crash was there! Heaven seems to claim a mightier criminal Than yon vile subaltern.	210
Zapolya. Your behest, High powers, Lo, I obey! To the appointed spirit, That hath so long kept watch round this drear cavern, In fervent faith, Kiuprili, I entrust thee!	215

	Casimir. Strange providence! what then was he who fled me	?
	Thy looks speak fearful things! Whither, old man! Would thy hand point me?
	Old Bathory. Casimir, to thy father.
	Casimir. The curse! the curse! Open and swallow me,
	Unsteady earth! Fall, dizzy rocks! and hide me!		260
	Old Bathory. Speak, speak, my lord!
	Kiuprili. Bid him fulfil his work!
	Casimir. Thou art Heaven's immediate minister, dread spirit! O for sweet mercy, take some other form, And save me from perdition and despair!	!
	Old Bathory. He lives!
	Casimir. Lives! A father's curse can never die!		265
	Kiuprili. O Casimir! Casimir!
	Old Bathory. Look! he doth forgive you!

Enter Sarolta.
Hail to Sarolta!
Sarolta. Confederate friends! I bring to you a joy Worthy your noble cause! Kiuprili lives, And from his obscure exile, hath returned To bless our country. More and greater tidings Might I disclose; but that a woman's voice Would mar the wondrous tale. Wait we for him, The partner of the glory—Raab Kiuprili; For he alone is worthy to announce it.	330 335

The sports of tempests, and yet ne'er the victim, How many may claim salvage in thee! Take her, son! A queen that brings with her a richer dowry Than orient kings can give!	380 385
Sarolta. A banquet waits!— On this auspicious day, for some few hours I claim to be your hostess. Scenes so awful With flashing light, force wisdom on us all! E'en women at the distaff hence may see, That bad men may rebel, but ne'er be free; May whisper, when the waves of faction foam, None love their country, but who love their home: For freedom can with those alone abide,	390
Who wear the golden chain, with honest pride, Of love and duty, at their own fire-side: While mad ambition ever doth caress Its own sure fate, in its own restlessness!	395

- [37] Lord Rudolph. And his main policy too. 1817.
- [44-55] Casimir. Mark too, the edges of yon lurid mass!
 Restless and vext, as if some angering hand,
 With fitful, tetchy snatch, unrolled and pluck'd
 The jetting ringlets of the vaporous fleece!
 These are sure signs of conflict nigh at hand,
 And elemental war!

AN APOLOGY FOR SPENCERS

Said William to Edmund I can't guess the reason Why Spencers abound in this bleak wintry season. Quoth Edmund to William, I perceive you're no Solon— Men may purchase a half-coat when they cannot a whole-one.

Bristoliensis.

ON A LATE MARRIAGE BETWEEN AN OLD MAID AND FRENCH PETIT MAÎTRE

Tho' Miss ——'s match is a subject of mirth, She considered the matter full well, And wisely preferred leading one ape on earth To perhaps a whole dozen in hell.

First published in The Watchman, No. V, April 2, 1796. Included in Literary Remains, 1836, i. 45. First collected P. and D. W., 1877, ii. 368.

EPIGRAM

ON AN AMOROUS DOCTOR

From Rufa's eye sly Cupid shot his dart And left it sticking in Sangrado's heart.

No quiet from that moment has he known, And peaceful sleep has from his eyelids flown. And opium's force, and what is more, alack! His own orations cannot bring it back.

In short, unless she pities his afflictions, Despair will make him take his own prescriptions.

First published in The Watchman, No. V, April 2, 1796. Included in Lit. Rem., i. 45. First collected P. and D. W., 1877, ii. 368.

ON A REPORT OF A MINISTER'S DEATH WRITTEN IN GERMANY

Last Monday all the Papers said That Mr. —— was dead; Why, then, what said the City? The tenth part sadly shook their head, And shaking sigh'd and sighing said, 'Pity, indeed, 'tis pity!'

But when the said report was found A rumour wholly without ground, Why, then, what said the city? The other nine parts shook their head, Repeating what the tenth had said, 'Pity, indeed, 'tis pity!'

JOB'S LUCK

Sly Beelzebub took all occasions
To try Job's constancy and patience;
He took his honours, took his health,
He took his children, took his wealth,
His camels, horses, asses, cows—
And the sly Devil did not take his spouse.

But Heaven that brings out good from evil, And loves to disappoint the Devil, Had predetermined to restore Twofold all Job had before, His children, camels, horses, cows,— Short-sighted Devil, not to take his spouse!

Keepsake, 1829. First collected 1834.

The first stanza of 'Job's Luck' is adapted from Fr. v. Logan's Sinngedicht, Hiob's Weib. Lessing's edition, Bk. III, No. 90:—

'Als der Satan ging von Hiob, ist sein Anwalt dennoch blieben, Hiobs Weib; er hätte nimmer einen bessern aufgetrieben.'

The second stanza is adapted from Fr. v. Logan's Sinngedicht, Auf den Hornutus, ibid. Bk. I, No. 68:

'Hornutus las, was Gott Job habe weggenommen, Sei doppelt ihm hernach zu Hause wiederkommen: Wie gut, sprach er, war dies, dass Gott sein Weib nicht nahm, Auf dass Job ihrer zwei für eine nicht bekam!'

ON THE SICKNESS OF A GREAT MINISTER

Pluto commanded death to take away
Billy—Death made pretences to obey,
And only made pretences, for he shot
A headless dart that struck nor wounded not.
The ghaunt Economist who (tho' my grandam Thinks otherwise) ne'er shoots his darts at random
Mutter'd, 'What? put my Billy in arrest?

FROM AN OLD GERMAN POET

That France has put us oft to rout With powder, which ourselves found out; And laughs at us for fools in print, Of which our genius was the Mint; All this I easily admit, For we have genius, France has wit. But 'tis too bad, that blind and mad To Frenchmen's wives each travelling German goes, Expands his manly vigour by their sides, Becomes the father of his country's foes And turns their warriors oft to parricides.

First published in Morning Post, Oct. 11, 1802. Adapted from Wernicke's Epigrams (Bk. VIII, No. 4), Auf die Buhlerey der Deutschen in Frankreich.

ON THE CURIOUS CIRCUMSTANCE,

THAT IN THE GERMAN LANGUAGE THE SUN IS FEMININE, AND THE MOON IS MASCULINE

Our English poets, bad and good, agree To make the Sun a male, the Moon a she. He drives HIS dazzling diligence on high, In verse, as constantly as in the sky;

[968]

And cheap as blackberries our sonnets shew The Moon, Heaven's huntress, with HER silver bow; By which they'd teach us, if I guess aright, Man rules the day, and woman rules the night. In Germany, they just reverse the thing; The Sun becomes a queen, the Moon a king. Now, that the Sun should represent the women, The Moon the men, to me seem'd mighty humming; And when I first read German, made me stare. Surely it is not that the wives are there As common as the Sun, to lord and loon, And all their husbands hornéd as the Moon.

First published in Morning Post, Oct. 11, 1802. Adapted from Wernicke's Epigrams (Bk. VII, No. 15), Die Sonne und der Mond.

ON PITT AND FOX

Britannia's boast, her glory and her pride, Pitt in his Country's service lived and died: At length resolv'd, like Pitt had done, to do, For once to serve his Country, Fox died too!

[971] First published by Mr. B. Dobell in the Athenæum, Jan. 6, 1904. This epigram belongs to the same MS. source as the preceding, 'On the Taste of the Times,' and may have been the composition of S. T. C.

In Fugitive Pieces (1806) (see P. W., 1898, i. 34) Byron published a reply 'for insertion in the Morning Chronicle to the following illiberal impromptu on the death of Mr. Fox, which appeared in the Morning Post [Sept. 26, 1806]:—

"Our Nation's Foes lament on Fox's death, But bless the hour when Pitt resigned his breath: These feelings wide let Sense and Truth unclue, We give the palm where Justice points its due."

I have little doubt that this 'illiberal impromptu' was published by S. T. C., who had just returned from Italy and was once more writing for the press. It is possible that he veiled his initials in the line, 'Let Sense and Truth unClue.'

FOOTNOTES:

A great, perhaps the greater, number of Coleridge's Epigrams are adaptations from the [951:1] German of Wernicke, Lessing, and other less known epigrammatists. They were sent to the Morning Post and other periodicals to supply the needs of the moment, and with the rarest exceptions they were deliberately excluded from the collected editions of his poetical works which received his own sanction, and were published in his lifetime. Collected for the first time by Mrs. H. N. Coleridge and reprinted in the third volume of Essays on His Own Times (1850), they have been included, with additions and omissions, in P. and D. W., 1877-1880, P. W., 1885, P. W., 1890, and the Illustrated Edition of Coleridge's Poems, issued in 1907. The adaptations from the German were written and first published between 1799 and 1802. Of the earlier and later epigrams the greater number are original. Four epigrams were published anonymously in The Watchman, in April, 1796. Seventeen epigrams, of which twelve are by Coleridge, two by Southey, and three by Tobin, were published anonymously in the Annual Anthology of 1800. Between January 2, 1798, and October 11, 1802 Coleridge contributed at least thirty-eight epigrams to the Morning Post. Most of these epigrams appeared under the well-known signature ESTHSE. Six epigrams, of which five had been published in the Morning Post, were included in The Friend (No. 11, Oct. 26, 1809). Finally, Coleridge contributed six epigrams to the Keepsake, of which four had been published in the Morning Post, and one in the Annual Anthology. Epigrams were altogether excluded from Sibylline Leaves and from the three-volume editions of 1828 and 1829; but in 1834 the rule was relaxed and six epigrams were allowed to appear. Two of these, In An Album ('Parry seeks the Polar Ridge') and On an Insignificant ("Tis Cypher lies beneath this Crust') were published for the first time.

For the discovery of the German originals of some twenty epigrams, now for the first time noted and verified, I am indebted to the generous assistance of Dr. Hermann Georg Fiedler, Taylorian Professor of the German Language and Literature at Oxford, and of my friend Miss Katharine Schlesinger.

- [953:1] N.B. Bad in itself, and, as Bob Allen used to say of his puns, looks damned ugly upon paper.
- [954:1] Lines 3, 4, with the heading 'On an Insignificant,' were written by S. T. C. in Southey's copy of the Omniana of 1812 [see nos. 9, 11]. See P. W., 1885, ii. 402, Note.
- [961:1] The antithesis was, perhaps, borrowed from an Epigram entitled 'Posthumous Fame', included in Elegant Extracts, ii. 260.

If on his spacious marble we rely, Pity a worth like his should ever die! If credit to his real life we give, Pity a wretch like him should ever live.

[962:1] The first and second versions are included in Essays, &c., 1850, iii. 976: the third version was first published in 1893.

In 1830 Coleridge re-wrote (he did not publish) the second version as an Epitaph on Hazlitt. The following apologetic note was affixed:—

'With a sadness at heart, and an earnest hope grounded on his misanthropic sadness, when I first knew him in his twentieth or twenty-first year, that a something existed in his bodily organism that in the sight of the All-Merciful lessened his responsibility, and the moral imputation of his acts and feelings.' MS.

[964:1] The 'One who published' was, perhaps, Charles Lloyd, in his novel, Edmund Oliver, 2 vols. 1798. Compare the following Epigram of Prior's:—

To John I ow'd great obligation, But John unhappily thought fit To publish it to all the nation: Sure John and I are more than quit.

[974:1] Extempore, in reply to a question of Mr. Theodore Hook's—'Look at him, and say what you think: Is not he like a Rose?'

MY GODMOTHER'S BEARD[976:1]

So great the charms of Mrs. Mundy, That men grew rude, a kiss to gain: This so provok'd the dame that one day To Pallas chaste she did complain:

Nor vainly she address'd her prayer, Nor vainly to that power applied; The goddess bade a length of hair In deep recess her muzzle hide:

Still persevere! to love be callous! For I have your petition heard! To snatch a kiss were vain (cried Pallas) Unless you first should shave your beard.

? 1791

First published in Table Talk and Omniana, 1888, p. 392. The lines were inscribed by Coleridge in Gillman's copy of the Omniana of 1812. An apologetic note is attached. J. P. Collier (Old Man's Diary, 1871, March 5, 1832, Part I, p. 34) says that Coleridge 'recited the following not very good epigram by him on his godmother's beard; the consequence of which was that he was struck out of her will'. Most probably the lines, as inscribed on the margin of Omniana, were written about 1830 or 1831. First collected in Coleridge's Poems, 1907.

LINES TO THOMAS POOLE

[Quoted in a letter from Coleridge to John Thelwall, dated Dec. 17, 1796.]

. . . . Joking apart, I would to God we could sit by a fire-side and joke vivâ voce, face to face—Stella [Mrs. Thelwall] and Sara [Mrs. S. T. Coleridge], Jack Thelwall and I!—as I once wrote to my dear friend T. Poole,—

Repeating

Such verse as Bowles, heart honour'd Poet sang, That wakes the Tear, yet steals away the Pang, Then, or with Berkeley, or with Hobbes romance it, Dissecting Truth with metaphysic lancet. Or, drawn from up these dark unfathom'd wells, In wiser folly chink the Cap and Bells. How many tales we told! what jokes we made, Conundrum, Crambo, Rebus, or Charade; Ænigmas that had driven the Theban mad, And Puns, these best when exquisitely bad; And I, if aught of archer vein I hit, With my own laughter stifled my own wit.

TO A WELL-KNOWN MUSICAL CRITIC, REMARKABLE FOR HIS EARS STICKING THROUGH HIS HAIR.

TO BABY BATES

18

You come from o'er the waters, From famed Columbia's land, And you have sons and daughters, And money at command.

But I live in an island, Great Britain is its name, With money none to buy land, The more it is the shame.

But we are all the children Of one great God of Love, Whose mercy like a mill-drain Runs over from above.

Lullaby, lullaby,
Sugar-plums and cates,
Close your little peeping eye,
Bonny Baby B——s.

First collected 1893. 'Baby Bates' was the daughter of Joshua Bates, one of the donors of the Boston Library. Her father and mother passed a year (1828-1829) at Highgate, 'close to the house of Dr. and Mrs. Gillman.' See a letter to Mrs. Bates from S. T. C. dated Jan. 23, 1829. N. and Q. 4th Series, i. 469.

TO A CHILD[987:1]

Little Miss Fanny,
So cubic and canny,
With blue eyes and blue shoes—
The Queen of the Blues!
As darling a girl as there is in the world—

If she'll laugh, skip and jump, And not be Miss Glump!

1834. First published in Athenæum, Jan. 28, 1888. First collected 1893.

FOOTNOTES:

- [976:1] 'There is a female saint (St. Vuilgefortis), whom the Jesuit Sautel, in his Annus Sacer Poeticus, has celebrated for her beard—a mark of divine favour bestowed upon her for her prayers.' Omniana, 1812, ii. 54. 'Pereant qui ante nos nostra dixere! What! can nothing be one's own? This is the more vexatious, for at the age of eighteen I lost a legacy of fifty pounds for the following epigram on my godmother's beard, which she had the barbarity to revenge by striking me out of her will.' *S. - [981:1] These lines are written on a fly-leaf of a copy of Five Bookes of the Church by Richard Field (folio 1635), under the inscription: 'Hannah Scollock, her book, February 10, 1787.' The volume was bequeathed to the poet's younger son, Derwent Coleridge, and is now in the possession of the Editor.
- [983:1] Written for James Gillman Junr. as a School Exercise, for Merchant Taylors', c. 1822-3.
- [984:1] Written in pencil on the blank leaf of a book of lectures delivered at the London University, in which the Hartleyan doctrine of association was assumed as a true basis.
- [987:1] To Miss Fanny Boyce, afterwards Lady Wilmot Horton.

A MANIAC in the woods-She crosses heedlessly the woodman's path-scourg'd by rebounding boughs.

First published in 1893.

Compare this with discarded stanza in 'Introduction to the Tale of the Dark Ladié' as printed in the Morning Post, Dec. 21, 1799 (vide ante, p. 333).

And how he cross'd the woodman's paths, Thro' briars and swampy mosses beat: How boughs rebounding scourg'd his limbs, And low stubs gor'd his feet.

Note by J. D. Campbell, P. W., 1893, p. 456.

HYMNS-MOON

In a cave in the mountains of Cashmeer, an image of ice, which makes its appearance thus: Two days before the new moon there appears a bubble of ice, which increases in size every day till the fifteenth day, at which it is an ell or more in height;—then, as the moon decreases the Image does also till it vanishes. Mem. Read the whole 107th page of Maurice's Indostan.

First published in 1893. 'Hymns to the Sun, the Moon, and the Elements' are included in a list of projected works enumerated in the Gutch Notebook. The 'caves of ice' in Kubla Khan may have been a reminiscence of the 107th page of Maurice's Hindostan.

First published, Lit. Rem., i. 281.

FOOTNOTES:

[988:1] One of the earliest of Coleridge's Notebooks, which fell into the hands of his old schoolfellow, John Mathew Gutch, the printer and proprietor of Felix Farley's Bristol Journal, was purchased by the Trustees of the British Museum in 1868, and is now included in Add. MSS. as No. 27901. The fragments of verse contained in the notebook are included in P. W. 1893, pp. 453-8. The notebook as a whole was published by Professor A. Brandl in 1896 (S. T. Coleridge's Notizbuch aus den Jahren 1795-1798). Nineteen entries are included by H. N. Coleridge in Poems and Poetical Fragments published in Literary Remains, 1836, i. 277-80.

[988:2] An incorrect version of the lines was published in Lit. Rem., ii. 280.

Names do not always meet with Love, And Love wants courage without a name. [997:1]

Dec. 1801. Now first published from an MS.

The Moon, how definite its orb!
Yet gaze again, and with a steady gaze—
'Tis there indeed,—but where is it not?—
It is suffused o'er all the sapphire Heaven,
Trees, herbage, snake-like stream, unwrinkled Lake,
Whose very murmur does of it partake!

And low and close the broad smooth mountain is more a thing of Heaven than when distinct by one dim shade, and yet undivided from the universal cloud in which it towers infinite in height.

? 1801. First published from an MS. in 1893.

Such love as mourning Husbands have To her whose Spirit has been newly given To her guardian Saint in Heaven— Whose Beauty lieth in the grave—

(Unconquered, as if the Soul could find no purer Tabernacle, nor place of sojourn than the virgin Body it had before dwelt in, and wished to stay there till the Resurrection)—

Far liker to a Flower now than when alive,

A BECK IN WINTER [998:1]

Over the broad, the shallow, rapid stream,
The Alder, a vast hollow Trunk, and ribb'd—
All mossy green with mosses manifold,
And ferns still waving in the river-breeze
Sent out, like fingers, five projecting trunks—
The shortest twice 6 (?) of a tall man's strides.—
One curving upward in its middle growth
Rose straight with grove of twigs—a pollard tree:—
The rest more backward, gradual in descent—
One in the brook and one befoamed its waters:
One ran along the bank in the elk-like head
And pomp of antlers—

'Twas not a mist, nor was it quite a cloud, But it pass'd smoothly on towards the sea— Smoothly and lightly between Earth and Heaven: So, thin a cloud, It scarce bedimm'd the star that shone behind it: And Hesper now

Paus'd on the welkin blue, and cloudless brink, A golden circlet! while the Star of Jove—
That other lovely star—high o'er my head
Shone whitely in the centre of his Haze
. . . one black-blue cloud

Stretch'd, like the heaven, o'er all the cope of Heaven.

[DE PROFUNDIS CLAMAVI]

Come, come thou bleak December wind, And blow the dry leaves from the tree! Flash, like a love-thought, thro' me, Death! And take a life that wearies me.

Leghorn, June 7, 1806. First published in Letters of S. T. C., 1875, ii. 499, n. 1. Now collected for the first time. Adapted from Percy's version of 'Waly, Waly, Love be bonny', st. 3.

Marti'mas wind when wilt thou blaw, And shake the green leaves aff the tree? O gentle death, when wilt thou cum? For of my life I am wearie.

As some vast Tropic tree, itself a wood,
That crests its head with clouds, beneath the flood
Feeds its deep roots, and with the bulging flank
Of its wide base controls the fronting bank—
(By the slant current's pressure scoop'd away
The fronting bank becomes a foam-piled bay)
High in the Fork the uncouth Idol knits
His channel'd brow; low murmurs stir by fits
And dark below the horrid Faquir sits—
An Horror from its broad Head's branching wreath
Broods o'er the rude Idolatry beneath—

FRAGMENT OF AN ODE ON NAPOLEON

29

O'erhung with yew, midway the Muses mount
From thy sweet murmurs far, O Hippocrene!
Turbid and black upboils an angry fount
Tossing its shatter'd foam in vengeful spleen—
Phlegethon's rage Cocytus' wailings hoarse
Alternate now, now mixt, made known its headlong course:
Thither with terror stricken and surprise,
(For sure such haunts were ne'er to Muse's choice)
Euterpe led me. Mute with asking eyes
I stood expectant of her heavenly voice.

[1003]

Her voice entranc'd my terror and made flow In a rude understrain the maniac fount below. 'Whene'er (the Goddess said) abhorr'd of Jove Usurping Power his hands in blood imbrues—

Another Version

The builder left one narrow rent,

Two wedded hearts, if ere were such,
Contented most in discontent,

Still there cling, and try in vain to touch!
O Joy! with thy own joy at strife,
That yearning for the Realm above
Wouldst die into intenser Life,
And Union absolute of Love!

I have experienced The worst the world can wreak on me—the worst That can make Life indifferent, yet disturb With whisper'd discontent the dying prayer— I have beheld the whole of all, wherein My heart had any interest in this life To be disrent and torn from off my Hopes That nothing now is left. Why then live on? That hostage that the world had in its keeping Given by me as a pledge that I would live— That hope of Her, say rather that pure Faith In her fix'd Love, which held me to keep truce With the tyranny of Life—is gone, ah! whither? Put on such heavenly, spiritual light,
At the same moment in his steadfast eye
Were Virtue's native crest, th' innocent soul's
Unconscious meek self-heraldry,—to man
Genial, and pleasant to his guardian angel.
He suffer'd nor complain'd;—though oft with tears
He mourn'd th' oppression of his helpless brethren,—
And sometimes with a deeper holier grief
Mourn'd for the oppressor—but this in sabbath hours—
A solemn grief, that like a cloud at sunset,
Was but the veil of inward meditation
Pierced thro' and saturate with the intellectual rays
It soften'd.

[ARS POETICA]

In the two following lines, for instance, there is nothing objectionable, nothing which would preclude them from forming, in their proper place, part of a descriptive poem:—

'Behold you row of pines, that shorn and bow'd Bend from the sea-blast, seen at twilight eve.'

But with a small alteration of rhythm, the same words would be equally in their place in a book of topography, or in a descriptive tour. The same image will rise into a semblance of poetry if thus conveyed:—

'Yon row of bleak and visionary pines, By twilight-glimpse discerned, mark! how they flee From the fierce sea-blast, all their tresses wild Streaming before them.'

THE THREE SORTS OF FRIENDS

Though friendships differ endless in degree,
The sorts, methinks, may be reduced to three. *Ac*quaintance many, and *Con*quaintance few;

The friend I've mourned with, and the maid I woo!

My DEAR GILLMAN—The ground and matériel of this division of one's friends into ac, con and *in*quaintance, was given by Hartley Coleridge when he was scarcely five years old [1801]. On some one asking him if Anny Sealy (a little girl he went to school with) was an acquaintance of his, he replied, very fervently pressing his right hand on his heart, 'No, she is an *in*quaintance!' 'Well! 'tis a father's tale'; and the recollection soothes your old friend and *in*quaintance,

BARON GUELPH OF ADELSTAN. A FRAGMENT

FOOTNOTES:

- [996:1] The following 'Fragments', numbered 1-63, consist of a few translations and versicles inserted by Coleridge in his various prose works, and a larger number of fragments, properly so called, which were published from MS. sources in 1893, or are now published for the first time. These fragments are taken exclusively from Coleridge's Notebooks (the source of Anima Poetæ, 1895), and were collected, transcribed, and dated by the present Editor for publication in 1893. The fragments now published for the first time were either not used by J. D. Campbell in 1893, or had not been discovered or transcribed. The very slight emendations of the text are due to the fact that Mr. Campbell printed from copies, and that the collection as a whole has now for the second time been collated with the original MSS. Fragments numbered 64, 96, 98, 111, 113, in P. W., 1893, are quotations from the plays and poems of William Cartwright (1611-1643). They are not included in the present issue. Fragments 56, 58, 59, 61, 63, 67, 80, 81, 83, 88, 91, 93, 94, 117-120, are inserted in the text or among 'Jeux d'Esprit', or under other headings. The chronological order is for the most part conjectural, and differs from that suggested in 1893. It must be borne in mind that the entries in Coleridge's Notebooks are not continuous, and that the additional matter in prose or verse was inserted from time to time, wherever a page or half a page was not filled up. It follows that the context is an uncertain guide to the date of any given entry. Pains have been taken to exclude quotations from older writers, which Coleridge neither claimed nor intended to claim for his own, but it is possible that two or three of these fragments of verse are not original.
- [996:2] This quatrain, described as 'The concluding stanza of an Elegy on a Lady who died in Early Youth', is from part of a memorandum in S. T. C.'s handwriting headed 'Relics of my Schoolboy Muse; i. e. fragments of poems composed before my fifteenth year'. It follows First Advent of Love, 'O fair is Love's first hope,' &c. (vide ante, p. 443), and is compared with Age—a stanza written forty years later than the preceding—'Dewdrops are the gems of morning,' &c. (p. 440).

ANOTHER VERSION.

O'er her piled grave the gale of evening sighs, And flowers will grow upon its grassy slope, I wipe the dimming waters from mine eye Even on the cold grave dwells the Cherub Hope.

Unpublished Letter to Thomas Poole, Feb. 1. 1801, on the death of Mrs. Robinson ('Perdita').

- [997:1] These two lines, slightly altered, were afterwards included in Alice du Clos (ll. 111, 112), ante. p. 473.
- [998:1] The lines are an attempt to reduce to blank verse one of many minute descriptions of natural objects and scenic effects. The concluding lines are illegible.
- [1001:1] These lines, 'slip torn from some old letter,' are endorsed by Poole, 'Reply of Coleridge on my urging him to exert himself.' First collected in 1893.
- [1007:1] The translation is embodied in a marginal note on the following quotation from The Select Discourses by John Smith, 1660:—
 - 'So the Sibyl was noted by Heraclitus as μαινομένω στόματι γελαστὰ καὶ ἀκαλλώπιστα φθεγγομένη, as one speaking ridiculous and unseemly speeches with her furious mouth.' The fragment is misquoted and misunderstood: for γελαστά, etc. should be ἀμύριστα unperfumed, inornate lays, not redolent of art.—Render it thus:

Not her's, etc.

Στόματι μαινομένω is 'with ecstatic mouth'.

J. D. Campbell in a note to this Fragment (P. W., 1893, pp. 464-5) quotes the 'following prose translation of the same passage', from Coleridge's Statesman's Manual (1816, p. 132); 'Multiscience (or a variety and quantity of acquired knowledge) does not test intelligence. But the Sibyll with wild enthusiastic mirth shrilling forth unmirthful, inornate and unperfumed truths, reaches to a thousand years with her voice through the power of God.'

The prose translation is an amalgam of two fragments. The first sentence is quoted by Diogenes Laertius, ix. 1: the second by Plutarch, de Pyth. orac. 6, p. 377.

[1009:1] These rhymes were addressed to a Miss Eliza Nixon, who supplied S. T. C. with books from a lending library.

AN EXPERIMENT FOR A METRE

NOTES BY PROFESSOR SAINTSBURY

1. I think most ears would take these as anapaestic throughout. But the introduction of Milton's

Drunk with Idolatry, drunk with wine

as a leit-motiv is of the first interest.

Description of it, l. 4, very curious. I should have thought no one could have run 'drunk with wine' together as one foot.

- 2. Admirable! I hardly know better trochaics.
- 3. Very interesting: but the terminology odd. The dochmius, a five-syllabled foot, is (in one form—there are about thirty!) an antispast ______ plus a syllable. Catalectic means (properly) minus a syllable. But the verses as quantified are really dochmiac, and the only attempts I have seen. Shall I own I can't get any English Rhythm on them?
- 4. More ordinary: but a good arrangement and wonderful for the date.
- 5. Not nonsense at all: but, metrically, really his usual elegiac.
- 6. This, if early, is almost priceless. It is not only lovely in itself, but an obvious attempt to recover the zig-zag outline and varied cadence of seventeenth century born—the things that Shelley to some extent, Beddoes and Darley more, and Tennyson and Browning most were to master. I subscribe (most humbly) to his suggestions, especially his second.
- 7. Very like some late seventeenth-century (Dryden time) motives and a leetle 'Moorish'.
- 8. Like 6, and charming.
- 9. A sort of recurrence to Pindaric—again pioneer, as the soul of S. T. C. had to be always.

10 and 11. Ditto.

13. Again, I should say, anapaestic—but this anapaest and amphibrach quarrel is ἄσπονδος.

FOOTNOTES:

[1014:1] 'He attributed in part, his writing so little, to the extreme care and labour which he applied in elaborating his metres. He said that when he was intent on a new experiment in metre, the time and labour he bestowed were inconceivable; that he was quite an epicure in sound.'—Wordsworth on Coleridge (as reported by Mr. Justice Coleridge), Memoirs of W. Wordsworth, 1851, ii. 306.

In a letter to Poole dated March 16, 1801, Coleridge writes: 'I shall . . . immediately publish my Christabel, with the Essays on the "Preternatural", and on Metre' (Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 349). Something had been done towards the collection of materials for the first 'Essay', a great deal for the second. In a notebook (No. 22) which contains dated entries of 1805, 1815, &c., but of which the greater portion, as the context and various handwritings indicate, belongs to a much earlier date, there are some forty-eight numbered specimens of various metres derived from German and Italian sources. To some of these stanzas or strophes a metrical scheme with original variants is attached, whilst other schemes are exemplified by metrical experiments in English, headed 'Nonsense Verses'. Two specimens of these experiments, headed 'A Sunset' and 'What is Life', are included in the text of P. W., 1893 (pp. 172, 178), and in that of the present issue, pp. 393, 394. They are dated 1805 in accordance with the dates of Coleridge's own comments or afterthoughts, but it is almost certain that both sets of verses were composed in 1801. The stanza entitled 'An Angel Visitant' belongs to the same period. Ten other sets of 'Nonsense Verses' of uncertain but early date are now printed for the first time.

[1014:2] Sumptuous Tyranny floating this way. [MS.] On p. 17 of Notebook 22 Coleridge writes:—

And thus, my Love! as on the midway Slope Of yonder Hill I stretch my limbs at noon And tranquil muse upon Tranquillity. 30 Full many a Thought uncall'd and undetain'd

And many idle flitting Phantasies Traverse my indolent and passive Mind As wild, as various, as the random Gales That swell or flutter on this subject Lute.

	And what if All of animated Life
	Be but as Instruments diversly fram'd
	That tremble into thought, while thro' them breathes
	One infinite and intellectual Breeze,
	And all in diff'rent Heights so aptly hung,		40
	That Murmurs indistinct and Bursts sublime,
	Shrill Discords and most soothing Melodies,
	Harmonious from Creation's vast concent—
	Thus God would be the universal Soul,

	And each one's Tunes be that, which each calls I.
	But thy more serious Look a mild Reproof
	Darts, O beloved Woman, and thy words
	Pious and calm check these unhallow'd Thoughts,
	These Shapings of the unregen'rate Soul,		50
	Bubbles, that glitter as they rise and break
	On vain Philosophy's aye-babbling Spring:
	Thou biddest me walk humbly with my God!
	Meek Daughter in the family of Christ.
	Wisely thou sayest, and holy are thy words!		55
	Nor may I unblam'd or speak or think of Him,
	Th' Incomprehensible! save when with Awe
	I praise him, and with Faith that inly feels,
	Who with his saving Mercies healed me,		0.0

RECOLLECTION[1023:1]

[Vide ante, pp. 53, 48]

Had bask'd beneath the sun's unclouded flame, Awakes amid the troubles of the air, The skiev deluge and white lightning's glare, Aghast he scours before the tempest's sweep, 5 And sad recalls the sunny hour of sleep! So tost by storms along life's wild'ring way Mine eye reverted views that cloudless day, When by my native brook I wont to rove, While HOPE with kisses nurs'd the infant Love! 10 Dear native brook! like peace so placidly Smoothing thro' fertile fields thy current meek— Dear native brook! where first young Poesy Star'd wildly eager in her noon-tide dream; Where blameless Pleasures dimpled Quiet's cheek, 15 As water-lilies ripple thy slow stream! How many various-fated years have past, What blissful and what anguish'd hours, since last I skimm'd the smooth thin stone along thy breast Numb'ring its light leaps! Yet so deep imprest 20

I never shut amid the sunny blaze,
But strait, with all their tints, thy waters rise,
The crossing plank, and margin's willowy maze,
And bedded sand, that, vein'd with various dyes,
Gleam'd thro' thy bright transparence to the gaze—
Ah! fair tho' faint those forms of memory seem Like Heaven's bright bow on thy smooth evening stream.

Auspicious Reverence! Hush all meaner song, Till we the deep prelusive strain have pour'd To the Great Father, only Rightful King, Eternal Father! king omnipotent; Beneath whose shadowing banners wide-unfurl'd Justice leads forth her tyrant-quelling Hosts. Such Symphony demands best Instrument.	5

THE RIME OF THE ANCYENT MARINERE, [1030:1] IN SEVEN PARTS.

ARGUMENT

How a Ship having passed the Line was driven by Storms to the cold Country towards the South Pole; and how from thence she made her course to the Tropical Latitude of the Great Pacific Ocean; and of the strange things that befell; and in what manner the Ancyent Marinere came back to his own Country.

I.

	It is an ancyent Marinere, And he stoppeth one of three: "By thy long grey beard and thy glittering eye "Now wherefore stoppest me?
	"The Bridegroom's doors are open'd wide, "And I am next of kin; "The Guests are met, the Feast is set,— "May'st hear the merry din.	5
	But still he holds the wedding-guest— There was a Ship, quoth he— "Nay, if thou'st got a laughsome tale, "Marinere! come with me."	10
[1031]	He holds him with his skinny hand, Quoth he, there was a Ship— "Now get thee hence, thou grey-beard Loon! "Or my Staff shall make thee skip.	15
	He holds him with his glittering eye— The wedding guest stood still And listens like a three year's child; The Marinere hath his will.	20
	The wedding-guest sate on a stone, He cannot chuse but hear: And thus spake on that ancyent man, The bright-eyed Marinere.
	The Ship was cheer'd, the Harbour clear'd— Merrily did we drop Below the Kirk, below the Hill, Below the Light-house top.	25
	The Sun came up upon the left, Out of the Sea came he: And he shone bright, and on the right Went down into the Sea.	30
	Higher and higher every day, Till over the mast at noon— The wedding-guest here beat his breast, For he heard the loud bassoon.	35
	The Bride hath pac'd into the Hall, Red as a rose is she; Nodding their heads before her goes The merry Minstralsy.	40
	The wedding-guest he beat his breast, Yet he cannot chuse but hear: And thus spake on that ancyent Man, The bright-eyed Marinere.
	Listen, Stranger! Storm and Wind, A Wind and Tempest strong! For days and weeks it play'd us freaks— Like Chaff we drove along.	45

Listen, Stranger! Mist and Snow,

	And it grew wond'rous cauld: And Ice mast-high came floating by As green as Emerauld.	50
[1032]	And thro' the drifts the snowy clifts Did send a dismal sheen; Ne shapes of men ne beasts we ken— The Ice was all between.	55
	The Ice was here, the Ice was there, The Ice was all around: It crack'd and growl'd, and roar'd and howl'd— Like noises of a swound.	60
	At length did cross an Albatross, Thorough the Fog it came; And an it were a Christian Soul, We hail'd it in God's name.
	The Marineres gave it biscuit-worms, And round and round it flew: The Ice did split with a Thunder-fit, The Helmsman steer'd us thro'.	65
	And a good south wind sprung up behind. The Albatross did follow; And every day for food or play Came to the Marinere's hollo!	70
	In mist or cloud on mast or shroud, It perch'd for vespers nine, Whiles all the night thro' fog smoke-white, Glimmer'd the white moon-shine.	75
	"God save thee, ancyent Marinere! "From the fiends that plague thee thus— "Why look'st thou so?"—with my cross bow I shot the Albatross.	80
	II.
	The Sun came up upon the right, Out of the Sea came he; And broad as a weft upon the left Went down into the Sea.
	And the good south wind still blew behind, But no sweet Bird did follow Ne any day for food or play Came to the Marinere's hollo!	85
[1033]	And I had done an hellish thing And it would work 'em woe: For all averr'd, I had kill'd the Bird That made the Breeze to blow.	90
	Ne dim ne red, like God's own head, The glorious Sun uprist: Then all averr'd, I had kill'd the Bird That brought the fog and mist. 'Twas right, said they, such birds to slay That bring the fog and mist.	95
	The breezes blew, the white foam flew, The furrow follow'd free: We were the first that ever burst Into that silent Sea.	100
	Down dropt the breeze, the Sails dropt down, 'Twas sad as sad could be And we did speak only to break The silence of the Sea.	105
	All in a hot and copper sky The bloody sun at noon, Right up above the mast did stand, No bigger than the moon.	110
	Day after day, day after day,

	We stuck, ne breath ne motion. As idle as a painted Ship Upon a painted Ocean.
	Water, water, every where, And all the boards did shrink: Water, water, everywhere, Ne any drop to drink.	115
	The very deeps did rot: O Christ! That ever this should be! Yea, slimy things did crawl with legs Upon the slimy Sea.	120
	About, about, in reel and rout, The Death-fires danc'd at night; The water, like a witch's oils, burnt green and blue and white.	125
[1034]	And some in dreams assured were Of the Spirit that plagued us so: Nine fathom deep he had follow'd us From the Land of Mist and Snow.	130
	And every tongue thro' utter drouth Was wither'd at the root; We could not speak no more than if We had been choked with soot.
	Ah wel-a-day! what evil looks Had I from old and young; Instead of the Cross the Albatross About my neck was hung.	135
	III.
	I saw a something in the Sky No bigger than my fist; At first it seem'd a little speck And then it seem'd a mist: It mov'd and mov'd, and took at last A certain shape, I wist.	140
	A speck, a mist, a shape, I wist! And still it ner'd and ner'd; And, an it dodg'd a water-sprite, It plung'd and tack'd and veer'd.	145
	With throat unslack'd, with black lips bak'd Ne could we laugh, ne wail: Then while thro' drouth all dumb they stood I bit my arm and suck'd the blood And cry'd, A sail! a sail!	150
	With throat unslack'd, with black lips bak'd Agape they hear'd me call: Gramercy! they for joy did grin And all at once their breath drew in As they were drinking all.	155
	She doth not tack from side to side— Hither to work us weal Withouten wind, withouten tide She steddies with upright keel.	160
[1035]	The western wave was all a flame, The day was well nigh done! Almost upon the western wave Rested the broad bright Sun; When that strange shape drove suddenly Betwixt us and the Sun.	165
	And strait the Sun was fleck'd with bars (Heaven's mother send us grace) As if thro' a dungeon grate he peer'd With broad and burning face.	170
	Alas! (thought I, and my heart beat loud) How fast she neres and neres!

	Are those her Sails that glance in the Sun Like restless gossameres?	175
	Are those her naked ribs, which fleck'd The sun that did behind them peer? And are those two all, all the crew, That woman and her fleshless Pheere?	180
	His bones were black with many a crack, All black and bare, I ween; Jet-black and bare, save where with rust Of mouldy damps and charnel crust They're patch'd with purple and green.	185
	Her lips are red, her looks are free, Her locks are yellow as gold: Her skin is as white as leprosy, And she is far liker Death than he; Her flesh makes the still air cold.	190
	The naked Hulk alongside came And the Twain were playing dice; "The Game is done! I've won, I've won!" Quoth she, and whistled thrice.
	A gust of wind sterte up behind And whistled thro' his bones; Thro' the holes of his eyes and the hole of his r Half-whistles and half-groans.	nouth
[1036]	With never a whisper in the Sea Off darts the Spectre-ship; While clombe above the Eastern bar The horned Moon, with one bright Star Almost atween the tips.	200
	One after one by the horned Moon (Listen, O Stranger! to me) Each turn'd his face with a ghastly pang And curs'd me with his ee.	205
	Four times fifty living men, With never a sigh or groan, With heavy thump, a lifeless lump They dropp'd down one by one.	210
	Their souls did from their bodies fly,— They fled to bliss or woe; And every soul it pass'd me by, Like the whiz of my Cross-bow.	215
	IV
	"I fear thee, ancyent Marinere! "I fear thy skinny hand; "And thou art long, and lank, and brown, "As is the ribb'd Sea-sand.
	"I fear thee and thy glittering eye "And thy skinny hand so brown— Fear not, fear not, thou wedding guest! This body dropt not down.	220
	Alone, alone, all all alone Alone on the wide wide Sea; And Christ would take no pity on My soul in agony.	225
	The many men so beautiful, And they all dead did lie! And a million million slimy things Liv'd on—and so did I.	230
	I look'd upon the rotting Sea, And drew my eyes away; I look'd upon the eldritch deck, And there the dead men lay.	235
[1037]	I look'd to Heav'n, and try'd to pray;

	But or ever a prayer had gusht, A wicked whisper came and made My heart as dry as dust.
	I clos'd my lids and kept them close, Till the balls like pulses beat; For the sky and the sea, and the sea and the sk Lay like a load on my weary eye,	240 xy
	And the dead were at my feet. The cold sweat melted from their limbs,	245
	Ne rot, ne reek did they; The look with which they look'd on me, Had never pass'd away.	240
	An orphan's curse would drag to Hell A spirit from on high: But O! more horrible than that Is the curse in a dead man's eye! Seven days, seven nights I saw that curse, And yet I could not die.	250
	The moving Moon went up the sky, And no where did abide: Softly she was going up And a star or two beside—	255
	Her beams bemock'd the sultry main Like morning frosts yspread; But where the ship's huge shadow lay, The charmed water burnt alway A still and awful red.	260
	Beyond the shadow of the ship I watch'd the water-snakes: They mov'd in tracks of shining white; And when they rear'd, the elfish light Fell off in hoary flakes.	265
	Within the shadow of the ship I watch'd their rich attire: Blue, glossy green, and velvet black They coil'd and swam; and every track Was a flash of golden fire.	270
[1038]	O happy living things! no tongue Their beauty might declare: A spring of love gusht from my heart, And I bless'd them unaware! Sure my kind saint took pity on me, And I bless'd them unaware.	275
	The self-same moment I could pray; And from my neck so free The Albatross fell off, and sank Like lead into the sea.	280 v.
	O sleep, it is a gentle thing, Belov'd from pole to pole! To Mary-queen the praise be yeven She sent the gentle sleep from heaven That slid into my soul.	285
	The silly buckets on the deck That had so long remain'd, I dreamt that they were fill'd with dew And when I awoke it rain'd.	290
	My lips were wet, my throat was cold, My garments all were dank; Sure I had drunken in my dreams And still my body drank.	295
	I mov'd and could not feel my limbs, I was so light, almost I thought that I had died in sleep, And was a blessed Ghost.	300

	The roaring wind! it roar'd far off, It did not come anear; But with its sound it shook the sails That were so thin and sere.
	The upper air bursts into life, And a hundred fire-flags sheen To and fro they are hurried about; And to and fro, and in and out The stars dance on between.	305
[1039]	The coming wind doth roar more loud; The sails do sigh, like sedge: The rain pours down from one black cloud And the Moon is at its edge.	310
	Hark! hark! the thick black cloud is cleft, And the Moon is at its side: Like waters shot from some high crag, The lightning falls with never a jag A river steep and wide.	315
	The strong wind reach'd the ship: it roar'd And dropp'd down, like a stone! Beneath the lightning and the moon The dead men gave a groan.	320
	They groan'd, they stirr'd, they all uprose, Ne spake, ne mov'd their eyes: It had been strange, even in a dream To have seen those dead men rise.	325
	The helmsman steer'd, the ship mov'd on; Yet never a breeze up-blew; The Marineres all 'gan work the ropes, Where they were wont to do: They rais'd their limbs like lifeless tools— We were a ghastly crew.	330
	The body of my brother's son Stood by me knee to knee: The body and I pull'd at one rope, But he said nought to me— And I quak'd to think of my own voice How frightful it would be!	335
	The day-light dawn'd—they dropp'd their arms, And cluster'd round the mast: Sweet sounds rose slowly thro' their mouths And from their bodies pass'd.	340
	Around, around, flew each sweet sound, Then darted to the sun: Slowly the sounds came back again Now mix'd, now one by one.	345
[1040]	Sometimes a dropping from the sky I heard the Lavrock sing; Sometimes all little birds that are How they seem'd to fill the sea and air With their sweet jargoning.	350
	And now 'twas like all instruments, Now like a lonely flute; And now it is an angel's song That makes the heavens be mute.	355
	It ceas'd: yet still the sails made on A pleasant noise till noon, A noise like of a hidden brook In the leafy month of June, That to the sleeping woods all night Singeth a quiet tune.	360
	Listen, O listen, thou Wedding-guest! "Marinere! thou hast thy will: "For that, which comes out of thine eye, doth make "My body and soul to be still."	365

	Never sadder tale was told
	To a man of woman born: Sadder and wiser thou wedding-guest!
	Thou'lt rise to-morrow morn.
	Never sadder tale was heard	370
	By a man of woman born: The Marineres all return'd to work
	As silent as beforne.
	The Marineres all 'gan pull the ropes,
	But look at me they n'old:	375
	Thought I, I am as thin as air— They cannot me behold.
	·
	Till noon we silently sail'd on Yet never a breeze did breathe:
	Slowly and smoothly went the ship	380
	Mov'd onward from beneath.
	Under the keel nine fathom deep
	From the land of mist and snow The spirit slid: and it was He
	That made the Ship to go.	385
	The sails at noon left off their tune And the Ship stood still also.
[1041]
[1041]	The sun right up above the mast Had fix'd her to the ocean:
	But in a minute she 'gan stir	390
	With a short uneasy motion— Backwards and forwards half her length
	With a short uneasy motion.
	Then, like a pawing horse let go,
	She made a sudden bound: It flung the blood into my head,	395
	And I fell into a swound.
	How long in that same fit I lay,
	I have not to declare;	400
	But ere my living life return'd, I heard and in my soul discern'd	400
	Two voices in the air,
	"Is it he?" quoth one, "Is this the man?
	"By him who died on cross, "With his cruel bow he lay'd full low	405
	"The harmless Albatross.	403
	"The spirit who 'bideth by himself
	"In the land of mist and snow,
	"He lov'd the bird that lov'd the man "Who shot him with his bow.	410
		120
	The other was a softer voice, As soft as honey-dew:
	Quoth he the man hath penance done, And penance more will do.
	And penance more win do.
	VI.
	First Voice.
	"But tell me, tell me! speak again,	415
	"Thy soft response renewing— "What makes that ship drive on so fast?
	"What is the Ocean doing?
	Second Voice.
	"Still as a Slave before his Lord,
	"The Ocean hath no blast:	420
	"His great bright eye most silently "Up to the moon is cast—
[1042]	-
[1042]	"If he may know which way to go, "For she guides him smooth or grim.
	"See, brother, see! how graciously	425

A little distance from the prow

[1043]

First Voice.

"But why drives on that ship so fast "Withouten wave or wind?

SECOND VOICE.

"The air is cut away before, "And closes from behind.	430
"Fly, brother, fly! more high, more high, "Or we shall be belated: "For slow and slow that ship will go, "When the Marinere's trance is abated."
I woke, and we were sailing on As in a gentle weather: 'Twas night, calm night, the moon was high; The dead men stood together.	435
All stood together on the deck, For a charnel-dungeon fitter: All fix'd on me their stony eyes That in the moon did glitter.	440
The pang, the curse, with which they died, Had never pass'd away: I could not draw my een from theirs Ne turn them up to pray.	445
And in its time the spell was snapt, And I could move my een: I look'd far-forth, but little saw Of what might else be seen.	450
Like one, that on a lonely road Doth walk in fear and dread, And having once turn'd round, walks on And turns no more his head: Because he knows, a frightful fiend Doth close behind him tread.	455
But soon there breath'd a wind on me, Ne sound ne motion made: Its path was not upon the sea In ripple or in shade.	460
It rais'd my hair, it fann'd my cheek, Like a meadow-gale of spring— It mingled strangely with my fears, Yet it felt like a welcoming.
Swiftly, swiftly flew the ship, Yet she sail'd softly too: Sweetly, sweetly blew the breeze— On me alone it blew.	465
O dream of joy! is this indeed The light-house top I see? Is this the Hill? Is this the Kirk? Is this mine own countrée?	470
We drifted o'er the Harbour-bar, And I with sobs did pray— "O let me be awake, my God! "Or let me sleep alway!"	475
The harbour-bay was clear as glass, So smoothly it was strewn! And on the bay the moon light lay, And the shadow of the moon.	480
The moonlight bay was white all o'er, Till rising from the same, Full many shapes, that shadows were, Like as of torches came.

	Those dark-red shadows were; But soon I saw that my own flesh Was red as in a glare.
	I turn'd my head in fear and dread, And by the holy rood, The bodies had advanc'd, and now Before the mast they stood.	490
	They lifted up their stiff right arms, They held them strait and tight; And each right-arm burnt like a torch, A torch that's borne upright. Their stony eye-balls glitter'd on In the red and smoky light.	495
[1044]	I pray'd and turn'd my head away Forth looking as before. There was no breeze upon the bay, No wave against the shore.	500
	The rock shone bright, the kirk no less That stands above the rock: The moonlight steep'd in silentness The steady weathercock.	505
	And the bay was white with silent light, Till rising from the same Full many shapes, that shadows were, In crimson colours came.	510
	A little distance from the prow Those crimson shadows were: I turn'd my eyes upon the deck— O Christ! what saw I there?
	Each corse lay flat, lifeless and flat; And by the Holy rood A man all light, a seraph-man, On every corse there stood.	515
	This seraph-band, each wav'd his hand: It was a heavenly sight: They stood as signals to the land, Each one a lovely light:	520
	This seraph-band, each wav'd his hand, No voice did they impart— No voice; but O! the silence sank, Like music on my heart.	525
	Eftsones I heard the dash of oars, I heard the pilot's cheer: My head was turn'd perforce away And I saw a boat appear.	530
	Then vanish'd all the lovely lights; The bodies rose anew: With silent pace, each to his place, Came back the ghastly crew. The wind, that shade nor motion made, On me alone it blew.	535
[1045]	The pilot, and the pilot's boy I heard them coming fast: Dear Lord in Heaven! it was a joy, The dead men could not blast.	540
	I saw a third—I heard his voice: It is the Hermit good! He singeth loud his godly hymns That he makes in the wood. He'll shrieve my soul, he'll wash away The Albatross's blood.	545

How loudly his sweet voice he rears! He loves to talk with Marineres That come from a far Contrée.	550
He kneels at morn and noon and eve— He hath a cushion plump: It is the moss, that wholly hides The rotted old Oak-stump.	555
The Skiff-boat ne'rd: I heard them talk, "Why, this is strange, I trow! "Where are those lights so many and fair "That signal made but now?
"Strange, by my faith! the Hermit said— "And they answer'd not our cheer. "The planks look warp'd, and see those sails "How thin they are and sere! "I never saw aught like to them "Unless perchance it were	560 565
"The skeletons of leaves that lag "My forest-brook along: "When the Ivy-tod is heavy with snow, "And the Owlet whoops to the wolf below "That eats the she-wolfs young.	570
"Dear Lord! it has a fiendish look— (The Pilot made reply) "I am afear'd—"Push on, push on! "Said the Hermit cheerily.
The Boat came closer to the Ship, But I ne spake ne stirr'd! The Boat came close beneath the Ship, And strait a sound was heard!	575
Under the water it rumbled on, Still louder and more dread: It reach'd the Ship, it split the bay; The Ship went down like lead.	580
Stunn'd by that loud and dreadful sound, Which sky and ocean smote: Like one that had been seven days drown'd My body lay afloat: But, swift as dreams, myself I found Within the Pilot's boat.	585
Upon the whirl, where sank the Ship, The boat spun round and round: And all was still, save that the hill Was telling of the sound.	590
I mov'd my lips: the Pilot shriek'd And fell down in a fit. The Holy Hermit rais'd his eyes And pray'd where he did sit.	595
I took the oars: the Pilot's boy, Who now doth crazy go, Laugh'd loud and long, and all the while His eyes went to and fro, "Ha! ha!" quoth he—"full plain I see, "The devil knows how to row."	600
And now all in mine own Countrée I stood on the firm land! The Hermit stepp'd forth from the boat, And scarcely he could stand.	605
"O shrieve me, shrieve me, holy Man! The Hermit cross'd his brow— "Say quick," quoth he, "I bid thee say "What manner man art thou?"	610
Forthwith this frame of mine was wrench'd With a woeful agony, Which forc'd me to begin my tale

[1046]

And then it left me free.
Since then at an uncertain hour, Now oftimes and now fewer, That anguish comes and makes me tell	615
My ghastly aventure.
I pass, like night, from land to land; I have strange power of speech; The moment that his face I see	620
I know the man that must hear me; To him my tale I teach.
What loud uproar bursts from that door! The Wedding-guests are there;	625
But in the Garden-bower the Bride And Bride-maids singing are:
And hark the little Vesper-bell Which biddeth me to prayer.
O Wedding-guest! this soul hath been Alone on a wide wide sea:	630
So lonely 'twas, that God himself Scarce seemed there to be.
O sweeter than the Marriage-feast, 'Tis sweeter far to me	635
To walk together to the Kirk With a goodly company.
To walk together to the Kirk And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends, Old men, and babes, and loving friends, And Youths, and Maidens gay.	640
Farewell, farewell! but this I tell To thee, thou wedding-guest!
He prayeth well who loveth well, Both man and bird and beast.	645
He prayeth best who loveth best,
All things both great and small: For the dear God, who loveth us, He made and loveth all.	650
The Marinere, whose eye is bright, Whose beard with age is hoar,
Is gone; and now the wedding-guest Turn'd from the bridegroom's door.
He went, like one that hath been stunn'd And is of sense forlorn:	655
A sadder and a wiser man He rose the morrow morn.

THE RAVEN

[As printed in the Morning Post, March 10, 1798.]

[Vide ante, p. 169.]

Under the arms of a goodly oak-tree,
There was of Swine a large company.
They were making a rude repast,
Grunting as they crunch'd the mast.
Then they trotted away: for the wind blew high—	5
One acorn they left, ne more mote you spy.
Next came a Raven, who lik'd not such folly;
He belong'd, I believe, to the witch Melancholy!
Blacker was he than the blackest jet;
Flew low in the rain; his feathers were wet.	10
He pick'd up the acorn and buried it strait,
By the side of a river both deep and great.
Where then did the Raven go?
He went high and low—
O'er hill, o'er dale did the black Raven go!	15
Many Autumns, many Springs;
Travell'd he with wand'ring wings;
Many Summers, many Winters—
I can't tell half his adventures.
At length he return'd, and with him a she;	20
And the acorn was grown a large oak-tree.
They built them a nest in the topmost bough,
And young ones they had, and were jolly enow.
But soon came a Woodman in leathern guise:
His brow like a pent-house hung over his eyes.	25
He'd an axe in his hand, and he nothing spoke,
But with many a hem! and a sturdy stroke,
At last he brought down the poor Raven's own oak.
His young ones were kill'd, for they could not depart,
And his wife she did die of a broken heart!	30
The branches from off it the Woodman did sever!
And they floated it down on the course of the River:
They saw'd it to planks, and it's rind they did strip,
And with this tree and others they built up a ship.
The ship, it was launch'd; but in sight of the land,	35
A tempest arose which no ship could withstand.
It bulg'd on a rock, and the waves rush'd in fast—
The auld Raven flew round and round, and caw'd to the blast.
He heard the sea-shriek of their perishing souls—
They be sunk! O'er the top-mast the mad water rolls.	40
The Raven was glad that such fate they did meet,
They had taken his all, and Revenge was Sweet!

High o'er the rocks at night I rov'd To forget the form I lov'd. Image of Lewti! from my mind Depart: for Lewti is not kind.

Speckled with many a moving shade, Danc'd upon Tamaha's stream; But brightlier on the Rock it play'd, The Rock, half-shelter'd from my view By pendent boughs of tressy Yew! True to Love, but false to Rest, My fancy whisper'd in my breast— So shines my Lewti's forehead fair Gleaming thro' her sable hair! Image of Lewti! from my mind Depart—for Lewti is not kind.	30 35

Alas! it has no power to stay: It's hues are dim, it's hues are grey Away it passes from the Moon. And now tis whiter than before— As white as my poor cheek will be, When, Lewt! on my couch I lie A dying Man for Love of thee!	55
Thou living Image Image of Lewii in my mind, Methinks thou lookest not kin unkind!	60

INTRODUCTION TO THE TALE OF THE DARK LADIE [1052:1]

[Vide ante, p. 330.]

To the Editor of The Morning Post.

Sir,

The following Poem is the Introduction to a somewhat longer one, for which I shall solicit insertion on your next open day. The use of the Old Ballad word, Ladie, for Lady, is the only piece of obsoleteness in it; and as it is professedly a tale of ancient times, I trust, that 'the affectionate lovers of venerable antiquity' (as Camden says) will grant me their pardon, and perhaps may be induced to admit a force and propriety in it. A heavier objection may be adduced against the Author, that in these times of fear and expectation, when novelties explode around us in all directions, he should presume to offer to the public a silly tale of old fashioned love; and, five years ago, I own, I should have allowed and felt the force of this objection. But, alas! explosion has succeeded explosion so rapidly, that novelty itself ceases to appear new; and it is possible that now, even a simple story, wholly unspired [? inspired] with politics or personality, may find some attention amid the hubbub of Revolutions, as to those who have resided a long time by the falls of Niagara, the lowest whispering becomes distinctly audible.

[1053]

[1052]

	O leave the Lily on its stem;
	O leave the Rose upon the spray; O leave the Elder-bloom, fair Maids! And listen to my lay.
		2
	A Cypress and a Myrtle bough, This morn around my harp you twin'd, Because it fashion'd mournfully Its murmurs in the wind.		5
	And now a Tale of Love and Woe, A woeful Tale of Love I sing: Hark, gentle Maidens, hark! it sighs And trembles on the string.		10
	But most, my own dear Genevieve! It sighs and trembles most for thee! O come and hear the cruel wrongs Befel the dark Ladie!		15
		5
	Few sorrows hath she of her own, My hope, my joy, my Genevieve! She loves me best whene'er I sing The songs that make her grieve.		20
1054]		6
	All thoughts, all passions, all delights, Whatever stirs this mortal frame, All are but ministers of Love, And feed his sacred flame.
		7
	O ever in my waking dreams, I dwell upon that happy hour, When midway on the Mount I sate Beside the ruin'd Tow'r.		25
		8
	The moonshine, stealing o'er the scene, Had blended with the lights of eve, And she was there, my hope! my joy! My own dear Genevieve!		30
[1055]	She lean'd against the armed Man The statue of the armed Knight— She stood and listen'd to my harp, Amid the ling'ring light.		35
		10
	I play'd a sad and doleful air, I sang an old and moving story, An old rude song, that fitted well The ruin wild and hoary.		40
		11
	She listen'd with a flitting blush, With downcast eyes and modest grace: For well she knew, I could not choose But gaze upon her face.

	I told her of the Knight that wore Upon his shield a burning brand. And how for ten long years he woo'd The Ladie of the Land:		45
		13
	I told her, how he pin'd, and ah! The deep, the low, the pleading tone, With which I sang another's love, Interpreted my own!		50
		14
	She listen'd with a flitting blush, With downcast eyes and modest grace. And she forgave me, that I gaz'd Too fondly on her face!		55
1056]		15
	But when I told the cruel scorn, That craz'd this bold and lovely Knight; And how he roam'd the mountain woods, Nor rested day or night;		60
		16
	And how he cross'd the Woodman's paths, Thro' briars and swampy mosses beat; How boughs rebounding scourg'd his limbs And low stubs gor'd his feet.	i,
		17
	How sometimes from the savage den, And sometimes from the darksome shade And sometimes starting up at once, In green and sunny glade;	b	65
		18
	There came and look'd him in the face An Angel beautiful and bright, And how he knew it was a Fiend, This mis'rable Knight!		70
		19
	And how, unknowing what he did, He leapt amid a lawless band, And sav'd from outrage worse than death The Ladie of the Land.		75
		20
	And how she wept, and clasp'd his knees, And how she tended him in vain, And meekly strove to expiate The scorn that craz'd his brain;		80
1057]		21
	And how she nurs'd him in a cave; And how his madness went away, When on the yellow forest leaves A dying man he lay;
		22
	His dying words—but when I reach'd That tenderest strain of all the ditty,		85

	My fault'ring voice and pausing harp Disturb'd her soul with pity.
		23
	All impulses of soul and sense Had thrill'd my guiltless Genevieve— The music and the doleful tale, The rich and balmy eve;		90
		24
	And hopes and fears that kindle hope, An undistinguishable throng; And gentle wishes long subdu'd, Subdu'd and cherish'd long.		95
		25
	She wept with pity and delight— She blush'd with love and maiden shame, And like the murmurs of a dream, I heard her breathe my name.		100
[1058]		26
	I saw her bosom heave and swell, Heave and swell with inward sighs— I could not choose but love to see Her gentle bosom rise.
		27
	Her wet cheek glow'd; she stept aside, As conscious of my look she stept; Then suddenly, with tim'rous eye, She flew to me, and wept;		105
		28
	She half-inclos'd me with her arms— She press'd me with a meek embrace; And, bending back her head, look'd up, And gaz'd upon my face.		110
		29
	'Twas partly love, and partly fear, And partly 'twas a bashful art, That I might rather feel than see, The swelling of her heart.		115
[1059]		30
	I calm'd her fears, and she was calm, And told her love with virgin pride; And so I won my Genevieve, My bright and beaut'ous bride.		120
		31
	And now once more a tale of woe, A woeful tale of love, I sing: For thee, my Genevieve! it sighs, And trembles on the string.
		32
	When last I sang the cruel scorn That craz'd this bold and lonely Knight, And how he roam'd the mountain woods, Nor rested day or night;		125

FOOTNOTES:

[1060:1] Now first published from an MS. in the British Museum (Add. MSS. 34,225). The Triumph of Loyalty, 'a sort of dramatic romance' (see Letter to Poole, December 5, 1800; Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 343), was begun and left unfinished in the late autumn of 1800. An excerpt (ll. 277-358) was revised and published as 'A Night Scene. A Dramatic Fragment,' in Sibylline Leaves (1817), vide ante, pp. 421-3. The revision of the excerpt (ll. 263-349) with respect to the order and arrangement of its component parts is indicated by asterisks, which appear to be contemporary with the MS. I have, therefore, in printing the MS., followed the revised and not the original order of these lines. Again, in the hitherto unpublished portion of the MS. (ll. 1-263) I have omitted rough drafts of passages which were rewritten, either on the same page or on the reverse of the leaf.

[1060:2] The words enclosed in brackets are not to be found in the text. They were either invented or adapted by Coleridge ad hoc. The text of the passage as a whole has been reconstructed by modern editors.

THE TRIUMPH OF LOYALTY

ACT I

Scene I. A cultivated Plain, skirted on the Left by a Wood. The Pyrenees are visible in the distance. Small knots of Soldiers all in the military Dress of the middle Ages are seen passing across the Stage. Then Enter Earl Henry and Sandoval, both armed.

Sandoval. A delightful plain this, and doubly pleasant after so long and wearisome a descent from the Pyranees $[\mathit{sic}]$. Did you not observe how our poor over wearied horses mended their pace as soon as they reached it?

Earl Henry. I must entreat your forgiveness, gallant Castilian! I ought ere this to have bade you welcome to my native Navarre.

But the wrongs and insults which you have suffered—-

Sandoval. Cheerily, General! Navarre has indeed but ill repaid your services, in thus recalling you from the head of an army which you yourself had collected and disciplined.

Earl Henry. Deserve my thanks, Friend! In the sunshine of Court-favor I could only believe that I loved my Queen and my Country: now I know it. But why name I my Country or my Sovereign? I owe all my Wrongs to the private enmity of the Chancellor.

Sandoval. Heaven be praised, you have atchieved [sic] a delicious revenge upon him!—that the same Courier who brought the orders for your recall carried back with him the first tidings of your Victory—it was exquisite good fortune!

Earl Henry. Sandoval! my gallant Friend! Let me not deceive you. To you I have vowed an undisguised openness. The gloom which overcast me, was occasioned by causes of less public import.

Sandoval. Connected, I presume, with that Mansion, the spacious pleasure grounds of which we noticed as we were descending from the mountain. Lawn and Grove, River and Hillock—it looked within these high walls, like a World of itself

Earl Henry. This Wood scarcely conceals these high walls from us. Alas! I know the place too well. . . . Nay, why too well?—But wherefore spake you, Sandoval, of this Mansion? What know you?

Sandoval. Nothing. Therefore I spake of it. On our descent from the mountain I pointed it out to you and asked to whom it belonged—you became suddenly absent, and answered me only by looks of Disturbance and Anxiety.

Earl Henry. That Mansion once belonged to Manric [sic], Lord of Valdez.

Sandoval. Alas, poor Man! the same, who had dangerous claims to the Throne of Navarre.

Earl Henry. Claims?—Say rather, pretensions—plausible only to the unreasoning Multitude.

Sandoval. Pretensions then (with bitterness).

Earl Henry. Bad as these were, the means he employed to give effect to them were still worse. He trafficked with France against the independence of his Country. He was a traitor, my Friend! and died a traitor's death. His two sons suffered with him, and many, (I fear, too many) of his adherents.

Sandoval. Earl Henry! (a pause) If the sentence were just, why was not the execution of it public. \ldots It is reported, that they were—but no! I will not believe it—the honest soul of my friend would not justify so foul a deed.

Earl Henry. Speak plainly—what is reported?

Sandoval. That they were all assassinated by order of the new Queen.

Earl Henry. Accursed be the hearts that framed and the tongues that scattered the Calumny!—The Queen was scarcely seated on her throne; the Chancellor, who had been her Guardian, exerted a pernicious influence over her judgement—she was taught to fear dangerous commotions in the Capital, she was intreated to prevent the bloodshed of the deluded citizens, and thus overawed she reluctantly consented to permit the reinforcement of an obsolete law, and——	60
Sandoval. They were not assassinated then?——	65
Earl Henry. Why these bitter tones to me, Sandoval? Can a law assassinate? Don Manrique [sic] and his accomplices drank the sleepy poison adjudged by that law in the State Prison at Pampilona. At that time I was with the army on the frontiers of France.	70
Sandoval. Had you been in the Capital——
Earl Henry. I would have pledged my life on the safety of a public Trial and a public Punishment.
Sandoval. Poisoned! The Father and his Sons!—And this, Earl Henry, was the first act of that Queen, whom you idolize!	75
Earl Henry. No, Sandoval, No! This was not her act. She roused herself from the stupor of alarm, she suspended in opposition to the advice of her council, all proceedings against the inferior partisans of the Conspiracy; she facilitated the escape of Don Manrique's brother, and to Donna Oropeza, his daughter and only surviving child, she restored all her father's possessions, nay became herself her Protectress and Friend. These were the acts, these the first acts of my royal Mistress.	80
Sandoval. And how did Donna Oropeza receive these favors?
Earl Henry. Why ask you that? Did they not fall on her, like heavenly dews?	85
Sandoval. And will they not rise again, like an earthly mist? What is Gratitude opposed to Ambition, filial revenge, and Woman's rivalry—what is it but a cruel Curb in the mouth of a fiery Horse, maddening the fierce animal whom it cannot restrain? Forgive me, Earl Henry! I meant not to move you so deeply.	90
Earl Henry. Sandoval, you have uttered that in a waking hour which having once dreamt, I feared the return of sleep lest I should dream it over again. My Friend (his Voice trembling) I woo'd the daughter of Don Manrique, but we are interrupted.	95
Sandoval. It is Fernandez.
Earl Henry (struggling with his emotions). A true-hearted old fellow——	100
Sandoval. As splenetic as he is brave.
Enter Fernandez.
Earl Henry. Well, my ancient! how did you like our tour through the mountains. (Earl Henry sits down on the seat by the woodside.)
Fernandez. But little, General! and my faithful charger Liked it still less. The field of battle in the level plain By Fontarabia was more to our taste.	105
Earl Henry. Where is my brother, Don Curio! Have you Seen him of late?
Fernandez. Scarcely, dear General! For by my troth I have been laughing at him Even till the merry tears so filled my eyes That I lost sight of him.	110
Sandoval. But wherefore, Captain.
Fernandez. He hath been studying speeches with fierce gestures; Speeches brimfull of wrath and indignation, The which he hopes to vent in open council:	115

[1064]

[1065]

And, in the heat and fury of this fancy He grasp'd your groom of the Chamber by the throat Who squeaking piteously, Ey! quoth your brother, I cry you Mercy, Fool! Hadst been indeed The Chancellor, I should have strangled thee.	120
Sandoval. Ha, ha! poor Barnard!
Fernandez. What you know my Gentleman, My Groom of the Chamber, my Sieur Barnard, hey?
Sandoval. I know him for a barren-pated coxcomb.
Fernandez. But very weedy, Sir! in worthless phrases, A sedulous eschewer of the popular And the colloquial—one who seeketh dignity I' th' paths of circumlocution! It would have Surpris'd you tho', to hear how nat'rally He squeak'd when Curio had him by the throat.	125 130
Sandoval. I know him too for an habitual scorner Of Truth.
Fernandez. And one that lies more dully than Old Women dream, without pretence of fancy, Humour or mirth, a most disinterested, Gratuitous Liar.
Earl Henry. Ho! enough, enough! Spare him, I pray you, were't but from respect To the presence of his Lord.	135
Sandoval. I stand reprov'd.
Fernandez. I too, but that I know our noble General Maintains him near his person, only that If he should ever go in jeopardy Of being damn'd (as he's now persecuted) For his virtue and fair sense, he may be sav'd By the supererogation of this Fellow's Folly and Worthlessness.—	140
Earl Henry. Hold, hold, good Ancient! Do you not know that this Barnard saved my life? Well, but my brother——	145
Fernandez. He will soon be here. I swear by this, my sword, dear General. I swear he has a Hero's soul—I only Wish I could communicate to him My gift of governing the spleen.—Then he Has had his colors, the drums too of the Regiment All put in cases—O, that stirs the Soldiery.	150
Earl Henry. Impetuous Boy!
Fernandez. Nay, Fear not for them, General. The Chancellor, no doubt, will take good care To let their blood grow cool on garrison duty.	155
Sandoval. Earl Henry! Frown not thus upon Fernandez; 'Tis said, and all the Soldiery believe it, That the five Regiments who return with you Will be dispers'd in garrisons and castles, And other Jails of honourable name. So great a crime it is to have been present In duty and devotion to a Hero!	160
Fernandez. What now? What now? The politic Chancellor is The Soldier's friend, and rather than not give Snug pensions to brave Men, he'll overlook All small disqualifying circumstances Of youth and health, keen eye and muscular limb,	165
He'll count our scars, and set them down for maims. And gain us thus all privileges and profits Of Invalids and superannuate veterans. Earl Henry. 'Tis but an idle rumour—See! they come.	170

Fernandez. That was the way in which the Flea i' th' Fable

	Sandoval. You lov'd the daughter of Don Manrique?

(Sandoval. And woo'd perchance One whom you lov'd not!	265
	Earl Henry. O I were most base Not loving Oropeza. True, I woo'd her Hoping to heal a deeper wound: but she Met my advances with an empassion'd Pride That kindled Love with Love. And when her Sire Who in his dream of Hope already grasp'd The golden circlet in his hand, rejected My suit, with Insult, and in memory Of ancient Feuds, pour'd Curses on my head, Her Blessings overtook and baffled them. But thou art stern, and with unkindling Countenance Art inly reasoning whilst thou listenest to me.	270 275
]	Sandoval. Anxiously, Henry! reasoning anxiously. But Oropeza—
]	Earl Henry. Blessings gather round her! Within this wood there winds a secret passage, Beneath the walls, which open out at length Into the gloomiest covert of the Garden.— The night ere my departure to the Army,	280
1	She, nothing trembling, led me through that gloom, And to the covert by a silent stream, Which, with one star reflected near its marge, Was the sole object visible around me. The night so dark, so close, the umbrage o'er us!	285
]	No leaflet stirr'd;—yet pleasure hung upon us, The gloom and stillness of the balmy night-air. A little further on an arbor stood, Fragrant with flowering Trees—I well remember What an uncertain glimmer in the Darkness	290
	Their snow-white Blossoms made—thither she led me, To that sweet bower! Then Oropeza trembled— I heard her heart beat—if 'twere not my own.	295
	Sandoval. A rude and searing note, my friend! Earl Henry. Oh! no! I have small memory of aught but pleasure.
]	The inquietudes of fear, like lesser Streams Still flowing, still were lost in those of Love: So Love grew mightier from the Pear, and Nature, Fleeing from Pain, shelter'd herself in Joy. The stars above our heads were dim and steady,	300
1	Like eyes suffus'd with rapture. Life was in us: We were all life, each atom of our Frames A living soul—I vow'd to die for her: With the faint voice of one who, having spoken, Relapses into blessedness, I vow'd it:	305
1	That solemn Vow, a whisper scarcely heard, A murmur breath'd against a lady's Cheek. Oh! there is Joy above the name of Pleasure, Deep self-possession, an intense Repose. No other than as Eastern Sages feign,	310
]	The God, who floats upon a Lotos Leaf, Dreams for a thousand ages; then awaking, Creates a world, and smiling at the bubble, Relapses into bliss. Ah! was that bliss Fear'd as an alien, and too vast for man?	315
]	For suddenly, intolerant of its silence, Did Oropeza, starting, grasp my forehead. I caught her arms; the veins were swelling on them. Thro' the dark Bower she sent a hollow voice;— 'Oh! what if all betray me? what if thou?'	320
	I swore, and with an inward thought that seemed The unity and substance of my Being,	325

[1071]

[1072]

I swore to her, that were she red with guilt, I would exchange my unblench'd state with hers.— Friend! by that winding passage, to the Bower I now will go—all objects there will teach me Unwavering Love, and singleness of Heart. Go, Sandoval! I am prepar'd to meet her— Say nothing of me—I myself will seek her— Nay, leave me, friend! I cannot bear the torment And Inquisition of that scanning eye.—	330
[Earl Henry retires into the wood	1.
Sandoval (alone). O Henry! always striv'st thou to be great By thine own act—yet art thou never great But by the Inspiration of great Passion. The Whirl-blast comes, the desert-sands rise up	335
And shape themselves; from Heaven to Earth they stand, As though they were the Pillars of a Temple, Built by Omnipotence in its own honour! But the Blast pauses, and their shaping spirit Is fled: the mighty Columns were but sand, And large Species trail clant he level mine!	340
And lazy Snakes trail o'er the level ruins! I know, he loves the Queen. I know she is His Soul's first love, and this is ever his nature— To his first purpose, his soul toiling back Like the poor storm-wreck'd [sailor] to his Boat, Still swept away, still struggling to regain it.	345
[Ex	it.
Herreras. He dies, that stirs! Follow me this instant.	350
(First Conspirator takes his arrow, snaps it, and throws it on the ground. The two others do the same.)
Herreras. Accursed cowards! I'll go myself, and make sure work (drawing his Dagger)
(Herreras strides towards the arbor, before he reaches it, stops and listens and then returns hastily to the front of the stage, as he turns his Back to the Arbor, Earl Henry appears, watching the Conspirators, and enters the Arbor unseen.)
First Conspirator. Has she seen us think you?
The Mask. No! she has not seen us; but she heard us distinctly.
Herreras. There was a rustling in the wood—go, all of you, stand on the watch—towards the passage.	355
A Voice from the Arbor. Mercy! Mercy! Tell me, why you murder me.
Herreras. I'll do it first. (Strides towards the Arbor, Earl Henry rushes out of it.)	360
The Mask. Jesu Maria.
(They all three fly, Earl Henry attempts to seize Herreras, who defending himself retreats into the Covert follow'd by the Earl. The Queen comes from out the arbor, veiled—stands listening a moment, then lifts up her veil, with folded hands assumes the attitude of Prayer, and after a momentary silence breaks into audible soliloquy.)
The Queen. I pray'd to thee, All-wonderful! And thou Didst make my very Prayer the Instrument, By which thy Providence sav'd me. Th' armed Murderer Who with suspended breath stood listening to me, Groan'd as I spake thy name. In that same moment, O God! thy Mercy shot the swift Remorse That pierc'd his Heart. And like an Elephant	365
Gor'd as he rushes to the first assault, He turn'd at once and trampled his Employers. But hark! (drops her veil)—O God in Heaven! they come again.	370

CHAMOUNY; THE HOUR BEFORE SUNRISE

A Hymn

[Vide ante, p. 376.]

[As published in The Morning Post, Sept. 11, 1802]

[As published in The Morning Post , Sept. 11, 1802]
Hast thou a charm to stay the morning star
In his steep course—so long he seems to pause
On thy bald awful head, O Chamouny!
The Arvè and Arveiron at thy base
Eave ceaselessly; but thou, dread mountain form,	5
Resist from forth thy silent sea of pines
How silently! Around thee, and above,
Deep is the sky, and black: transpicuous, deep,
An ebon mass! Methinks thou piercest it	4.0
As with a wedge! But when I look again,	10
It seems thy own calm home, thy crystal shrine,
Thy habitation from eternity. O dread and silent form! I gaz'd upon thee,
Till thou, still present to my bodily eye,
Did'st vanish from my thought. Entranc'd in pray'r,	15
I worshipp'd the Invisible alone.	10
Yet thou, meantime, wast working on my soul,
E'en like some deep enchanting melody,
So sweet, we know not, we are list'ning to it.
But I awoke, and with a busier mind,	20
And active will self-conscious, offer now
Not, as before, involuntary pray'r
And passive adoration!—
Hand and voice, Awake, awake! and thou, my heart, awake!
Awake ye rocks! Ye forest pines, awake!	25
Green fields, and icy cliffs! All join my hymn!	20
And thou, O silent mountain, sole and bare,
O blacker, than the darkness, all the night,
And visited, all night, by troops of stars,
Or when they climb the sky, or when they sink—	30
Companion of the morning star at dawn,
Thyself Earth's rosy star, and of the dawn
Co-herald! Wake, O wake, and utter praise!
Who sank thy sunless pillars deep in earth?	35
Who fill'd thy countenance with rosy light? Who made thee father of perpetual streams?	33
And you, ye five wild torrents, fiercely glad,
Who call'd you forth from Night and utter Death?
From darkness let you loose, and icy dens,
Down those precipitous, black, jagged rocks	40
For ever shatter'd, and the same for ever!
Who gave you your invulnerable life,
Your strength, your speed, your fury, and your joy,
Unceasing thunder, and eternal foam!	4.5
And who commanded, and the silence came—	45
'Here shall the billows stiffen, and have rest?'
Ye ice-falls! ye that from yon dizzy heights
Adown enormous ravines steeply slope,
Torrents, methinks, that heard a mighty voice,
And stopp'd at once amid their maddest plunge!	50
Motionless torrents! silent cataracts!
Who made you glorious, as the gates of Heav'n,
Beneath the keen full moon? Who bade the sun
Clothe you with rainbows? Who with lovely flow'rs Of living blue spread garlands at your feet?	55
Gop! Gop! The torrents like a shout of nations,	33
Utter! The ice-plain bursts, and answers Gop!
God, sing the meadow-streams with gladsome voice,
And pine groves with their soft, and soul-like sound,
The silent snow-mass, loos'ning, thunders Gop!	60
Ye dreadless flow'rs! that fringe th' eternal frost!
Ye wild goats, bounding by the eagle's nest!
Ye eagles, playmates of the mountain blast!
Ye lightnings, the dread arrows of the clouds! Ye signs and wonders of the element,	65
Utter forth, Gop! and fill the hills with praise!	0.0

And thou, O silent Form, alone and bare, Whom, as I lift again my head bow'd low In adoration, I again behold, And to thy summit upward from thy base Sweep slowly with dim eyes suffus'd by tears, Awake, thou mountain form! rise, like a cloud! Rise, like a cloud of incense, from the earth! Thou kingly spirit thron'd among the hills, Thou dread ambassador from Earth to Heav'n— Great hierarch, tell thou the silent sky, And tell the stars, and tell the rising sun, Earth with her thousand voices calls on God!	70 75

DEJECTION: AN ODE [1076:1]
[Vide ante, p. 362.]
[As first printed in the Morning Post, October 4, 1802.]
"Late, late yestreen I saw the new Moon With the Old Moon in her arms; And I fear, I fear, my Master dear, We shall have a deadly storm."[1076:2]
Ballad of Sir Patrick Spence.

DEJECTION:
AN ODE, WRITTEN APRIL 4, 1802.
I
Well! If the Bard was weather-wise, who made The grand Old ballad of SIR PATRICK SPENCE, This night; so tranquil now, will not go hence Unrous'd by winds, that ply a busier trade Than those, which mould yon cloud, in lazy flakes, Or the dull sobbing draft, that drones and rakes Upon the strings of this Œolian lute, Which better far were mute.	5
For lo! the New Moon, winter-bright! And overspread with phantom light, (With swimming phantom light o'erspread, But rimm'd and circled by a silver thread) I see the Old Moon in her lap, foretelling	10
The coming on of rain and squally blast: And O! that even now the gust were swelling, And the slant night-show'r driving loud and fast! Those sounds which oft have rais'd me, while they aw'd, And sent my soul abroad,	15
Might now perhaps their wonted impulse give, Might startle this dull pain, and make it move and live!	20

II

A grief without a pang, void, dark, and drear, A stifled, drowsy, unimpassion'd grief, Which finds no nat'ral outlet, no relief, In word, or sigh, or tear—

[1076]

[1077]

	To other thoughts by yonder throstle woo'd, All this long eve, so balmy and serene, Have I been gazing on the Western sky,	25
	And its peculiar tint of yellow-green: And still I gaze—and with how blank an eye! And those thin clouds above, in flakes and bars, That give away their motion to the stars; Those stars, that glide behind them, or between, Now sparkling, now bedimm'd, but always seen;	30
	Yon crescent moon, as fix'd as if it grew, In its own cloudless, starless lake of blue, A boat becalm'd! a lovely sky-canoe! I see them all so excellently fair— I see, not feel how beautiful they are!	35
[1078]	III
	My genial spirits fail; And what can these avail, To lift the smoth'ring weight from off my breast? It were a vain endeavour, Though I should gaze for ever	40
	On that green light that lingers in the west: I may not hope from outward forms to win The passion and the life, whose fountains are within.	45
	\mathbf{IV}
	O EDMUND! we receive but what we give, And in our life alone does Nature live: Ours is her wedding-garment, ours her shroud! And would we aught behold, of higher worth, Than that inanimate cold world, allow'd	50
	To the poor loveless ever-anxious crowd, Ah! from the soul itself must issue forth, A light, a glory, a fair luminous cloud Enveloping the earth— And from the soul itself must there be sent	55
	A sweet and potent voice, of its own birth, Of all sweet sounds the life and element! O pure of heart! Thou need'st not ask of me What this strong music in the soul may be? What, and wherein it doth exist, This light, this glory, this fair luminous mist,	60
	This beautiful and beauty-making pow'r? Joy, virtuous Edmund! joy that ne'er was given, Save to the pure, and in their purest hour, Joy, Edmund! is the spirit and the pow'r, Which wedding Nature to us gives in dow'r,	65
	A new Earth and new Heaven, Undream'd of by the sensual and the proud— Joy is the sweet voice, Joy the luminous cloud— We, we ourselves rejoice! And thence flows all that charms or ear or sight,	70
	All melodies the echoes of that voice, All colours a suffusion from that light.	75
[1079]	Yes, dearest Edmund, yes! There was a time that, tho' my path was rough, This joy within me dallied with distress, And all misfortunes were but as the stuff
	Whence fancy made me dreams of happiness: For hope grew round me, like the twining vine, And fruits, and foliage, not my own, seem'd mine. But now afflictions bow me down to earth:	80
	Nor care I, that they rob me of my mirth, But oh! each visitation Suspends what nature gave me at my birth, My shaping spirit of imagination.	85
	[The Sixth and Seventh Stanzas omitted.]

	O wherefore did I let it haunt my mind This dark distressful dream?
	I turn from it, and listen to the wind	90
	Which long has rav'd unnotic'd. What a scream
	Of agony, by torture, lengthen'd out, That lute sent forth! O wind, that rav'st without,
	Bare crag, or mountain-tairn ^[1079:1] , or blasted tree,
	Or pine-grove, whither woodman never clomb,	95
	Or lonely house, long held the witches' home,	55
	Methinks were fitter instruments for thee,
	Mad Lutanist! who, in this month of show'rs,
	Of dark-brown gardens, and of peeping flow'rs,	100
	Mak'st devil's yule, with worse than wintry song,	100
	The blossoms, buds, and tim'rous leaves among. Thou Actor, perfect in all tragic sounds!
	Thou mighty Poet, ev'n to frenzy bold!
[1080]	What tell'st thou now about?
	'Tis of the rushing of a host in rout,	105
	With many groans of men, with smarting wounds—
	At once they groan with pain, and shudder with the cold!
	But hush! there is a pause of deepest silence! And all that noise, as of a rushing crowd,
	With groans, and tremulous shudderings—all is over!	110
	It tells another tale, with sounds less deep and loud—
	A tale of less affright.
	And temper'd with delight,
	As Edmund's self had fram'd the tender lay— 'Tis of a little child,	115
	Upon a lonesome wild	113
	Not far from home; but she hath lost her way—
	And now moans low, in utter grief and fear;
	And now screams loud, and hopes to make her mother hear !
	IX
	'Tis midnight, and small thoughts have I of sleep;	120
	Full seldom may my friend such vigils keep!
	Visit him, gentle Sleep, with wings of healing,
	And may this storm be but a mountain-birth,
	May all the stars hang bright above his dwelling, Silent, as though they watch'd the sleeping Earth!	125
	With light heart may he rise,	123
	Gay fancy, cheerful eyes,
	And sing his lofty song, and teach me to rejoice!
	O EDMUND, friend of my devoutest choice,
	O rais'd from anxious dread and busy care,	130
	By the immenseness of the good and fair Which thou see'st everywhere,
	Joy lifts thy spirit, joy attunes thy voice,
[1081]	To thee do all things live from pole to pole,
	Their life the eddying of thy living soul!	135
	O simple spirit, guided from above,
	O lofty Poet, full of life and love, Brother and friend of my devoutest shoice
	Brother and friend of my devoutest choice, Thus may'st thou ever, evermore rejoice!

FOOTNOTES:

[1076:1] Collated with the text of the poem as sent to W. Sotheby in a letter dated July 19, 1802 (Letters of S. T. C., 1895, i. 379-84).

[1076:2] In the letter of July 19, 1802, the Ode is broken up and quoted in parts or fragments, illustrative of the mind and feelings of the writer. 'Sickness,' he explains, 'first forced me into downright metaphysics. For I believe that by nature I have more of the poet in me. In a poem written during that dejection, to Wordsworth, I thus expressed the thought in language more forcible than harmonious.' Then follow lines 76-87 of the text, followed by lines 87-98 of the text first published in Sibylline Leaves ('For not to think of what I needs must feel,' &c.). He then reverts to the 'introduction of the poem':—'The first lines allude to a stanza in the Ballad of Sir Patrick Spence: "Late, late yestreen I saw the new moon with the old one in her arms: and I fear, I fear, my master dear, there will be a deadly Storm."'

This serves as a motto to lines 1-75 and 129-39 of the first draft of the text. Finally he 'annexes as a fragment a few lines (Il. 88-119) on the "Œolian Lute", it having been introduced in its dronings in the first stanzas.

[1079:1] Tairn, a small lake, generally, if not always, applied to the lakes up in the mountains, and which are the feeders of those in the vallies. This address to the wind will not appear extravagant to those who have heard it at night, in a mountainous country. [Note in M. P.]

LINES COMPOSED, FOR THE GREATER PART ON THE NIGHT, ON WHICH HE FINISHED THE RECITATION OF HIS POEM (IN THIRTEEN BOOKS) CONCERNING THE GROWTH AND HISTORY OF HIS OWN MIND

 Jan^{RY} , 1807. Cole-orton, near Ashby de la Zouch.

O friend! O Teacher! God's great Gift to me!
Into my heart have I receiv'd that Lay,
More than historic, that prophetic Lay,
Wherein (high theme by Thee first sung aright) Of the Foundations and the Building up	5
Of the Foundations and the Building-up Of thy own Spirit, thou hast lov'd to tell	3
What may be told, to th' understanding mind
Revealable; and what within the mind
May rise enkindled. Theme as hard as high!
Of Smiles spontaneous, and mysterious Feard;	10
(The First-born they of Reason, and Twin-birth)
Of Tides obedient to external Force,
And currents self-determin'd, as might seem,
Or by interior Power: of Moments aweful,	4 -
Now in thy hidden Life; and now abroad,	15
Mid festive Crowds, thy Brows too garlanded, A Brother of the Feast: of Fancies fair,
Hyblæan Murmurs of poetic Thought,
Industrious in its Joy, by lilied Streams
Native or outland, Lakes and famous Hills!	20
Of more than Fancy, of the Hope of Man
Amid the tremor of a Realm aglow—
Where France in all her Towns lay vibrating,
Ev'n as a Bark becalm'd on sultry seas
Beneath the voice from Heaven, the bursting Crash	25
Of Heaven's immediate thunder! when no Cloud
Is visible, or Shadow on the Main! Ah! soon night roll'd on night, and every Cloud
Open'd its eye of Fire: and Hope aloft
Now flutter'd, and now toss'd upon the Storm	30
Floating! Of Hope afflicted, and struck down,
Thence summon'd homeward—homeward to thy Heart,
Oft from the Watch-tower of Man's absolute Self,
With Light unwaning on her eyes, to look
Far on—herself a Glory to behold,	35
The Angel of the Vision! Then (last strain!)
Of Duty , chosen Laws controlling choice,
Virtue and Love! An Orphic Tale indeed, A Tale divine of high and passionate Thoughts
To their own music chaunted!
To their own music chaunted.
Ah great Bard!	40
Ere yet that last Swell dying aw'd the Air,
With stedfast ken I view'd thee in the Choir
Of ever-enduring Men. The truly Great
Have all one Age, and from one visible space	4 =
Shed influence: for they, both power and act, Are permanent, and Time is not with them,	45
Save as it worketh for them, they in it.
Nor less a sacred Roll, than those of old,
And to be plac'd, as they, with gradual fame
Among the Archives of mankind, thy Work	50
Makes audible a linked Song of Truth,
Of Truth profound a sweet continuous Song
Not learnt, but native, her own natural Notes!
Dear shall it be to every human Heart.
To me how more than dearest! Me, on whom	55
Comfort from Thee and utterance of thy Love
Came with such heights and depths of Harmony Such sense of Wings uplifting, that the Storm
Scatter'd and whirl'd me, till my Thoughts became
A bodily Tumult! and thy faithful Hopes,	60
Thy Hopes of me, dear Friend! by me unfelt	33
Were troublous to me, almost as a Voice
Familiar once and more than musical
To one cast forth, whose hope had seem'd to die,
A Wanderer with a worn-out heart, [sic]	65
Mid Strangers pining with untended Wounds!

LOVE'S APPARITION AND EVANISHMENT[1087:1]

[Vide ante, p. 488.]

[FIRST DRAFT]

In vain I supplicate the Powers above;
There is no Resurrection for the Love
That, nursed with tenderest care, yet fades away
In the chilled heart by inward self-decay.
Like a lorn Arab old and blind	5
Some caravan had left behind
That sits beside a ruined Well,
And hangs his wistful head aslant,
Some sound he fain would catch—
Suspended there, as it befell,	10
O'er my own vacancy,
And while I seemed to watch
The sickly calm, as were of heart
A place where Hope lay dead,
The spirit of departed Love	15
Stood close beside my bed.
She bent methought to kiss my lips
As she was wont to do.
Alas! 'twas with a chilling breath
That awoke just enough of life in death	20
To make it die anew.

APPENDIX II

ALLEGORIC VISION[1091:1]

A feeling of sadness, a peculiar melancholy, is wont to take possession of me alike in Spring and in Autumn. But in Spring it is the melancholy of Hope: in Autumn it is the melancholy of Resignation. As I was journeying on foot through the Appennine, I fell in with a pilgrim in whom the Spring and the Autumn and the Melancholy of both seemed to have combined. In his discourse there were the freshness and the colours of April:

Qual ramicel a ramo, Tal da pensier pensiero In lui germogliava.

[1092]

But as I gazed on his whole form and figure, I bethought me of the not unlovely decays, both of age and of the late season, in the stately elm, after the clusters have been plucked from its entwining vines, and the vines are as bands of dried withies around its trunk and branches. Even so there was a memory on his smooth and ample forehead, which blended with the dedication of his steady eyes, that still looked—I know not, whether upward, or far onward, or rather to the line of meeting where the sky rests upon the distance. But how may I express that dimness of abstraction which lay on the lustre of the pilgrim's eyes like the flitting tarnish from the breath of a sigh on a silver mirror! and which accorded with their slow and reluctant movement, whenever he turned them to any object on the right hand or on the left? It seemed, methought, as if there lay upon the brightness a shadowy presence of disappointments now unfelt, but never forgotten. It was at once the melancholy of hope and of resignation.

We had not long been fellow-travellers, ere a sudden tempest of wind and rain forced us to seek protection in the vaulted door-way of a lone chapelry; and we sate face to face each on the stone bench alongside the low, weather-stained wall, and as close as possible to the massy door.

After a pause of silence: even thus, said he, like two strangers that have fled to the same shelter from the same storm, not seldom do Despair and Hope meet for the first time in the porch of Death! All extremes meet, I answered; but yours was a strange and visionary thought. The better then doth it beseem both the place and me, he replied. From a Visionary wilt thou hear a Vision? Mark that vivid flash through this 40 torrent of rain! Fire and water. Even here thy adage holds true, and its truth is the moral of my Vision. I entreated him to proceed. Sloping his face toward the arch and yet averting his eye from it, he seemed to seek and prepare his words: till listening to the wind that echoed within the hollow edifice, 45 and to the rain without, Which stole on his thoughts with its two-fold sound, The clash hard by and the murmur all round, [1092:1] he gradually sank away, alike from me and from his own purpose, and amid the gloom of the storm and in the duskiness of that 50 place, he sate like an emblem on a rich man's sepulchre, or like a mourner on the sodded grave of an only one—an aged mourner, who is watching the waned moon and sorroweth not. Starting at length from his brief trance of abstraction, with courtesy and an atoning smile he renewed his discourse, and commenced his 55 During one of those short furloughs from the service of the body, which the soul may sometimes obtain even in this its militant state, I found myself in a vast plain, which I immediately knew to be the Valley of Life. It possessed an 60 astonishing diversity of soils: here was a sunny spot, and there a dark one, forming just such a mixture of sunshine and shade, as we may have observed on the mountains' side in an April day, when the thin broken clouds are scattered over 65 heaven. Almost in the very entrance of the valley stood a large and gloomy pile, into which I seemed constrained to enter. Every part of the building was crowded with tawdry ornaments and fantastic deformity. On every window was portrayed, in glaring and inelegant colours, some horrible tale, 70 or preternatural incident, so that not a ray of light could enter, untinged by the medium through which it passed. The body of the building was full of people, some of them dancing, in and out, in unintelligible figures, with strange ceremonies and antic merriment, while others seemed convulsed with horror, or pining in mad melancholy. Intermingled with these, I observed 75 a number of men, clothed in ceremonial robes, who appeared now to marshal the various groups, and to direct their movements; and now with menacing countenances, to drag some reluctant victim to a vast idol, framed of iron bars intercrossed, which formed at the same time an immense cage, and the shape 80 of a human Colossus. I stood for a while lost in wonder what these things might mean; when lo! one of the directors came up to me, and with a stern and reproachful look bade me uncover my head, for that the place into which I had entered was the temple of 85 the only true Religion, in the holier recesses of which the great Goddess personally resided. Himself too he bade me reverence, as the consecrated minister of her rites. Awestruck by the name of Religion, I bowed before the priest, and humbly 90 and earnestly intreated him to conduct me into her presence. He assented. Offerings he took from me, with mystic sprinklings of water and with salt he purified, and with strange sufflations he exorcised me; and then led me through many a dark and winding alley, the dew-damps of which chilled my flesh, and the hollow echoes under my feet, mingled, methought, 95 with moanings, affrighted me. At length we entered a large hall, without window, or spiracle, or lamp. The asylum and dormitory it seemed of perennial night—only that the walls were brought to the eye by a number of self-luminous inscriptions in 100 letters of a pale sepulchral light, which held strange neutrality with the darkness, on the verge of which it kept its rayless vigil. I could read them, methought; but though each of the words taken separately I seemed to understand, yet when I took them in sentences, they were riddles and incomprehensible. As I stood meditating on these hard sayings, my guide thus addressed 105 me-'Read and believe: these are mysteries!'-At the extremity of the vast hall the Goddess was placed. Her features, blended with darkness, rose out to my view, terrible, yet vacant. I prostrated myself before her, and then retired with my guide, soul-withered, and wondering, and dissatisfied.

[1093]

[1094]

As I re-entered the body of the temple I heard a deep buzz as of discontent. A few whose eyes were bright, and either piercing or steady, and whose ample foreheads, with the weighty bar, ridge-like, above the eyebrows, bespoke observation followed by meditative thought; and a much larger number, who were 115 enraged by the severity and insolence of the priests in exacting their offerings, had collected in one tumultuous group, and with a confused outcry of 'This is the Temple of Superstition!' after much contumely, and turmoil, and cruel maltreatment on all 120 sides, rushed out of the pile: and I, methought, joined them. We speeded from the Temple with hasty steps, and had now nearly gone round half the valley, when we were addressed by a woman, tall beyond the stature of mortals, and with a something more than human in her countenance and mien, which 125 yet could by mortals be only felt, not conveyed by words or intelligibly distinguished. Deep reflection, animated by ardent feelings, was displayed in them: and hope, without its uncertainty, and a something more than all these, which I understood not, but which yet seemed to blend all these into a divine unity 130 of expression. Her garments were white and matronly, and of the simplest texture. We inquired her name. 'My name,' she replied, 'is Religion.' The more numerous part of our company, affrighted by the very sound, and sore from recent impostures or sorceries, hurried onwards and examined no farther. A few of us, struck 135 by the manifest opposition of her form and manners to those of the living Idol, whom we had so recently abjured, agreed to follow her, though with cautious circumspection. She led us to an eminence in the midst of the valley, from the top of which we could command the whole plain, and observe the relation of 140 the different parts to each other, and of each to the whole, and of all to each. She then gave us an optic glass which assisted without contradicting our natural vision, and enabled us to see far beyond the limits of the Valley of Life; though our eye even thus assisted permitted us only to behold a light and 145 a glory, but what we could not descry, save only that it was, and that it was most glorious. And now with the rapid transition of a dream, I had overtaken and rejoined the more numerous party, who had abruptly left us, indignant at the very name of religion. They journied 150 on, goading each other with remembrances of past oppressions, and never looking back, till in the eagerness to recede from the Temple of Superstition they had rounded the whole circle of the valley. And lo! there faced us the mouth of a vast cavern, at the base of a lofty and almost perpendicular rock, the interior 155 side of which, unknown to them and unsuspected, formed the extreme and backward wall of the Temple. An impatient crowd, we entered the vast and dusky cave, which was the only perforation of the precipice. At the mouth of the cave sate two figures; the first, by her dress and gestures, I knew to be 160 Sensuality; the second form, from the fierceness of his demeanour, and the brutal scornfulness of his looks, declared himself to be the monster Blasphemy. He uttered big words, and yet ever and anon I observed that he turned pale at his own 165 courage. We entered. Some remained in the opening of the cave, with the one or the other of its guardians. The rest, and I among them, pressed on, till we reached an ample chamber, that seemed the centre of the rock. The climate of the place was unnaturally cold. In the furthest distance of the chamber sate an old dim-eyed 170 man, poring with a microscope over the torso of a statue which had neither basis, nor feet, nor head; but on its breast was carved Nature! To this he continually applied his glass, and seemed enraptured with the various inequalities which it rendered visible on the seemingly polished surface of the 175 marble.—Yet evermore was this delight and triumph followed by expressions of hatred, and vehement railing against a Being, who yet, he assured us, had no existence. This mystery suddenly recalled to me what I had read in the holiest recess of the temple of Superstition. The old man spake in divers 180 tongues, and continued to utter other and most strange mysteries. Among the rest he talked much and vehemently concerning an infinite series of causes and effects, which he explained to be a string of blind men, the last of whom caught hold of the skirt of the one before him, he of the next, and so on till they were all out of sight; and that they all walked infallibly straight, without making one false step though all were alike blind. Methought I borrowed courage from surprise, and asked him—Who then is at the head to guide them? He looked at me with ineffable contempt, not unmixed with an angry suspicion, and then replied, 'No one.'

[1095]

[1096]

The string of blind men went on for ever without any beginning;
for although one blind man could not move without stumbling, yet infinite blindness supplied the want of sight. I burst into laughter, which instantly turned to terror—for as he started forward in rage, I caught a glimpse of him from behind; and lo! I beheld a monster bi-form and Janus-headed, in the hinder face and shape of which I instantly recognised the dread countenance of Superstition—and in the terror I awoke.

[1091:1] First published in The Courier, Saturday, August 31, 1811: included in 1829, 1834-5, &c. (3 vols.), and in 1844 (1 vol.). Lines 1-56 were first published as part of the 'Introduction' to A Lay Sermon, &c., 1817, pp. xix-xxxi.

The 'Allegoric Vision' dates from August, 1795. It served as a kind of preface or prologue to Coleridge's first Theological Lecture on 'The Origin of Evil. The Necessity of Revelation deduced from the Nature of Man. An Examination and Defence of the Mosaic Dispensation' (see Cottle's Early Recollections, 1837, i. 27). The purport of these Lectures was to uphold the golden mean of Unitarian orthodoxy as opposed to the Church on the one hand, and infidelity or materialism on the other. 'Superstition' stood for and symbolized the Church of England. Sixteen years later this opening portion of an unpublished Lecture was rewritten and printed in The Courier (Aug. 31, 1811), with the heading 'An Allegoric Vision: Superstition, Religion, Atheism'. The attack was now diverted from the Church of England to the Church of Rome. 'Men clad in black robes,' intent on gathering in their Tenths, become 'men clothed in ceremonial robes, who with menacing countenances drag some reluctant victim to a vast idol, framed of iron bars intercrossed which formed at the same time an immense cage, and yet represented the form of a human Colossus. At the base of the Statue I saw engraved the words "To Dominic holy and merciful, the preventer and avenger of soul-murder".' The vision was turned into a political jeu d'esprit levelled at the aiders and abettors of Catholic Emancipation, a measure to which Coleridge was more or less opposed as long as he lived. See Constitution of Church and State, 1830, passim. A third adaptation of the 'Allegorical Vision' was affixed to the Introduction to A Lay Sermon: Addressed to the Higher and Middle Classes, which was published in 1817. The first fifty-six lines, which contain a description of Italian mountain scenery, were entirely new, but the rest of the 'Vision' is an amended and softened reproduction of the preface to the Lecture of 1795. The moral he desires to point is the 'falsehood of extremes'. As Religion is the golden mean between Superstition and Atheism, so the righteous government of a righteous people is the mean between a selfish and oppressive aristocracy, and seditious and unbridled mobrule. A probable 'Source' of the first draft of the 'Vision' is John Aikin's Hill of Science, A Vision, which was included in Elegant Extracts, 1794, ii. 801. In the present issue the text of 1834 has been collated with that of 1817 and 1829, but not (exhaustively) with the MS. (1795), or at all with the Courier version of 1811.

APPENDIX III

[Vide ante p. 237.]

APOLOGETIC PREFACE TO 'FIRE, FAMINE, AND SLAUGHTER'[1097:1]

At the house of a gentleman [1097:2] who by the principles and corresponding virtues of a sincere Christian consecrates a cultivated genius and the favourable accidents of birth, opulence, and splendid connexions, it was my good fortune to meet, in a dinner-party, with more men of celebrity in science or polite 5 literature than are commonly found collected round the same table. In the course of conversation, one of the party reminded an illustrious poet [Scott], then present, of some verses which he had recited that morning, and which had appeared in a newspaper under the name of a War-Ecloque, in which Fire, 10 Famine, and Slaughter were introduced as the speakers. The gentleman so addressed replied, that he was rather surprised that none of us should have noticed or heard of the poem, as it had been, at the time, a good deal talked of in Scotland. It may be easily supposed that my feelings were at this moment 15 not of the most comfortable kind. Of all present, one only [Sir H. Davy] knew, or suspected me to be the author; a man who would have established himself in the first rank of England's living poets[1097:3], if the Genius of our country had not decreed that he should rather be the first in the first rank of its philosophers 20 and scientific benefactors. It appeared the general wish to hear the lines. As my friend chose to remain silent, I chose to follow his example, and Mr. [Scott] recited the poem. This he could do with the better grace, being known to have ever been not only a firm and active Anti-Jacobin and 25 Anti-Gallican, but likewise a zealous admirer of Mr. Pitt, both as a good man and a great statesman. As a poet exclusively, he had been amused with the Eclogue; as a poet he recited it; and in a spirit which made it evident that he would have read and repeated it with the same pleasure had his own name been attached to the imaginary object or agent.

After the recitation our amiable host observed that in his opinion Mr. had over-rated the merits of the poetry; but had they been tenfold greater, they could not have compensated for that malignity of heart which could alone have prompted sentiments so atrocious. I perceived that my illustrious friend became greatly distressed on my account; but fortunately I was able to preserve fortitude and presence of mind enough to take up the subject without exciting even a suspicion how nearly and painfully it interested me.

What follows is the substance of what I then replied, but dilated and in language less colloquial. It was not my intention, I said, to justify the publication, whatever its author's feelings might have been at the time of composing it. That they are calculated to call forth so severe a reprobation from a good man, is not the worst feature of such poems. Their moral deformity is aggravated in proportion to the pleasure which they are capable of affording to vindictive, turbulent, and unprincipled readers. Could it be supposed, though for a moment, that the author seriously wished what he had thus wildly imagined, even the attempt to palliate an inhumanity so monstrous would be an insult to the hearers. But it seemed to me worthy of consideration, whether the mood of mind and the general state of sensations in which a poet produces such vivid and fantastic images, is likely to co-exist, or is even compatible with, that gloomy and deliberate ferocity which a serious wish to realize them would pre-suppose. It had been often observed, and all my experience tended to confirm the observation, that prospects of pain and evil to others, and in general all deep feelings of revenge, are commonly expressed in a few words, ironically tame, and mild. The mind under so direful and fiend-like an influence seems to take a morbid pleasure in contrasting the intensity of its wishes and feelings with the slightness or levity of the expressions by which they are hinted; and indeed feelings so intense and solitary, if they were not precluded (as in almost all cases they would be) by a constitutional activity of fancy and association, and by the specific joyousness combined with it, would assuredly themselves preclude such activity. Passion, in its own quality, is the antagonist of action; though in an ordinary and natural degree the former alternates with the latter, and thereby revives and strengthens it. But the more intense and insane the passion is, the fewer and the more fixed are the correspondent forms and notions. A rooted hatred, an inveterate thirst of revenge, is a sort of madness, and still eddies round its favourite object, and exercises as it were a perpetual tautology of mind in thoughts and words which admit of no adequate substitutes. Like a fish in a globe of glass, it moves restlessly round and round the scanty circumference, which it cannot leave without losing its vital element.

There is a second character of such imaginary representations as spring from a real and earnest desire of evil to another. which we often see in real life, and might even anticipate from the nature of the mind. The images, I mean, that a vindictive man places before his imagination, will most often be taken from the realities of life: they will be images of pain and suffering which he has himself seen inflicted on other men, and which he can fancy himself as inflicting on the object of his hatred. I will suppose that we had heard at different times two common sailors, each speaking of some one who had wronged or offended him: that the first with apparent violence had devoted every part of his adversary's body and soul to all the horrid phantoms and fantastic places that ever Quevedo dreamt of, and this in a rapid flow of those outrageous and wildly combined execrations, which too often with our lower classes serve for escape-valves to carry off the excess of their passions, as so much superfluous steam that would endanger the vessel if it were retained. The other, on the contrary, with that sort of calmness of tone which is to the ear what the paleness of anger is to the eye, shall simply say, 'If I chance to be made boatswain, as I hope I soon shall, and can but once get that fellow under my hand (and I shall be upon the watch for him), I'll tickle his pretty skin! I won't hurt him! oh no! I'll only cut the - to the liver!' I dare appeal to all present, which of the two they would regard as the least deceptive symptom of deliberate malignity? nay, whether it would surprise them to see the first fellow, an hour or two afterwards, cordially shaking hands with the very man the fractional parts of whose body and soul he had been so charitably disposing of; or even perhaps risking his life for him? What language Shakespeare considered characteristic of malignant disposition we see in the speech of the good-natured Gratiano, who spoke 'an infinite deal of nothing more than any man in all Venice';	105 110 ——Too wild, too rude and bold of voice!

the skipping spirit, whose thoughts and words reciprocally ran away with each other;	115
———O be them damn'd, inexorable dog! And for thy life let justice be accused!
and the wild fancies that follow, contrasted with Shylock's tranquil 'I stand here for Law'.
Or, to take a case more analogous to the present subject, should we hold it either fair or charitable to believe it to have been Dante's serious wish that all the persons mentioned by him (many recently departed, and some even alive at the time,) should actually suffer the fantastic and horrible punishments to	120
which he has sentenced them in his Hell and Purgatory? Or what shall we say of the passages in which Bishop Jeremy Taylor anticipates the state of those who, vicious themselves, have been the cause of vice and misery to their fellow-creatures?	125
Could we endure for a moment to think that a spirit, like Bishop Taylor's, burning with Christian love; that a man constitutionally overflowing with pleasurable kindliness; who scarcely even in a casual illustration introduces the image of woman, child, or bird, but he embalms the thought with so	130
rich a tenderness, as makes the very words seem beauties and fragments of poetry from Euripides or Simonides;—can we endure to think, that a man so natured and so disciplined, did at the time of composing this horrible picture, attach a sober feeling of reality to the phrases? or that he would have	135
described in the same tone of justification, in the same luxuriant flow of phrases, the tortures about to be inflicted on a living individual by a verdict of the Star-Chamber? or the still more atrocious sentences executed on the Scotch anti-prelatists and schismatics, at the command, and in some instances under the	140
very eye of the Duke of Lauderdale, and of that wretched bigot who afterwards dishonoured and forfeited the throne of Great Britain? Or do we not rather feel and understand, that these violent words were mere bubbles, flashes and electrical apparitions, from the magic cauldron of a fervid and ebullient fancy, constantly fuelled by an unexampled opulence of language?	145
Were I now to have read by myself for the first time the poem in question, my conclusion, I fully believe, would be, that the writer must have been some man of warm feelings and active fancy; that he had painted to himself the circumstances that	150 accompany war in so many vivid and yet fantastic forms, as proved that neither the images nor the feelings were the result of observation, or in any way derived from realities. I should judge that they were the product of his own seething imagination, and therefore impregnated with that pleasurable exultation	155 which is experienced in all energetic exertion of intellectual power; that in the same mood he had generalized the causes of the war, and then personified the abstract and christened it by the name which he had been accustomed to hear most often associated with its management and measures. I should guess	160
that the minister was in the author's mind at the moment of composition as completely $\dot{\alpha}$ παθης, $\dot{\alpha}$ ναιμόσαρκος, as Anacreon's grasshopper, and that he had as little notion of a real person of flesh and blood,	165
Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb, [Paradise Lost, II. 668.]
as Milton had in the grim and terrible phantom (half person, half allegory) which he has placed at the gates of Hell. I concluded by observing, that the poem was not calculated to excite passion in any mind, or to make any impression except on poetic readers; and that from the culpable levity betrayed	170

[1100]

[1101]

wit with allegoric personification, in the allusion to the most fearful of thoughts, I should conjecture that the 'rantin' Bardie', instead of really believing, much less wishing, the fate spoken of in the last line, in application to any human individual, would shrink from passing the verdict even on the Devil himself, and exclaim with poor Burns,	175
But fare ye weel, auld Nickie-ben! Oh! wad ye tak a thought an' men! Ye aiblins might—I dinna ken— Still hae a stake—
I'm wae to think upon yon den, Ev'n for your sake! I need not say that these thoughts, which are here dilated,	185
were in such a company only rapidly suggested. Our kind host smiled, and with a courteous compliment observed, that the defence was too good for the cause. My voice faltered a little, for I was somewhat agitated; though not so much on my own account as for the uneasiness that so kind and friendly a man would feel from the thought that he had been the	190 occasion of distressing me. At length I brought out these words: 'I must now confess, sir! that I am author of that poem. It was written some years ago. I do not attempt to justify my past self, young as I then was; but as little as I would now write a similar poem, so far was I even then from imagining that the lines would be taken as more or less than a sport	195
of fancy. At all events, if I know my own heart, there was never a moment in my existence in which I should have been more ready, had Mr. Pitt's person been in hazard, to interpose my own body, and defend his life at the risk of my own.'	200
I have prefaced the poem with this anecdote, because to have printed it without any remark might well have been understood as implying an unconditional approbation on my part, and this after many years' consideration. But if it be asked why I republished it at all, I answer, that the poem had been attributed	205
at different times to different other persons; and what I had dared beget, I thought it neither manly nor honourable not to dare father. From the same motives I should have published perfect copies of two poems, the one entitled The Devil's Thoughts, and the other, The Two Round Spaces on the Tombstone, but that the three first stanzas of the former, which	210 were worth all the rest of the poem, and the best stanza of the remainder, were written by a friend [Southey] of deserved celebrity; and because there are passages in both which might have given offence to the religious feelings of certain readers. I myself indeed see no reason why vulgar superstitions and	215 absurd conceptions that deform the pure faith of a Christian should possess a greater immunity from ridicule than stories of witches, or the fables of Greece and Rome. But there are those who deem it profaneness and irreverence to call an ape an ape,	220
if it but wear a monk's cowl on its head; and I would rather reason with this weakness than offend it.	225
The passage from Jeremy Taylor to which I referred is found in his second Sermon on Christ's Advent to Judgment; which is likewise the second in his year's course of sermons. Among many remarkable passages of the same character in those discourses, I have selected this as the most so. 'But when this Lion of the tribe of Judah shall appear, then Justice shall strike, and Mercy shall not hold her hands; she shall strike sore strokes, and Pity shall not break the blow. As there are treasures of	230
good things, so hath God a treasure of wrath and fury, and scourges and scorpions; and then shall be produced the shame of Lust and the malice of Envy, and the groans of the oppressed and the persecutions of the saints, and the cares of Covetousness and the troubles of Ambition, and the insolencies of traitors and the violences of rebels, and the rage of anger and the uneasiness	235 of impatience, and the restlessness of unlawful desires; and by this time the monsters and diseases will be numerous and intolerable, when God's heavy hand shall press the sanies and the intolerableness, the obliquity and the unreasonableness, the amazement and the disorder, the smart and the sorrow, the	240 guilt and the punishment, out from all our sins, and pour them into one chalice, and mingle them with an infinite wrath, and make the wicked drink off all the vengeance, and force it down	245

their unwilling throats with the violence of devils and accursed spirits.'

That this Tartarean drench displays the imagination rather 250 than the discretion of the compounder; that, in short, this passage and others of the same kind are in a bad taste, few will deny [1103] at the present day. It would, doubtless, have more behoved the good bishop not to be wise beyond what is written on 255 a subject in which Eternity is opposed to Time, and a Death threatened, not the negative, but the positive Opposite of Life; a subject, therefore, which must of necessity be indescribable to the human understanding in our present state. But I can neither find nor believe that it ever occurred to any reader to ground on such passages a charge against Bishop Taylor's 260 humanity, or goodness of heart. I was not a little surprised therefore to find, in the Pursuits of Literature and other works, so horrible a sentence passed on Milton's moral character, for a passage in his prose writings, as nearly parallel to this of Taylor's as two passages can well be conceived to be. All his 265 merits, as a poet, forsooth—all the glory of having written the Paradise Lost, are light in the scale, nay, kick the beam, compared with the atrocious malignity of heart, expressed in the offensive paragraph. I remembered, in general, that Milton had concluded one of his works on Reformation, written in the 270 fervour of his youthful imagination, in a high poetic strain, that wanted metre only to become a lyrical poem. I remembered that in the former part he had formed to himself a perfect ideal of human virtue, a character of heroic, disinterested zeal and devotion for Truth, Religion, and public Liberty, in act and in  275 suffering, in the day of triumph and in the hour of martyrdom. Such spirits, as more excellent than others, he describes as having a more excellent reward, and as distinguished by a transcendant glory: and this reward and this glory he displays and 280 particularizes with an energy and brilliance that announced the Paradise Lost as plainly, as ever the bright purple clouds in the east announced the coming of the Sun. Milton then passes to the gloomy contrast, to such men as from motives of selfish ambition and the lust of personal aggrandizement should, against 285 their own light, persecute truth and the true religion, and wilfully abuse the powers and gifts entrusted to them, to bring vice, blindness, misery and slavery, on their native country, on the very country that had trusted, enriched and honoured them. Such beings, after that speedy and appropriate removal from 290 their sphere of mischief which all good and humane men must of course desire, will, he takes for granted by parity of reason, meet with a punishment, an ignominy, and a retaliation, as much severer than other wicked men, as their guilt and its consequences were more enormous. His description of this 295 imaginary punishment presents more distinct pictures to the fancy than the extract from Jeremy Taylor; but the thoughts in the latter are incomparably more exaggerated and horrific. All this I knew; but I neither remembered, nor by reference [1104] and careful re-perusal could discover, any other meaning, either in Milton or Taylor, but that good men will be rewarded, and 300 the impenitent wicked, punished, in proportion to their dispositions and intentional acts in this life; and that if the punishment of the least wicked be fearful beyond conception, all words and descriptions must be so far true, that they must fall short of the punishment that awaits the transcendantly wicked. Had 305 Milton stated either his ideal of virtue, or of depravity, as an individual or individuals actually existing? Certainly not! Is this representation worded historically, or only hypothetically? Assuredly the latter! Does he express it as his own wish that after death they should suffer these tortures? or as 310 a general consequence, deduced from reason and revelation, that such will be their fate? Again, the latter only! His wish is expressly confined to a speedy stop being put by Providence to their power of inflicting misery on others! But did he name or refer to any persons living or dead? No! But the 315 calumniators of Milton daresay (for what will calumny not dare say?) that he had Laud and Strafford in his mind, while writing of remorseless persecution, and the enslavement of a free country from motives of selfish ambition. Now what if a stern anti-prelatist should daresay, that in speaking of the insolencies of 320 traitors and the violences of rebels, Bishop Taylor must have individualised in his mind Hampden, Hollis, Pym, Fairfax, Ireton, and Milton? And what if he should take the liberty of concluding, that, in the after-description, the Bishop was feeding and feasting his party-hatred, and with those individuals before 325 the eyes of his imagination enjoying, trait by trait, horror after horror, the picture of their intolerable agonies? Yet this bigot would have an equal right thus to criminate the one good and great man, as these men have to criminate the other. 330 Milton has said, and I doubt not but that Taylor with equal truth could have said it, 'that in his whole life he never spake against a man even that his skin should be grazed.' He asserted this when one of his opponents (either Bishop Hall or his nephew) had called upon the women and children in the streets to take up stones and stone him (Milton). It is known that 335 Milton repeatedly used his interest to protect the royalists; but even at a time when all lies would have been meritorious against him, no charge was made, no story pretended, that he had ever directly or indirectly engaged or assisted in their persecution. Oh! methinks there are other and far better feelings 340 which should be acquired by the perusal of our great elder writers. When I have before me, on the same table, the works of Hammond and Baxter; when I reflect with what joy and dearness their blessed spirits are now loving each other; it seems a mournful thing that their names should be perverted to 345 [1105] an occasion of bitterness among us, who are enjoying that happy mean which the human too-much on both sides was perhaps necessary to produce. 'The tangle of delusions which stifled and distorted the growing tree of our well-being has been torn 350 away; the parasite-weeds that fed on its very roots have been plucked up with a salutary violence. To us there remain only quiet duties, the constant care, the gradual improvement, the cautious unhazardous labours of the industrious though contented gardener—to prune, to strengthen, to engraft, and one 355 by one to remove from its leaves and fresh shoots the slug and the caterpillar. But far be it from us to undervalue with light and senseless detraction the conscientious hardihood of our predecessors, or even to condemn in them that vehemence, to which the blessings it won for us leave us now neither 360 temptation nor pretext. We antedate the feelings, in order to criminate the authors, of our present liberty, light and toleration.' (The Friend, No. IV. Sept. 7, 1809.) [1818, i. 105.] If ever two great men might seem, during their whole lives, to have moved in direct opposition, though neither of them has at any time introduced the name of the other, Milton and 365 Jeremy Taylor were they. The former commenced his career by attacking the Church-Liturgy and all set forms of prayer. The latter, but far more successfully, by defending both. Milton's next work was against the Prelacy and the then existing Church-Government—Taylor's in vindication and 370 support of them. Milton became more and more a stern republican, or rather an advocate for that religious and moral aristocracy which, in his day, was called republicanism, and which, even more than royalism itself, is the direct antipode of modern jacobinism. 375 Taylor, as more and more sceptical concerning the fitness of men in general for power, became more and more attached to the prerogatives of monarchy. From Calvinism, with a still decreasing respect for Fathers, Councils, and for Church-antiquity in general, Milton seems to have ended in an indifference, if not a dislike, to all forms of ecclesiastic government, and to 380 have retreated wholly into the inward and spiritual church-communion of his own spirit with the Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world. Taylor, with a growing reverence for authority, an increasing sense of the insufficiency of the Scriptures without the aids of tradition and the consent of 385 authorized interpreters, advanced as far in his approaches (not indeed to Popery, but) to Roman-Catholicism, as a conscientious minister of the English Church could well venture. Milton would be and would utter the same to all on all occasions: he would tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the 390 truth. Taylor would become all things to all men, if by any [1106] means he might benefit any; hence he availed himself, in his popular writings, of opinions and representations which stand often in striking contrast with the doubts and convictions expressed in his more philosophical works. He appears, indeed, 395 not too severely to have blamed that management of truth (istam falsitatem dispensativam) authorized and exemplified by almost all the fathers: Integrum omnino doctoribus et coetus Christiani antistitibus esse, ut dolos versent, falsa veris intermisceant et imprimis religionis hostes fallant, dummodo 400 veritatis commodis et utilitati inserviant. The same antithesis might be carried on with the elements of their several intellectual powers. Milton, austere, condensed, imaginative, supporting his truth by direct enunciation of lofty 405 moral sentiment and by distinct visual representations, and in the same spirit overwhelming what he deemed falsehood by moral denunciation and a succession of pictures appalling or repulsive. In his prose, so many metaphors, so many allegorical miniatures. Taylor, eminently discursive, accumulative, and (to use one of his own words) agglomerative; still more 410 rich in images than Milton himself, but images of fancy, and presented to the common and passive eye, rather than to the eye of the imagination. Whether supporting or assailing, he makes his way either by argument or by appeals to the 415 affections, unsurpassed even by the schoolmen in subtlety, agility, and logic wit, and unrivalled by the most rhetorical of the fathers in the copiousness and vividness of his expressions and illustrations. Here words that convey feelings, and words that flash images, and words of abstract notion, flow together, and whirl and rush onward like a stream, at once rapid and full 420 of eddies; and yet still interfused here and there we see a tongue or islet of smooth water, with some picture in it of earth or sky, landscape or living group of quiet beauty. Differing then so widely and almost contrariantly, wherein 425 did these great men agree? wherein did they resemble each other? In genius, in learning, in unfeigned piety, in blameless purity of life, and in benevolent aspirations and purposes for the moral and temporal improvement of their fellow-creatures! Both of them wrote a Latin Accidence, to render education 430 more easy and less painful to children; both of them composed hymns and psalms proportioned to the capacity of common congregations; both, nearly at the same time, set the glorious example of publicly recommending and supporting general toleration, and the liberty both of the Pulpit and the press! In the writings of neither shall we find a single sentence, like 435 those meek deliverances to God's mercy, with which Laud accompanied his votes for the mutilations and loathsome dungeoning of Leighton and others!—nowhere such a pious prayer as we find in Bishop Hall's memoranda of his own life, concerning 440 the subtle and witty atheist that so grievously perplexed and gravelled him at Sir Robert Drury's till he prayed to the Lord to remove him, and behold! his prayers were heard: for shortly afterward this Philistine-combatant went to London, and there perished of the plague in great misery! In short, nowhere shall we find the least approach, in the lives and 445 writings of John Milton or Jeremy Taylor, to that guarded gentleness, to that sighing reluctance, with which the holy brethren of the Inquisition deliver over a condemned heretic to the civil magistrate, recommending him to mercy, and hoping that the magistrate will treat the erring brother with 450 all possible mildness!—the magistrate who too well knows what would be his own fate if he dared offend them by acting on their recommendation. The opportunity of diverting the reader from myself to characters more worthy of his attention, has led me far beyond my 455 first intention; but it is not unimportant to expose the false zeal which has occasioned these attacks on our elder patriots. It has been too much the fashion first to personify the Church of England, and then to speak of different individuals, who in different ages have been rulers in that church, as if in some 460 strange way they constituted its personal identity. Why should a clergyman of the present day feel interested in the defence of Laud or Sheldon? Surely it is sufficient for the warmest partisan of our establishment that he can assert with truth,—when our Church persecuted, it was on mistaken principles 465 held in common by all Christendom; and at all events, far less culpable was this intolerance in the Bishops, who were maintaining the existing laws, than the persecuting spirit afterwards shewn by their successful opponents, who had no such excuse, and who should have been taught mercy by their own sufferings, 470 and wisdom by the utter failure of the experiment in their own case. We can say that our Church, apostolical in its faith, primitive in its ceremonies, unequalled in its liturgical forms; that our Church, which has kindled and displayed more bright and

[1107]

	burning lights of genius and learning than all other protestant	4	475 churches since the reformation, was (with the single exception		1,0 of the times of Laud and Sheldon) least intolerant, when all Christians unhappily deemed a species of intolerance their religious duty; that Bishops of our church were among the first that contended against this error; and finally, that since the	2	480
[1108]	reformation, when tolerance became a fashion, the Church of England in a tolerating age, has shewn herself eminently tolerant, and far more so, both in spirit and in fact, than many of her most bitter opponents, who profess to deem toleration itself an insult on the rights of mankind! As to	4	485 myself, who not only know the Church-Establishment to be tolerant, but who see in it the greatest, if not the sole safe bulwark of toleration. I feel no necessity of defending or

FOOTNOTES:

- [1097:1] First published in Sibylline Leaves in 1817: included in 1828, 1829, and 1834. The 'Apologetic Preface' must have been put together in 1815, with a view to publication in the volume afterwards named Sibylline Leaves, but the incident on which it turns most probably took place in the spring of 1803, when both Scott and Coleridge were in London. Davy writing to Poole, May 1, 1803, says that he generally met Coleridge during his stay in town, 'in the midst of large companies, where he was the image of power and activity,' and Davy, as we know, was one of Sotheby's guests. In a letter to Mrs. Fletcher dated Dec. 18, 1830 (?), Scott tells the story in his own words, but throws no light on date or period. The implied date (1809) in Morritt's report of Dr. Howley's conversation (Lockhart's Life of Scott, 1837, ii. 245) is out of the question, as Coleridge did not leave the Lake Country between Sept. 1808 and October 1810. Coleridge set great store by 'his own stately account of this lionshow' (ibid.). In a note in a MS. copy of Sibylline Leaves presented to his son Derwent he writes:—'With the exception of this slovenly sentence (Il. 109-19) I hold this preface to be my happiest effort in prose composition.'

APPENDIX IV

PROSE VERSIONS OF POEMS, ETC.

Why is my Love like the Sun?

1. The Dawn = the presentiment of my Love.

No voice as yet had made the air Be music with thy name: yet why That obscure [over aching] Hope: that yearning Sigh? That sense of Promise everywhere? Beloved! flew thy spirit by?

- 2. The Sunrise = the suddenness, the all-at-once of Love—and the first silence—the beams of Light fall first on the distance, the interspace still dark.
- 3. The Cheerful Morning—the established Day-light universal.
- 4. The Sunset—who can behold it, and think of the Sun-rise? It takes all the thought to itself. The Moon-reflected Light-soft, melancholy, warmthless-the absolute purity (nay, it is always pure, but), the incorporeity of Love in absence—Love per se is a Potassium—it can subsist by itself, tho' in presence it has a natural and necessary combination with the comburent principle. All other Lights (the fixed Stars) not borrowed from the absent Sun-Lights for other worlds, not for me. I see them and admire, but they irradiate nothing.

21 Feb. 1825.

My Dear Friend

I have often amused myself with the thought of a self-conscious Looking-glass, and the various metaphorical applications of such a fancy—and this morning it struck across the Eolian Harp of my Brain that there was something pleasing and emblematic (of what I did not distinctly make out) in two such Looking-glasses fronting, each seeing the other in itself, and itself in the other. Have you ever noticed the Vault or snug little Apartment which the Spider spins and weaves for itself, by spiral threads round and round, and sometimes with strait lines, so that its lurking parlour or withdrawing-room is an oblong square? This too connected itself in my mind with the melancholy truth, that as we grow older, the World (alas! how often it happens that the less we love it, the more we care for it, the less reason we have to value its Shews, the more anxious are we about themalas! how often do we become more and more loveless, as Love which can outlive all change save a change with regard to itself, and all loss save the loss of its Reflex, is more needed to sooth us and alone is able so to do!) What was I saying? O, I was adverting to the fact that as we advance in years, the World, that spidery Witch, spins its threads narrower and narrower, still closing on us, till at last it shuts us up within four walls, walls of flues and films, windowless—and well if there be sky-lights, and a small opening left for the Light from above. I do not know that I have anything to add, except to remind you, that pheer or phere for Mate, Companion, Counterpart, is a word frequently used by Spencer (sic) and Herbert, and the Poets generally, who wrote before the Restoration (1660), before I say that this premature warm and sunny day, antedating Spring, called forth the following.

Strain in the manner of G. Herbert, which might be entitled The Alone Most Dear: a Complaint of Jacob to Rachel as in the tenth year of her service he saw in her or fancied that he saw symptoms of Alienation. N.B. The Thoughts and Images being modernized and turned into English.

(It was fancy) [Pencil note by Mrs. Gillman.] All Nature seems at work. Snails Slugs leave their lair; The Bees are stirring; Birds are on the wing; And Winter slumb'ring in the open air Wears on his smiling face a dream of Spring. But I the while, the sole unbusy thing. Nor honey make, nor pair, nor build, nor sing. Yet well I ken the banks where [1111:1] Amaranths blow Have traced the fount whence Streams of Nectar flow. Bloom, O ye Amaranths! bloom for whom ye may-For me ye bloom not! Glide, rich streams! away! ? Lip unbrighten'd, wreathless B. With unmoist Lip and wreathless Brow I stroll; And would you learn the spells that drowse my soul? Work without Hope draws nectar in a sieve; And Hope without an Object cannot live.

I speak in figures, inward thoughts and woes Interpreting by Shapes and outward shews:

Where daily nearer me with magic Ties, What time and where, (wove close with magic Ties Line over line, and thickning as they rise) The World her spidery threads on all sides spin Side answ'ring side with narrow interspace, My Faith (say I; I and my Faith are one) Hung, as a Mirror, there! And face to face (For nothing else there was between or near) One Sister Mirror hid the dreary Wall,

I lost my object and my inmost All—-Faith in the Faith of The Alone Most Dear!

[1111]

Call the World spider: and at fancy's touch Thought becomes image and I see it such. With viscous masonry of films and threads Tough as the nets in Indian Forests found It blends the Waller's and the Weaver's trades And soon the tent-like Hangings touch the ground A dusky chamber that excludes the day But cease the prelude and resume the lay

Note to Line 34 of the Joan of Arc Book II. 1796, pp. 41, 42.

Line 34. Sir Isaac Newton at the end of the last edition of his Optics supposes that a very subtile and elastic fluid, which he calls aether, is diffused thro' the pores of gross bodies, as well as thro' the open spaces that are void of gross matter: he supposes it to pierce all bodies, and to touch their least particles, acting on them with a force proportional to their number or to the matter of the body on which it acts. He supposes likewise, that it is rarer in the pores of bodies than in open spaces, and even rarer in small pores and dense bodies, than in large pores and rare bodies; and also that its density increases in receding from gross matter; so for instance as to be greater at the 1/100 of an inch from the surface of any body, than at its surface; and so on. To the action of this aether he ascribes the attractions of gravitation and cohoesion, the attraction and repulsion of electrical bodies, the mutual influences of bodies and light upon each other, the effects and communication of heat, and the performance of animal sensation and motion. David Hartley, from whom this account of aether is chiefly borrowed, makes it the instrument of propagating those vibrations or configurative motions which are ideas. It appears to me, no hypothesis ever involved so many contradictions; for how can the same fluid be both dense and rare in the same body at one time? Yet in the Earth as gravitating to the Moon, it must be very rare; and in the Earth as gravitating to the Sun, it must be very dense. For as Andrew Baxter well observes, it doth not appear sufficient to account how the fluid may act with a force proportional to the body to which another is impelled, to assert that it is rarer in great bodies than in small ones; it must be further asserted that this fluid is rarer or denser in the same body, whether small or great, according as the body to which that is impelled is itself small or great. But whatever may be the solidity of this objection, the following seems unanswerable:

If every particle thro' the whole solidity of a heavy body receive its impulse from the particles of this fluid, it should seem that the fluid itself must be as dense as the very densest heavy body, gold for instance; there being as many impinging particles in the one, as there are gravitating particles in the other which receive their gravitation by being impinged upon: so that, throwing gold or any heavy body upward, against the impulse of this fluid, would be like throwing gold thro' gold; and as this aether must be equally diffused over the whole sphere of its activity, it must be as dense when it impels cork as when it impels gold, so that to throw a piece of cork upward, would be as if we endeavoured to make cork penetrate a medium as dense as gold; and tho' we were to adopt the extravagant opinions which have been advanced concerning the progression of pores, yet however porous we suppose a body, if it be not all pore, the argument holds equally, the fluid must be as dense as the body in order to give every particle its impulse.

It has been asserted that Sir Isaac Newton's philosophy leads in its consequences to Atheism: perhaps not without reason. For if matter, by any powers or properties given to it, can produce the order of the visible world and even generate thought; why may it not have possessed such properties by inherent right? and where is the necessity of a God? matter is according to the mechanic philosophy capable of acting most wisely and most beneficently without Wisdom or Benevolence; and what more does the Atheist assert? if matter possess those properties, why might it not have possessed them from all eternity? Sir Isaac Newton's Deity seems to be alternately operose and indolent; to have delegated so much power as to make it inconceivable what he can have reserved. He is dethroned by Vice-regent second causes.

We seem placed here to acquire a knowledge of effects. Whenever we would pierce into the Adyta of Causation, we bewilder ourselves; and all that laborious Conjecture can do, is to fill up the gaps of imagination. We are restless, because invisible things are not the objects of vision—and philosophical systems, for the most part, are received not for their Truth, but in proportion as they attribute to Causes a susceptibility of being seen, whenever our visual organs shall have become sufficiently powerful.

Ode on the Departing Year, 1796, pp. [3]-4.

To Thomas Poole, of Stowey.

My Dear Friend—

Soon after the commencement of this month, the Editor of the Cambridge Intelligencer (a newspaper conducted with so much ability, and such unmixed and fearless zeal for the interests of Piety and Freedom, that I cannot but think my poetry honoured by being permitted to appear in it) requested me, by Letter, to furnish him with some Lines for the last day of this Year. I promised him that I would make the attempt; but almost immediately after, a rheumatic complaint seized on my head, and continued to prevent the possibility of poetic composition till within the last three days. So in the course of the last three days the following Ode was produced. In general, when an Author informs the Public that his production was struck off in a great hurry, he offers an insult, not an excuse. But I trust that the present case is an exception, and that the peculiar circumstances which obliged me to write with such unusual rapidity give a propriety to my professions of it: nec nunc eam apud te jacto, sed et ceteris indico; ne quis asperiore limâ carmen examinet, et a confuso scriptum et quod frigidum erat ni statim traderem. [1113:2] (I avail myself of the words of Statius, and hope that I shall likewise be able to say of any weightier publication, what he has declared of his Thebaid, that it had been tortured [1113:3] with a laborious Polish.)

For me to discuss the literary merits of this hasty composition were idle and presumptuous. If it be found to possess that impetuosity of Transition, and that Precipitation of Fancy and Feeling, which are the essential excellencies of the sublimer Ode, its deficiency in less important respects will be easily pardoned by those from whom alone praise could give me pleasure: and whose minuter criticisms will be disarmed by the reflection, that these Lines were conceived 'not in the soft obscurities of Retirement, or under the Shelter of Academic Groves, but amidst inconvenience and distraction, in sickness and in sorrow'. [1114:1] I am more anxious lest the moral spirit of the Ode should be mistaken. You, I am sure, will not fail to recollect that among the Ancients, the Bard and the Prophet were one and the same character; and you know, that although I prophesy curses, I pray fervently for blessings. Farewell, Brother of my Soul!

——O ever found the same, And trusted and belov'd![1114:2]

Never without an emotion of honest pride do I subscribe myself

Your grateful and affectionate friend,

S. T. COLERIDGE.

Preface to the MS. of Osorio.

[Vide ante, p. 519.]

In this sketch of a tragedy, all is imperfect, and much obscure. Among other equally great defects (millstones round the slender neck of its merits) it presupposes a long story; and this long story, which yet is necessary to the complete understanding of the play, is not half told. Albert had sent a letter informing his family that he should arrive about such a time by ship; he was shipwrecked; and wrote a private letter to Osorio, informing him alone of this accident, that he might not shock Maria. Osorio destroyed the letter, and sent assassins to meet Albert. . . Worse than all, the growth of Osorio's character is nowhere explained—and yet I had most clear and psychologically accurate ideas of the whole of it. . . A man, who from constitutional calmness of appetites, is seduced into pride and the love of power, by these into misanthropism, or rather a contempt of mankind, and from thence, by the co-operation of envy, and a curiously modified love for a beautiful female (which is nowhere developed in the play), into a most atrocious guilt. A man who is in truth a weak man, yet always duping himself into the belief that he has a soul of iron. Such were some of my leading ideas.

In short the thing is but an embryo, and whilst it remains in manuscript, which it is destined to do, the critic would judge unjustly who should call it a miscarriage. It furnished me with a most important lesson, namely, that to have conceived strongly, does not always imply the power of successful execution. S. T. C.

ADAPTATIONS

For a critical study of Coleridge's alterations in the text of the quotations from seventeenth-century poets, which were inserted in the Biographia Literaria (2 vols., 1817), or were prefixed as mottoes to Chapters in the rifacimento of The Friend (3 vols., 1818), see an article by J. D Campbell entitled 'Coleridge's Quotations,' which was published in the Athenæum, August 20, 1892, and 'Adaptations', P. W., 1893, pp. 471-4. Most of these textual alterations or garblings were noted by H. N. Coleridge in an edition of The Friend published in 1837; Mr. Campbell was the first to collect and include the mottoes and quotations in a sub-section of Coleridge's Poetical Works. Three poems, (1) 'An Elegy Imitated from Akenside', (2) 'Farewell to Love', (3) 'Mutual Passion altered and modernized from an Old Poet', may be reckoned as 'Adaptations'. The first and third of these composite productions lay no claim to originality, whilst the second, 'Farewell to Love', which he published anonymously in The Courier, September 27, 1806, was not included by Coleridge in Sibylline Leaves, or in 1828, 1829, 1834. For (1) vide ante, p. 69, and post, Read:—p. 1123; for (2) ante, p. 402; and for (3) vide post, p. 1118.

The same quotation from Lord Brooke is used to illustrate Aphorism xvii, 'Inconsistency,' Aids to Reflection, 1825, p. 93 (with the word 'both', substituted for 'still' in line 1). On the Immortality of the Soul

(Sect. iv. Stanzas 12-14.)

Doubtless, this could not be, but that she turns Bodies to spirits, by sublimation strange; As fire converts to fire the things it burns; As we our meats into our nature change.

From their gross matter she abstracts the forms, And draws a kind of quintessence from things; Which to her proper nature she transforms, This doth she, when, from things particular, She doth abstract the universal kinds, Which bodiless and immaterial are, And can be only lodg'd within our minds.

ECLOGUE, 'ON UNWORTHY WISDOM'

So reclused Hermits oftentimes do know More of Heaven's glory than a worldly can: As Man is of the World, the Heart of Man Is an Epitome of God's great Book Of Creatures, and Men need no further look.

These lines are quoted by Coleridge in The Friend, 1818, i. 192; 1850, i. 147. The first two lines run thus:

The recluse Hermit oft' times more doth know Of the world's inmost wheels, than worldlings can, &c.

The alteration was first pointed out in an edition of The Friend issued by H. N. Coleridge in 1837.

For Stanza III—

So had your body her morning, hath her noon, And shall not better, her next change is night: But her fair larger guest, t'whom sun and moon Are sparks, and short liv'd, claims another right.—

The motto reads:

Our bodies had their morning, have their noon, And shall not better—the next change is night, But their fair larger guest, t'whom sun and moon Are sparks and short liv'd, claims another right.

The alteration was first noted in 1837. In 1850 line 3 of Stanza III 'fair' is misprinted 'far'.

A Nymph's Passion

I love, and he loves me again, Yet dare I not tell who; For if the nymphs should know my swain, I fear they'd love him too; Yet if it be not known, The pleasure is as good as none, For that's a narrow joy is but our own.	5
I'll tell, that if they be not glad, They yet may envy me; But then if I grow jealous mad, And of them pitied be, It were a plague 'bove scorn, And yet it cannot be forborne, Unless my heart would, as my thought, be torn.	10
He is, if they can find him, fair, And fresh and fragrant too, As summer's sky or purged air, And looks as lilies do That are this morning blown; Yet, yet I doubt he is not known, And fear much more, that more of him be shown.	20
But he hath eyes so round and bright, As make away my doubt, Where Love may all his torches light Though hate had put them out; But then, t'increase my fears, What nymph soe'er his voice but hears, Will be my rival, though she have but ears.	25
I'll tell no more, and yet I love, And he loves me; yet no One unbecoming thought doth move From either heart, I know; But so exempt from blame, As it would be to each a fame, If love or fear would let me tell his name.	36

THE NATIVITY OR CHRISTMAS DAY.

Unfold thy face, unmask thy ray,

Shine forth, bright sun, double the day;
Let no malignant misty fume
Nor foggy vapour, once presume

That primal great lucific light,
That rays to thee, to us gave sight.

Whoe'er thou art whose path in Summer lies Through yonder village, turn thee where the Grove Of branching oaks a rural palace old Embosoms—there dwells Albert, generous lord Of all the harvest round. And onward thence 5 A low plain chapel fronts the morning light Fast by a silent rivulet. Humbly walk, O stranger, o'er the consecrated ground; And on that verdant Hillock, which thou seest 10 Beset with osiers, let thy pious hand Sprinkle fresh water from the brook, and strew Sweet-smelling flowers—for there doth Edmund rest, The learned shepherd; for each rural art Famed, and for songs harmonious, and the woes Of ill-requited love. The faithless pride 15 Of fair Matilda sank him to the grave In manhood's prime. But soon did righteous Heaven With tears, with sharp remorse, and pining care Avenge her falsehood. Nor could all the gold And nuptial pomp, which lured her plighted faith 20 From Edmund to a loftier husband's home, Relieve her breaking heart, or turn aside The strokes of death. Go, traveller, relate The mournful story. Haply some fair maid May hold it in remembrance, and be taught 2.5 That riches cannot pay for truth or love.

[1124]

To mourn the hours of youth (yet mourn in vain)
That fled neglected: wisely thou hast trod
The better path—and that high meed which God
Assign'd to virtue, tow'ring from the dust,
Shall wait thy rising, Spirit pure and just!

O God! how sweet it were to think, that all Who silent mourn around this gloomy ball Might hear the voice of joy;—but 'tis the will Of man's great Author, that thro' good and ill Calm he should hold his course, and so sustain His varied lot of pleasure, toil and pain!

['These lines,' which 'were found in Mr. Coleridge's handwriting in one of the Prayer Books in the Chapel of Jesus College, Cambridge,' were first published in Lit. Rem., 1836, i. 34. They were first collected in P. W., 1885, i. 127. The first six lines are (see P. W., 1893, p. 474) taken from Bowles's elegy 'On the Death of Henry Headley'. J. D. Campbell surmised that the last six lines 'practically belonged to the same poem', but of this there is no evidence. The note of the elegy is a lament for the 'untimely sorrow' which had befallen an innocent sufferer, and the additional lines, which Coleridge composed or quoted, moralized the theme.

Note. Bowles wrote, I, alas, remain (l. 1), and 'Ordain'd for virtue' (l. 5).]

NAPOLEON

Then we may thank ourselves,
Who spell-bound by the magic name of Peace
Dream golden dreams. Go, warlike Britain, go,
For the grey olive-branch change thy green laurels:
Hang up thy rusty helmet, that the bee
May have a hive, or spider find a loom!
Instead of doubling drum and thrilling fife
Be lull'd in lady's lap with amorous flutes:
But for Napoleon, know, he'll scorn this calm:
The ruddy planet at his birth bore sway,
Sanguine adust his humour, and wild fire
His ruling element. Rage, revenge, and cunning
Make up the temper of this Captain's valour.

Phöbus, der Herrliche, findet sich ein!
Sie nahen, sie kommen—
Die Himmlischen alle,
Mit Göttern erfüllt sich
Die irdische Halle.	10
Sagt, wie bewirth' ich,
Der Erdegeborne,

Schenket mir euer unsterbliches Leben,
Götter! Was kann euch der Sterbliche geben?	15
Hebet zu eurem Olymp mich empor.
Die Freude, sie wohnt nur
In Jupiters Saale;
O füllet mit Nektar,
O reicht mir die Schale!	20
Reich' ihm die Schale!
Schenke dem Dichter,
Hebe, nur ein!
Netz' ihm die Augen mit himmlischem Thaue,	0.5
Dass er den Styx, den verhassten, nicht schaue,	25
Einer der Unsern sich dünke zu seyn.

Die himmlische Quelle:
Der Busen wird ruhig,	20
Das Auge wird helle.	30

Ich finde fürder keine Ruh Im weichen Knabenstand! Ich stürb', O Vater, stolz, wie du, Den Tod für's Vaterland!	5
Schon früh in meiner Kindheit war Mein täglich Spiel der Krieg! Im Bette träumt' ich nur Gefahr Und Wunden nur und Sieg.	10
Mein Feldgeschrei erweckte mich Aus mancher Türkenschlacht; Noch jüngst ein Faustschlag, welchen ich Dem Bassa zugedacht!	15

Sieh, O Mutter, hier lieg' ich an deinen schwellenden Brüsten!
Lieg', O Grüngelockte, von deinem wallenden Haupthaar
Sanft umsäuselt und sanft geküsst von thauenden Lüften!	5
Ach, du säuselst Wonne mir zu, und thauest mir Wehmuth
In das Herz, dass Wehmuth und Wonn' aus schmelzender Seele
Sich in Thränen und Dank und heiligen Liedern ergiessen!
Erde, du Mutter zahlloser Kinder, Mutter und Amme!
Schwester der allesfreuenden Sonne, des freundlichen Mondes	10
Und der strahlenden Stern', und flammenbeschweiften Kometen,
Eine der jüngsten Töchter der allgebärenden Schöpfung,
Immer blühendes Weib des segenträufelnden Himmels!
Sprich, O Erde, wie war dir als du am ersten der Tage
Deinen heiligen Schooss dem buhlenden Himmel enthülltest?	15
Dein Erröthen war die erste der Morgenröthen,
Als er im blendenden Bette von weichen schwellenden Wolken
Deine gürtende Binde mit siegender Stärke dir löste!
Schauer durchbebten die stille Natur und tausend und tausend
Leben keimten empor aus der mächtigen Liebesumarmung.	20
Freudig begrüssten die Fluthen des Meeres neuer Bewohner
Mannigfaltige Schaaren; es staunte der werdende Wallfisch

PREFACE

Poems on various subjects written at different times and prompted by very different feelings; but which will be read at one time and under the influence of one set of feelings—this is an heavy disadvantage: for we love or admire a poet in proportion as he developes our own sentiments and emotions, or reminds us of our own knowledge.

Compositions resembling those of the present volume are not unfrequently condemned for their querulous egotism. But egotism is to be condemned then only when it offends against time and place, as in an History or an Epic Poem. To censure it in a Monody or Sonnet is almost as absurd as to dislike a circle for being round. Why then write Sonnets or Monodies? Because they give me pleasure when perhaps nothing else could. After the more violent emotions of Sorrow, the mind demands solace and can find it in employment alone; but full of its late sufferings it can endure no employment not connected with those sufferings. Forcibly to turn away our attention to other subjects is a painful and in general an unavailing effort.

"But O how grateful to a wounded heart
The tale of misery to impart;
From others' eyes bid artless sorrows flow
And raise esteem upon the base of woe!"[1136:1]

The communicativeness of our nature leads us to describe our own sorrows; in the endeavor to describe them intellectual activity is exerted; and by a benevolent law of our nature from intellectual activity a pleasure results which is gradually associated and mingles as a corrective with the painful subject of the description. True! it may be answered, but how are the Public interested in your sorrows or your description? We are for ever attributing a personal unity to imaginary aggregates. What is the Public but a term for a number of scattered individuals of whom as many will be interested in these sorrows as have experienced the same or similar?

"Holy be the Lay, Which mourning soothes the mourner on his way!"

There is one species of egotism which is truly disgusting; not that which leads us to communicate our feelings to others, but that which would reduce the feelings of others to an identity with our own. The Atheist, who exclaims "pshaw!" when he glances his eye on the praises of Deity, is an Egotist; an old man, when he speaks contemptuously of love-verses, is an Egotist; and your sleek favourites of Fortune are Egotists, when they condemn all "melancholy discontented" verses.

Surely it would be candid not merely to ask whether the Poem pleases ourselves, but to consider whether or no there may not be others to whom it is well-calculated to give an innocent pleasure. With what anxiety every fashionable author avoids the word I!—now he transforms himself into a third person,—"the present writer"—now multiplies himself and swells into "we"—and all this is the watchfulness of guilt. Conscious that this said I is perpetually intruding on his mind and that it monopolizes his heart, he is prudishly solicitous that it may not escape from his lips.

This disinterestedness of phrase is in general commensurate with selfishness of feeling: men old and hackneyed in the ways of the world are scrupulous avoiders of Egotism.

Of the following Poems a considerable number are styled "Effusions," in defiance of Churchill's line

"Effusion on Effusion pour away."[1136:2]

I could recollect no title more descriptive of the manner and matter of the Poems—I might indeed have called the majority of them Sonnets—but they do not possess that oneness of thought which I deem indispensible (sic) in a Sonnet—and (not a very honorable motive perhaps) I was fearful that the title "Sonnet" might have reminded my reader of the Poems of the Rev. W. L. Bowles—a comparison with whom would have sunk me below that mediocrity, on the surface of which I am at present enabled to float.

Some of the verses allude to an intended emigration to America on the scheme of an abandonment of individual property.

The Effusions signed C. L. were written by Mr. Charles Lamb, of the India House—independently of the signature their superior merit would have sufficiently distinguished them. For the rough sketch of Effusion XVI, I am indebted to Mr. Favell. And the first half of Effusion XV was written by the Author of "Joan of Arc", an Epic Poem.

I cannot conclude the Preface without expressing my grateful acknowledgments to Mr. Cottle, Bristol, for the liberality with which (with little probability I know of remuneration from the sale) he purchased the poems, and the typographical elegance by which he endeavoured to recommend them, (or)—the liberal assistance which he afforded me, by the purchase of the copyright with little probability of remuneration from the sale of the Poems.

[This acknowledgement, which was omitted from the Preface to the First Edition, was rewritten and included in the 'Advertisement' to the 'Supplement' to the Second Edition.]

To Earl Stanhope

A man beloved of Science and of Freedom, these Poems are respectfully inscribed by The Author.

[In a letter to Miss Cruikshank (? 1807) (Early Recollections, 1837, i. 201), Coleridge maintains that the 'Sonnet to Earl Stanhope', which was published in Poems, 1796 (vide ante, pp. 89, 90), 'was inserted by the fool of a publisher [Cottle prints 'inserted by Biggs, the fool of a printer'] in order, forsooth, that he might send the book and a letter to Earl Stanhope; who (to prove that he is not mad in all things) treated both book and letter with silent contempt.' In a note Cottle denies this statement, and maintains that the 'book (handsomely bound) and the letter were sent to Lord S. by Mr. C. himself'. It is possible that before the book was published Coleridge had repented of Sonnet, Dedication, and Letter, and that the 'handsomely bound' volume was sent by Cottle and not by Coleridge, but the 'Dedication' is in his own handwriting and proves that he was, in the first instance at least, particeps criminis. See Note by J. D. Campbell, P. W., 1893, pp. 575, 576.]

[INTRODUCTION]

The composition of the Sonnet has been regulated by Boileau in his Art of Poetry, and since Boileau, by William Preston, in the elegant preface to his Amatory Poems: the rules, which they would establish, are founded on the practice of Petrarch. I have never yet been able to discover either sense, nature, or poetic fancy in Petrarch's poems; they appear to me all one cold glitter of heavy conceits and metaphysical abstractions. However, Petrarch, although not the inventor of the Sonnet, was the first who made it popular; and his countrymen have taken his poems as the model. Charlotte Smith and Bowles are they who first made the Sonnet popular among the present English: I am justified therefore by analogy in deducing its laws from their compositions.

The Sonnet then is a small poem, in which some lonely feeling is developed. It is limited to a particular number of lines, in order that the reader's mind having expected the close at the place in which he finds it, may rest satisfied; and that so the poem may acquire, as it were, a Totality,—in plainer phrase, may become a Whole. It is confined to fourteen lines, because as some particular number is necessary, and that particular number must be a small one, it may as well be fourteen as any other number. When no reason can be adduced against a thing, Custom is a sufficient reason for it. Perhaps, if the Sonnet were comprized in less than fourteen lines, it would become a serious Epigram; if it extended to more, it would encroach on the province of the Elegy. Poems, in which no lonely feeling is developed, are not Sonnets because the Author has chosen to write them in fourteen lines; they should rather be entitled Odes, or Songs, or Inscriptions. The greater part of Warton's Sonnets are severe and masterly likenesses of the style of the Greek επιγραμματα.

20

15

In a Sonnet then we require a development of some lonely feeling, by whatever cause it may have been excited; but those Sonnets appear to me the most exquisite, in which moral Sentiments, Affections, or Feelings, are deduced from, and associated with, the scenery of Nature. Such compositions generate a habit of thought highly favourable to delicacy of character. They create a sweet and indissoluble union between the intellectual and the material world. Easily remembered from their briefness, and interesting alike to the eye and the affections, these are the poems which we can "lay up in our heart, and our soul," and repeat them "when we walk by the way, and when we lie down, and when we rise up". Hence the Sonnets of Bowles derive their marked superiority over all other Sonnets; hence they domesticate with the heart, and become, as it were, a part of our identity.

30

Respecting the metre of a Sonnet, the Writer should consult his own convenience.—Rhymes, many or few, or no rhymes at all—whatever the chastity of his ear may prefer, whatever the rapid expression of his feelings will permit;—all these things are left at his own disposal. A Italian language. That rule, therefore, which the Italians have sameness in the final sound of its words is the great and grievous defect of the established, of exactly four different sounds in the Sonnet, seems to have arisen from their wish to have as many, not from any dread of finding more. But surely it is ridiculous to make the defect of a foreign language a reason for our not availing ourselves of one of the marked excellencies of our own. "The Sonnet (says Preston,) will ever be cultivated by those who write on tender, pathetic subjects. It is peculiarly adapted to the state of a man violently agitated by a real passion, and wanting composure and vigor of mind to methodize his thought. It is fitted to express a momentary burst of Passion" etc. Now, if there be one species of composition more difficult and artificial than another, it is an English Sonnet on the Italian Model. 55 Adapted to the agitations of a real passion! Express momentary bursts of feeling in it! I should sooner expect to write pathetic Axes or pour forth Extempore Eggs and Altars![1140:1] But the best confutation of such idle rules is to be found in the Sonnets of those who have observed them, in their inverted sentences, their quaint phrases, and incongruous mixture of 60 obsolete and Spenserian words: and when, at last, the thing is toiled and hammered into fit shape, it is in general racked and tortured Prose rather than any thing resembling Poetry. Miss Seward, who has perhaps succeeded the best in these laborious trifles and who most dogmatically insists on what she calls "the sonnet-claim," has written a very 65 ingenious although unintentional burlesque on her own system, in the following lines prefixed to the Poems of a Mr. Carey.

35

40

"Prais'd be the Poet, who the sonnet-claim, Severest of the orders that belong Distinct and separate to the Delphic song Shall reverence, nor its appropriate name Lawless assume: peculiar is its frame-From him derived, who spurn'd the city throng, And warbled sweet the rocks and woods among, Lonely Valclusa! and that heir of Fame, Our greater Milton, hath in many a lay Woven on this arduous model, clearly shewn That English verse may happily display Those strict energic measures which alone Deserve the name of Sonnet, and convey A spirit, force, and grandeur, all their own!

[Carolus Utenhovius (Utenhove, or Uyttenhove) and Ptolomœus Luxius Tasteus were scholar friends of the Scottish poet and historian George Buchanan (1506-1582), who prefixes some Iambics 'Carolo Utenhovio F. S.' to his Hexameters 'Franciscanus et Fratres'. In some Elegiacs addressed to Tasteus and Tevius, in which he complains of his sufferings from gout and kindred maladies, he tells them that Groscollius (Professor of Medicine at the University of Paris) was doctoring him with herbs and by suggestion:—'Et spe languentem consilioque juvat'. Hence the three names. In another set of Iambics entitled 'Mutuus Amor' in which he celebrates the alliance between Scotland and England he writes:—

Non mortis hoc propinquitas Non temporis longinquitas Solvet, fides quod nexuit Intaminata vinculum.

Hence the wording of the motto. Groscollius is, of course, a mot à double entente. It is a name and a nickname. The interpretation of the names and the reference to Buchanan's Hexameters were first pointed out by Mr. T. Hutchinson in the Athenaeum, Dec. 10, 1898.]

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

[Pp. [xiii]-xvi.]

Compositions resembling those of the present volume are not unfrequently condemned for their querulous Egotism. But Egotism is to be condemned then only when it offends against Time and Place, as in an History or an Epic Poem. To censure it in a Monody or Sonnet is almost as absurd as to dislike a circle for being round. Why then write Sonnets or Monodies? Because they give me pleasure when perhaps nothing else could. After the more violent emotions of Sorrow, the mind demands amusement, and can find it in employment alone; but full of its late sufferings, it can endure no employment not in some measure connected with them. Forcibly to turn away our attention to general subjects is a painful and most often an unavailing effort:

10

But O! how grateful to a wounded heart The tale of Misery to impart— From others' eyes bid artless sorrows flow, And raise esteem upon the base of woe!

15

SHAW.

The communicativeness of our Nature leads us to describe our own sorrows; in the endeavour to describe them, intellectual activity is exerted; and from intellectual activity there results a pleasure, which is gradually associated, and mingles as a corrective, with the painful subject of the description. "True!" (it may be answered) "but how are the Public interested in your Sorrows or your Description?" We are for ever attributing personal Unities to imaginary Aggregates.—What is the Public, but a term for a number of scattered Individuals? Of whom as many will be interested in these sorrows, as have experienced the same or similar.

20

"Holy be the lay,

Which mourning soothes the mourner on his way."

If I could judge of others by myself, I should not hesitate to affirm, that the most interesting passages in our most interesting Poems are those, in which the Author developes his own feelings. The sweet voice of Cona^[1144:1] never sounds so sweetly as when it speaks of itself; and I should almost suspect that man of an unkindly heart, who could read the opening of the third book of the Paradise Lost without peculiar emotion. By a law of our Nature, he, who labours under a strong feeling, is impelled to seek for sympathy; but a Poet's feelings are all strong. Quicquid amet valde amat. Akenside therefore speaks with philosophical accuracy, when he classes Love and Poetry, as producing the same effects:

30

35

"Love and the wish of Poets when their tongue Would teach to others' bosoms, what so charms Their own."—Pleasures Of Imagination.

40

There is one species of Egotism which is truly disgusting; not that which leads us to communicate our feelings to others, but that which would reduce the feelings of others to an identity with our own. The Atheist, who exclaims, "pshaw!" when he glances his eye on the praises of Deity, is an Egotist: an old man, when he speaks contemptuously of Love-verses is an Egotist: and the sleek Favorites of Fortune are Egotists, when they condemn all "melancholy, discontented" verses. Surely, it would be candid not merely to ask whether the poem pleases ourselves but to consider whether or no there may not be others to whom

45

it is well-calculated to give an innocent pleasure.

I shall only add that each of my readers will, I hope, remember that these Poems on various subjects, which he reads at one time and under

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

I return my acknowledgments to the different Reviewers for the assistance, which they have afforded me, in detecting my poetic deficiencies. I have endeavoured to avail myself of their remarks: one third of the former Volume I have omitted, and the imperfections of the republished part must be considered as errors of taste, not faults of carelessness. My poems have been rightly charged with a profusion of double-epithets, and a general turgidness. I have pruned the double-epithets with no sparing hand; and used my best efforts to tame the swell and glitter both of thought and diction. This latter fault however had insinuated itself 10 into my Religious Musings with such intricacy of union, that sometimes I have omitted to disentangle the weed from the fear of snapping the flower. A third and heavier accusation has been brought against me, that of obscurity; but not, I think, with equal justice. An Author is obscure when his conceptions are dim and imperfect, and his language incorrect, or unappropriate, or involved. A poem that abounds in allusions, 15 like the Bard of Gray, or one that impersonates high and abstract truths, like Collins's Ode on the poetical character, claims not to be popular—but should be acquitted of obscurity. The deficiency is in the Reader. But this is a charge which every poet, whose imagination is warm and rapid, must expect from his contemporaries. Milton did not 20 escape it; and it was adduced with virulence against Gray and Collins. We now hear no more of it; not that their poems are better understood at present, than they were at their first publication; but their fame is established; and a critic would accuse himself of frigidity or inattention, who should profess not to understand them. But a living writer is yet 25 sub judice; and if we cannot follow his conceptions or enter into his feelings, it is more consoling to our pride to consider him as lost beneath, than as soaring above, us. If any man expect from my poems the same easiness of style which he admires in a drinking-song, for him I have not written. Intelligibilia, non intellectum adfero. 30

I expect neither profit nor general fame by my writings; and I consider myself as having been amply repayed without either. Poetry has been to me its own [1146:1] "exceeding great reward": it has soothed my afflictions: it has multiplied and refined my enjoyments; it has endeared solitude; and it has given me the habit of wishing to discover the Good and the Beautiful in all that meets and surrounds me.

There were inserted in my former Edition, a few Sonnets of my Friend and old School-fellow, Charles Lamb. He has now communicated to me a complete Collection of all his Poems; quae qui non prorsus amet, illum omnes et Virtutes et Veneres odere. My friend Charles Lloyd has likewise joined me; and has contributed every poem of his, which he deemed worthy of preservation. With respect to my own share of the Volume, I have omitted a third of the former Edition, and added almost an equal number. The Poems thus added are marked in the Contents by Italics.

INTRODUCTION TO THE SONNETS

For lines 1-63 vide ante, No. III, The Introduction to the 'Sheet of Sonnets'. Lines 64 to the end are omitted, and the last paragraph runs thus:

The Sonnet has been ever a favourite species of composition with me; but I am conscious that I have not succeeded in it. From a large number I have retained ten only, as seemed not beneath mediocrity. Whatever more is said of them, ponamus lucro.

S. T. COLERIDGE.

[Note. In a copy of the Edition of 1797, now in the Rowfant Library, S. T. C. comments in a marginal note on the words 'I have never yet been able to discover sense, nature, or poetic fancy in Petrarch's poems,' &c.—'A piece of petulant presumption, of which I should be more ashamed if I did not flatter myself that it stands alone in my writings. The best of the joke is that at the time I wrote it, I did not understand a word of Italian, and could therefore judge of this divine Poet only by bald translations of some half-dozen of his Sonnets.']

[Pp. 243-245.]

ADVERTISEMENT

I have excepted the following Poems from those, which I had determined to omit. Some intelligent friends particularly requested it, observing, that what most delighted me when I was "young in writing poetry, would probably best please those who are young in reading poetry: and a man must learn to be pleased with a subject, before he can yield that attention to it, which is requisite in order to acquire a just taste." I however was fully convinced, that he, who gives to the press what he does not thoroughly approve in his own closet, commits an act of disrespect, both against himself and his fellow-citizens. The request and the reasoning would not, therefore, have influenced me, had they not been assisted by other motives. The first in order of these verses, which I have thus endeavoured to reprieve from immediate oblivion, was originally addressed "To the Author of Poems published anonymously, at Bristol." A second edition of these poems has lately appeared with the Author's name prefixed; and I could not refuse myself the gratification of seeing the name of that man among my poems, without whose kindness they would probably have remained unpublished; and to whom I know myself greatly and variously obliged, as a Poet, a Man and a Christian.

The second is entitled "An Effusion on an Autumnal Evening; written in early youth." In a note to this poem I had asserted that the tale of Florio in Mr. Rogers' "Pleasures of Memory" was to be found in the Lochleven of Bruce. I did (and still do) perceive a certain likeness between the two stories; but certainly not a sufficient one to justify my assertion. I feel it my duty, therefore, to apologize to the Author and the Public, for this rashness; and my sense of honesty would not have been satisfied by the bare omission of the note. No one can see more clearly the littleness and futility of imagining plagiarisms in the works of men of Genius; but nemo omnibus horis sapit; and my mind, at the time of writing that note, was sick and sore with anxiety, and weakened through much suffering. I have not the most distant knowledge of Mr. Rogers, except as a correct and elegant Poet. If any of my readers should know him personally, they would oblige me by informing him that I have expiated a sentence of unfounded detraction, by an unsolicited and self-originating apology.

Having from these motives re-admitted two, and those the longest of the poems I had omitted, I yielded a passport to the three others, [pp. 256, 262, 264] which were recommended by the greatest number of votes. There are some lines too of Lloyd's and Lamb's in this Appendix. They had been omitted in the former part of the volume, partly by accident; but I have reason to believe that the Authors regard them, as of inferior merit; and they are therefore rightly placed, where they will receive some beauty from their vicinity to others much worse.

PREFACE

The following collection has been entitled Sibylline Leaves, in allusion to the fragmentary and widely scattered state in which they have been long suffered to remain. It contains the whole of the author's poetical compositions, from 1793 to the present date, with the exception of a few works not yet finished, and those published in the first edition of his juvenile poems, over which he has no controul. They may be divided into three classes: First, A selection from the Poems added to the second and third editions, together with those originally published in the Lyrical Ballads, 1150:21 which after having remained many years out of print, have been omitted by Mr. Wordsworth in the recent collection of all his minor poems, and of course revert to the author. Second, Poems published at very different periods, in various obscure or perishable journals, etc., some with, some without the writer's consent; many imperfect, all incorrect. The third and last class is formed of Poems which have hitherto remained in manuscript. The whole is now presented to the reader collectively, with considerable additions and alterations, and as perfect as the author's judgment and powers could render them.

In my Literary Life, it has been mentioned that, with the exception of this preface, the Sibylline Leaves have been printed almost two years; and the necessity of troubling the reader with the list of errata^[1151:1] [forty-seven in number] which follows this preface, alone induces me to refer again to the circumstances, at the risk of ungenial feelings, from the recollection of its worthless causes.

[1151:2] A few corrections of later date have been added.—Henceforward the author must be occupied by studies of a very different kind.

[1151]

Ite hinc, Camænæ! Vos quoque ite, suaves, Dulces Camænæ! Nam (fatebimur verum) Dulces fuistis!—Et tamen meas chartas Revisitote: sed pudenter et raro!

Virgil, Catalect. vii. [1151:3]

At the request of the friends of my youth, who still remain my friends, and who were pleased with the wildness of the compositions, I have added two school-boy poems—with a song modernized with some additions from one of our elder poets. [1151:4] Surely, malice itself will scarcely attribute their insertion to any other motive, than the wish to keep alive the recollections from early life.—I scarcely knew what title I should prefix to the first. By imaginary Time, [1151:5] I meant the state of a school-boy's mind when, on his return to school, he projects his being in his day dreams, and lives in his next holidays, six months hence: and this I contrasted with real Time.

PREFACE

The Preface is the same as that of 1808 and 1828, with the addition of the following passage (quoted as a foot-note to the sentence:—'I have pruned the double-epithets with no sparing hand; and used my best efforts to tame the swell and glitter both of thought and diction.')—'Without any feeling of anger, I may yet be allowed to express some degree of surprize, that after having run the critical gauntlet for a certain class of faults, which I had, viz. a too ornate, and elaborately poetic diction, and nothing having come before the judgement-seat of the Reviewers during the long interval, I should for at least seventeen years, quarter after quarter, have been placed by them in the foremost rank of the proscribed, and made to abide the brunt of abuse and ridicule for faults directly opposite, viz. bald and prosaic language, and an affected simplicity both of matter and manner—faults which assuredly did not enter into the character of my compositions.—LITERARY LIFE, i. 51. Published 1817.' In the Biog. Lit. (loc. cit.) the last seven lines of the quotation read as follows—'judgement-seat in the interim, I should, year after year, quarter after quarter, month after month (not to mention sundry petty periodicals of still quicker revolution, 'or weekly or diurnal') have been for at least seventeen years consecutively dragged forth by these into the foremost rank of the proscribed, and forced to abide the brunt of abuse, for faults directly opposite, and which I certainly had not. How shall I explain this?'

Contents.—The Contents of Vols. I and III are identical with the Contents of Vols. I and III of 1828 (No. XX): A 'Song' (Tho' veiled in spires of myrtle wreath), p. 78, and 'The Alienated Mistress: A Madrigal' (If Love be dead, &c.), p. 93 of Vol. II, 1828, are omitted in Vol. II of 1829; and 'The Allegoric Vision,' 'The Improvisatore, or John Anderson, My Jo, John' [New Thoughts on old Subjects], and 'The Garden of Boccaccio' are inserted in Vol. II of 1829; between 'The Wanderings of Cain' and 'Remorse', pp. 116-42. The text of 1829, which J. D. Campbell followed in P. W., 1893, differs from that of 1828.

XXVII

THE POETICAL AND DRAMATIC WORKS of Samuel Taylor Coleridge; With a Life of the Author. London: John Thomas Cox, 84 High Holborn. MDCCCXXXVI.

 $[8^{\circ}, pp. lxxviii + 403.$

The Life of the Author is followed by an Appendix containing 'Coleridge's Will', and 'Contemporary Notices of the Writings and Character of Coleridge'.

The Contents consist of the Poems published in 1797, together with 'The Nightingale'; 'Love'; 'The Ancient Mariner'; 'The Foster Mother's Tale'; four poems and seven sonnets reprinted from 1796; 'On a late Connubial Rupture'; and the 'Three Sonnets . . . in the manner of Contemporary Writers' reprinted from the Poetical Register. The Poems conclude with 'A Couplet, written in a volume of Poems presented by Mr. Coleridge to Dr. A.'—a highly respected friend, the loss of whose society he deeply regretted—

To meet, to know, to love—and then to part, Is the sad tale of many a human heart.

For the 'Couplet', vide ante, p. 410, 'To Two Sisters', ll. 1, 2. Dr. A. was probably John Anster, LL.D., the translator of Goethe's Faust.

The Dramatic Works consist of 'The Piccolomini' and 'The Death of Wallenstein'.

XXVIII

The Poetical And Dramatic Works of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, with a Life of the Author. London: Tho s . Allman 42 Holborn Hill 1837.

 $[16^{mo}, pp. viii + 392.$

Note.—The 'Life of the Author' does not form part of this edition. The Contents are identical with those of No. XXVII. The frontispiece depicts the 'Ancient Mariner' and the 'Wedding Guest'. The titlepage, 'Drawn and Engraved by J. Romney,' is embellished with a curious vignette depicting a man in a night-cap lying in bed. A wife, or daughter, is in attendance. The vignette was probably designed to illustrate some other work.

XXIX

The Poetical Works of Samuel Taylor Coleridge with Life of the Author. London: Charles Daly, 14, Leicester Street, Leicester Square, n. d.

 $[16^{\text{mo}}, \text{pp. xxxii} + [35]-384.$

The Contents consist of 'The Ancient Mariner' (with the marginal glosses printed at the end of the poem); the Poems of 1796, 1797, with a few exceptions: 'The Piccolomini'; 'The Death of Wallenstein'; 'The Dark Ladié'; 'The Raven'; 'A Christmas Carol'; and 'Fire, Famine, and Slaughter'—i. e. of poems then out of copyright, or reprinted from the Morning Post.

XXX

The Ancient Mariner, and other Poems. By S. T. Coleridge. Price Sixpence. London: Sherwood, Gilbert, and Piper, Paternoster-Row. MDCCCXLIII. J. Scott, Printer, 50, Hatfield Street.

Note.—This edition formed one of the 'Pocket English Classics'. An illustrated title-page depicts the 'skiff-boat' with its crew of the Ancient Mariner, the Holy Hermit, the Pilot, and the Pilot's boy, who is jumping overboard. The flag bears the legend 'The Antient Mariner and Minor Poems By S. T. Coleridge'. The Contents include 'The Ancient Mariner', with the marginal glosses printed at the end of the poem; and a selection of poems published in 1796, 1797.

XXXI

The Poems of S. T. Coleridge [Aldine device and motto] London William Pickering 1844.

 $[8^{\circ}, pp. xvi + 372.$

Note.—The Contents of this volume, issued by Mrs. H. N. Coleridge as sole editress, consist of the Poems (not the Dramatic Works) included in 1834, with the following omissions, (1) Music, (2) Devonshire Roads, (3) Inside the Coach, (4) Mathematical Problem, (5) The Nose, (6) Monody on a Tea-kettle, (7) 'The Same,' 'I too a sister had', &c., (8) On Imitation, (9) Honor, (10) Progress of Vice, (11) The Two round spaces on the Tombstone; and the following additions, already republished in Lit. Remains, 1836, Vol. I, (1) Epigram, 'Hoarse Mævius', &c., (2) Casimir ad Lyram, (3) On the Christening of a Friend's Child, (4) Introduction to the Tale of the Dark Ladie, (5) An Ode to the Rain, (6) The Exchange, (7) Complaint, 'How seldom, Friend', &c., (8) 'What is Life', (9) Inscription for a Time-Piece, (10) Επιτάφιον αὐτόγραπτον. Four songs from the dramas were also included. The German originals of (1) Schiller's 'Lines on a Cataract', (2) Friederike Brun's 'Chamouny at Sunrise', and (3) Schiller's distiches on the 'Homeric Hexameter' and the 'Ovidian Elegiac Metre' are printed on pp. 371, 372.

XXXII

The Poems of S. T. Coleridge [Aldine device and motto] London William Pickering 1848.

 $[8^{\circ}, pp. xvi + 372.$

The Contents are identical with those of No. XXXI, with the exception of two additional 'Notes' (pp. 371, 372) containing the German original of Matthisson's Milesisches Märchen, and two stanzas of Cotton's Chlorinda, of which 'Separation' (ante, p. 397) is an adaptation.

ADVERTISEMENT

This volume was prepared for the press by my lamented sister, Mrs. H. N. Coleridge, and will have an additional interest to many readers as the last monument of her highly-gifted mind. At her earnest request, my name appears with hers on the title-page, but the assistance rendered by me has been, in fact, little more than mechanical. The preface, and the greater part of the notes, are her composition:—the selection and arrangement have been determined almost exclusively by her critical judgment, or from records in her possession. A few slight corrections and unimportant additions are all that have been found necessary, the first and last sheets not having had the benefit of her own revision.

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION [1852]

As a chronological arrangement of Poetry in completed collections is now beginning to find general favour, pains have been taken to follow this method in the present Edition of S. T. Coleridge's Poetical and Dramatic Works, as far as circumstances permitted—that is to say, as far as the date of composition of each poem was ascertainable, and as far as the plan could be carried out without effacing the classes into which the Author had himself distributed his most important poetical publication, the 'Sibylline Leaves,' namely, Poems occasioned by Political Events, or Feelings connected with them; Love Poems; Meditative Poems in blank verse; Odes and Miscellaneous Poems. On account of these impediments, together with the fact, that many a poem, such as it appears in its ultimate form, is the growth of different periods, the agreement with chronology in this Edition is approximative rather than perfect: yet in the majority of instances the date of each piece has been made out, and its place fixed accordingly.

In another point of view also, the Poems have been distributed with relation to time: they are thrown into three broad groups, representing, first the Youth,—secondly, the Early Manhood and Middle Life,—thirdly, the Declining Age of the Poet; and it will be readily perceived that each division has its own distinct tone and colour, corresponding to the period of life in which it was composed. It has been suggested, indeed, that Coleridge had four poetical epochs, more or less diversely characterised,—that there is a discernible difference betwixt the productions of his Early Manhood and of his Middle Age, the latter being distinguished from those of his Stowey life, which may be considered as his poetic prime, by a less buoyant spirit. Fire they have; but it is not the clear, bright, mounting fire of his earlier poetry, conceived and executed when 'he and youth were house-mates still.' In the course of a very few years after three-and-twenty all his very finest poems were produced; his twenty-fifth year has been called his annus mirabilis. To be a 'Prodigal's favourite —[1169:1]then, worse truth! a Miser's pensioner,' is the lot of Man. In respect of poetry, Coleridge was a 'Prodigal's favourite,' more, perhaps, than ever Poet was before.

* * * * * *

[The poems] produced before the Author's twenty-fourth year [1796], devoted as he was to the 'soft strains' of Bowles, have more in common with the passionate lyrics of Collins and the picturesque wildness of the pretended Ossian, than with the well-tuned sentimentality of that Muse which the overgrateful poet has represented as his earliest inspirer. For the young they will ever retain a peculiar charm, because so fraught with the joyous spirit of youth; and in the minds of all readers that feeling which disposes men 'to set the bud above the rose full-blown' would secure them an interest, even if their intrinsic beauty and sweetness were less adequate to obtain it.

* * * * * *

The present Editors have been guided in the general arrangement of this edition by those of 1817 and 1828, which may be held to represent the author's matured judgment upon the larger and more important part of his poetical productions. They have reason, indeed, to believe, that the edition of 1828 was the last upon which he was able to bestow personal care and attention. That of 1834, the last year of his earthly sojourning, a period when his thoughts were wholly engrossed, so far as the decays of his frail outward part left them free for intellectual pursuits and speculations, by a grand scheme of Christian Philosophy, to the enunciation of which in a long projected work his chief thoughts and aspirations had for many years been directed, was arranged mainly, if not entirely, at the discretion of his earliest Editor, H. N. Coleridge . . . Such alterations only have been made in this final arrangement of the Poetical and Dramatic Works of S. T. Coleridge, by those into whose charge they have devolved, as they feel assured, both the Author himself and his earliest Editor would at this time find to be either necessary or desirable. The observations and experience of eighteen years, a period long enough to bring about many changes in literary opinion, have satisfied them that the immature essays of boyhood and adolescence, not marked with any such prophetic note of genius as certainly does belong to the four school-boy poems they have retained, tend to injure the general effect of a body of poetry. That a writer, especially a writer of verse, should keep out of sight his third-rate performances, is now become a maxim with critics; for they are not, at the worst, effectless: they have an effect, that of diluting and weakening, to the reader's feelings, the general power of the collection. Mr. Coleridge himself constantly, after 1796, rejected a certain portion of his earliest published Juvenilia: never printed any attempts of his boyhood, except those four with which the present publication commences, and there can be no doubt that the Editor of 1834 would ere now have come to the conclusion, that only such of the Author's early performances as were sealed by his own approval ought to form a permanent part of the body of his poetical works.

* * * * * *

It must be added, that time has robbed of their charm certain sportive effusions of Mr. Coleridge's later years, which were given to the public in the first gloss and glow of novelty in 1834, and has proved that, though not devoid of the quality of genius, they possess upon the whole, not more than an ephemeral interest. These the Editors have not scrupled to omit on the same grounds and in the same confidence that has been already explained.

CHESTER PLACE, REGENT'S PARK.

March. 1852.

The Contents of 1852 correspond with those of 1844, 1848, with the following omissions: (1) Anthem for the Children of Christ's Hospital; (2) Sonnet, 'Farewell, parental scenes', &c.; (3) To the Muse; (4) With Fielding's Amelia; (5) Sonnet, 'On receiving an account', &c.; (6) Sonnet, 'On seeing a Youth', &c.; (7) Pain; (8) Epigram, 'Hoarse Mævius', &c.; (9) Casimir ad Lyram; (10) 'On the Christening', &c.; (11) Elegy imitated from Akenside; (12) Phantom; (13) Allegoric Vision; (14) Reproof and Reply; (15) Written in an Album, 'Parry', &c.; (16) To the Author of the Ancient Mariner; (17) Job's Luck; (18) On a Volunteer Singer; together with four songs from the dramas.

The additions were (1) Sonnet to Pitt, 'Not always', &c.; (2) Sonnet, 'Not Stanhope', &c.; (3) To the Author of Poems published anonymously at Bristol; (4) The Day-Dream, 'If thou wert here', &c.; (5) The Foster-Mother's Tale; (6) A Hymn; (7) The Alienated Mistress. A Madrigal; (8) To a Lady, 'Tis not the lily brow', &c.; (9) Song, 'Tho' veiled', &c.; (10) L'envoy. 'In vain we supplicate', &c.

[1170]

[1171]

The Notes, pp. 379-88, contain, inter alia, the Latin original of 'Kisses' (vide ante, p. 46), and the Sonnet, 'No more my visionary Soul shall dwell', attributed by Southey to Favell (vide ante, p. 68).

XXXV

The Dramatic Works of Samuel Taylor Coleridge. Edited by Derwent Coleridge. A New Edition. London: Edward Moxon, Dover Street. 1852.

 $[8^{\circ}, pp. xvi + 427.$

CONTENTS

Remorse. A Tragedy in Five Acts.

Zapolya. A Christmas Tale. In two Parts. Part I. The Prelude, &c.

Zapolya. Part II. The Sequel, entitled 'The Usurper's Fate.'

The Piccolomini; or the first part of 'Wallenstein.' A Drama. Translated from Schiller.

The Death of Wallenstein. A Tragedy. In Five Acts.

Notes.

Note.—The Preface contains a critical estimate of Remorse and Zapolya, and of the translation of Schiller's Wallenstein. At the close of the Preface [pp. xii-xiv] the Editor comments on the strictures of a writer in the Westminster Review, Art. 3 July 1850 (vide ante, p. 811), and upholds the merits of the Translation as a whole. The Preface is dated 'St. Mark's College, Chelsea, July, 1852'.

The Poems of Samuel Taylor Coleridge. Edited by Derwent and Sara Coleridge. With an Appendix. A New Edition. London: Edward Moxon & Co., Dover Street. 1863.

[8°, pp. xxvii + [1]-378 + Notes, pp. [379]-388 + Appendix, pp. [391]-404.

The text of the Poems is identical with that of 1852, but a fresh 'Advertisement', pp. [iii]-iv, is prefixed to the 'Advertisement' dated May, 1852.

ADVERTISEMENT

The last authorised edition of S. T. Coleridge's Poems, published by Mr. Moxon in 1852, bears the names of Derwent and Sara Coleridge, as joint editors. In writing my name with my sister's, I yielded to her particular desire and request, but the work was performed almost entirely by herself. My opinion was consulted as to the general arrangement, and more especially as to the choice or rejection of particular pieces. Even here I had no occasion to do more than confirm the conclusions to which she had herself arrived, and sanction the course which she had herself adopted. I shared in the responsibility, but cannot claim any share in the credit of the undertaking. This edition I propose to leave intact as it came from her own hands. I wish it to remain as one among other monuments of her fine taste, her solid judgment, and her scrupulous conscientiousness.

[1172]

A few pieces of some interest appear, however, to have been overlooked. Two characteristic sonnets, not included in any former edition of the Poems, have been preserved in an anonymous work, entitled 'Letters, Recollections, and Conversations of S. T. Coleridge.' These with a further selection from the omitted pieces, principally from the Juvenile Poems, have been added in an Appendix. So placed, they will not at any rate interfere with the general effect of the collection, while they add to its completeness.

All these buds of promise were once withdrawn, and, afterwards reproduced by the Author. It is not easy now to draw a line of separation, which shall not be deemed either too indulgent, or too severe. [The concluding lines of the 'Advertisement' dealt with questions of copyright].

DERWENT COLERIDGE.

APPENDIX

Vol. III. Remorse, and Zapolya, pp. 290.

Vol. IV. Fall of Robespierre, and Translation of Schiller's 'Wallenstein', pp. 413.

Note.—The Editor, Richard Herne Shepherd, included in the first two volumes the poems published by Coleridge in 1796, 1797, An. Anth., 1800, 1803, Sibylline Leaves (1817), 1828, 1829, 1834, together with those published by H. N. Coleridge in Literary Remains, 1836, by Sara and Derwent Coleridge in 1844, 1852 (with the exception of the Hymn, 1814), and by Derwent Coleridge in the Appendix of 1863.

The following poems collected from various sources were reprinted for the first time:—

Vol. I. (1) Julia; (2) First version of the Sonnet to the Rev. W. L. Bowles; (3) On a late Connubial Rupture; (4) Sonnets signed Nehemiah Higginbottom.

Vol. II. (1) Talleyrand to Lord Granville; (2) A Stranger Minstrel; (3) To Two Sisters, &c.; (4) Water Ballad; (5) Modern Critics; (6) 'The Poet in his lone', &c. [Apologia, &c., ante, p. 345]; (7) Song, ex improviso, &c.; (8) The Old Man of the Alps; (9) Three Epigrams from The Watchman; (10) Sonnet on the birth of a son; (11) On Deputy ——; (12) To a Musical Critic; (13) Εγωενκαιπαν; (14) The Bridge-street Committee; (15) 'What boots to tell', &c.; (16) Mr. Baker's Courtship; (17) Lines in a German Student's Album; (18) On Kepler; (19) Distich from the Greek.

The Supplement published in 1880 (Vol. II, pp. 355*-364*) contains (1) Monody on Chatterton [First Version]; (2) To the Evening Star; (3) Anna and Harland; (4) Translation of Wrangham's Hendecasyllabi, &c.; (5) To Miss Brunton; (6) The Mad Monk. Bibliographical matter of interest and importance is contained in the Memoir, and in the Notes to Vol. II, pp. 375-381. Variants of the text, derived from the Morning Post, and from earlier editions, are printed as footnotes to the text. In Vol. III. the Editor supplies a collation of the text of Remorse as published in 1852 with that of Osorio [London: John Pearson, 1873] and with that of the First and Second Editions of Remorse published in 1813.

XLVII

THE POETICAL WORKS OF Samuel Taylor Coleridge Edited with Introduction and Notes by T. Ashe, B.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge In Two Volumes. London George Bell and Sons, York Street Covent

Garden 1885. [The Frontispiece of Vol. I is a portrait of S. T. Coleridge, aet. 23, from a crayon drawing by Robert Hancock: of Vol. II, a view of Greta Hall, Keswick.]

 $[8^{\circ}]$

Vol. I. Title, &c., pp. [iii]-xiv; Introduction, &c., pp. [xv]-clxxxvi; Poems, pp. 1-212.

Vol. II. Contents, &c., pp. [v]-xiii; Poems, pp. 1-409.

Note.—Section 3 of the Introduction, pp. cxxxviii-clxxxvi, supplies a Bibliography of the Poems. The Dramas are not included in the Poetical Works. In the 'Table of Contents' poems not included in 1834 are marked by an asterisk, but of these only three, (1) 'The Tears of a Grateful People'; (2) 'The Humour of Pallas' ['My Godmother's Beard'], and (3) 'Lines written in the Common Place Book of Miss Barbour', were collected for the first time. The 'Introduction', the work of a genuine poet, contains much that is valuable and interesting, but the edition as a whole is by no means an advancement on P. and D. W., 1877-1880.

XLVIII

The Poetical Works of Samuel Taylor Coleridge Edited with a Biographical Introduction by James Dykes Campbell London Macmillan and Co. And New York 1893 All rights reserved.

The Raven, pp. [475]-476; Appendix B. Greek Prize Ode, &c. [from MS.], pp. 476-477; Appendix C. To a Young Ass [from MS.], pp. 477-478; Appendix D. Osorio [from MSS.], pp. 479-512; Appendix E. The Rime of the Ancient Mariner [1798], pp. 512-520; Appendix F. Mont Blanc. The Summit of the Vale of Chamouny, an Hour before Sunrise—An Hymn (Coleorton Letters, 1887, i. 26-29), pp. 521-522; Appendix G. Dejection: An Ode (M. P., Oct. 4, 1802), pp. 522-524; Appendix H. To a Gentleman [W. Wordsworth] (Coleorton Letters, i. 213-218), pp. 525-526; Appendix I. Apologetic Preface to 'Fire, Famine and Slaughter', pp. 527-533; Appendix J. Allegoric Verses, pp. 534-537; Appendix K. Titles, Prefaces, and Contents, &c., pp. 537-559; Notes, pp. [561]-654; Index to the Poems, &c., pp. [655]-659; Index to First Lines, pp. [661]-667.

The Poems include all those published in 1877-1880 with the addition of the Hymn, first published in 1852, and the omission of 'The Old Man of the Alps' (M. P., Apr. 13, 1798) together with the following pieces collected for the first time (), or printed for the first time from MSS. (MS.):—(1) Dura Navis (MS.); (2) Nil pejus, &c. (MS.); (3) Quae nocent, &c. (MS.); (4) Invocation (MS.); (5) On a Lady Weeping (MS.); (6) A Wish written, &c. (MS.); (7) An Ode in the Manner of Anacreon (MS.); (8) A Lover's Complaint, &c.; (9) To Fortune (); (10) The Faded Flower (); (11) On Bala Hill [by R. Southey] (MS.); (12) Count Rumford [by W. L. Bowles] (); (13) Verses to J. Horne Tooke (); (14) Ad Vilmum Axiologum (MS.); (15) The Snowdrop (MS.); (16) To Matilda Betham, &c. (); (17) Homeless (); (18) Sonnet. Translated from Marini (MS.) (19) A Sunset (MS.); (20) Tears of a Grateful People (); (21) To Mary Pridham (MS.).

Of the Epigrams, pp. 443-455, the following were first printed from MS., (1) 'You're careful', &c.; (2) 'Say what you will', &c.; (3) On an Insignificant 'No doleful', &c.; (4) On a Slanderer 'From yonder tomb', &c.; (5) 'Money I've heard', &c.

Of fifty-four Fragments from a Common Place Book eighteen were first printed in Literary Remains, i. 277-281, and the rest were published or collected for the first time: of sixty-six Fragments from Various Sources thirty-three were first published from MSS., and others were collected for the first time

Much had been accomplished by the Editor of P. and D. W., 1877-1880, but the excellence of the critical apparatus, the style and substance of the critical and explanatory notes, and the amount and quality of fresh material have made and must continue to make the Edition of 1893 the standard edition of Coleridge's Poetical Works. The 'Introductory Memoir' was republished as 'A Narrative of the Life of Samuel Taylor Coleridge', Macmillan, 1894.

XLIX

COLERIDGE'S POEMS A Facsimile Reproduction Of The Proofs And MSS. Of Some Of The Poems Edited By The Late James Dykes Campbell Author of "Samuel Taylor Coleridge, A Narrative of the Events of his Life"; and Editor of "The Poetical Works of Samuel Taylor Coleridge." With Preface and Notes By W. Hale White Westminster Archibald Constable and Co. 1899.

Note.—This volume contains a reprint of a volume of proofs endorsed 'Coleridge's MSS. Corrected Copy of a Work'—'Mr. Cottle's', and a facsimile reproduction of three MSS., with the original erasures and alternative readings. The volume of proofs formerly in the possession of J. Dykes Campbell was reproduced by him, and he added the facsimile of the MSS. in the British Museum which he had deciphered and prepared for publication. Four years after his death the sheets were bound up and published with an elucidatory preface by Mr. W. Hale White. A copy of this literary curiosity as it was left by Mr. Campbell, without the Preface, is in the possession of the Editor.

- [1140:1] The ancient little Wits wrote many poems in the shape of Eggs, Altars, and Axes. (MS. Note by S. T. C.)
- [1140:2] The title of the volume is 'Sonnets and Odes, by Henry Francis Cary. Author of an Irregular Ode to General Elliot. London 1787.'

Lines 6-9 of the Sonnet read thus:-

From him deriv'd who shun'd and spurn'd the throng And warbled sweet, thy Brooks and streams among, Lonely Valclusa! and that heir of Fame Our English Milton—

Line 14 reads:-

A grandeur, grace and spirit all their own.

The Poems were the first publication of 'Dante' Cary, then a boy of fifteen, whom Coleridge first met at Muddiford in October, 1816, and whose translation of the Divina Commedia he helped to make famous.

- [1141:1] The three Sonnets of Bowles are not in any Edition since the last quarto pamphlet of his Sonnets. (MS. Note by S. T. C.)
- [1144:1] Ossian.
- [1146:1] Compare The Pursuits of Literature, Dialogue 1, lines 50, 55, 56.

The self-supported melancholy Gray

* * * * *

With his high spirit strove the master bard, And was his own exceeding great reward.

The first Dialogue was published in May 1794. The lines on Gray may have suggested Coleridge's quotation from Genesis, chap. xv, ver. 1, which is supplied in a footnote to line 56.

- [1150:1] The 'Eolian Harp', with the title 'Effusion xxxv. Composed August 20, 1795, at Clevedon, Somersetshire', was first published in 1796, and included as 'Composed at Clevedon' in 1797 and 1803. It is possible that it may have been originally printed in a newspaper.
- [1150:2] The fourth and last edition of the Lyrical Ballads was issued in 1805.
- [1151:1] The List numbers thirty, and of these not more than twenty are strictly speaking Errata. Of the remainder the greater number are textual corrections, emendations, and afterthoughts.
- [1151:2] The allusion is to the prolonged and embittered controversy between Coleridge and his friends at Bristol, who had printed his works and advanced him various sums of money on the security of the sheets as printed and the future sale of the works when published. They were angry with him for postponing completion of these works, and keeping them out of their money, and he was naturally and reasonably indignant at the excessive sum charged for paper and printing. The fact was that they had done and intended to do him a kindness, but that in so far as it was a business transaction he suffered at their hands.
- [1151:3] The title of these Iambic lines is 'Relictis Aliis Studiis Philosophiam Epicuream amplectitur'.
- [1151:4] Ben Jonson, vide ante, p. 1118.
- [1151:5] Vide ante, pp. 419, 420.

INDEX OF FIRST LINES

	PAGE
A bird, who for his other sins	451
A blesséd lot hath he, who having passed	173
A green and silent spot, amid the hills	256
'A heavy wit shall hang at every lord'	973
A joke (cries Jack) without a sting	961
A little further, O my father	288
A long deep lane	992
A lovely form there sate beside my bed	484
A low dead Thunder mutter'd thro' the night	1005
A Lutheran stout, I hold for Goose-and-Gaundry	975
A maniac in the woods	993
A mount, not wearisome and bare and steep	155
A poor benighted Pedlar knock'd	967
A sumptuous and magnificent Revenge	1000
A sunny shaft did I behold	426, 919
A sworded man whose trade is blood	397
A wind that with Aurora hath abiding	1011
Ah! cease thy tears and sobs, my little Life	91
Ah! not by Cam or Isis, famous streams	424
All are not born to soar—and ah! how few	26
All look and likeness caught from earth	393
All Nature seems at work. Slugs leave their lair	447, 1111
All thoughts, all passions, all delights	330
Almost awake? Why, what is this, and whence	211
An evil spirit's on thee, friend! of late!	964
An excellent adage commands that we should	971
An Ox, long fed with musty hay	299
And arrows steeled with wrath	994
And cauldrons the scoop'd earth, a boiling sea	989
And in Life's noisiest hour	1002
And my heart mantles in its own delight	1002
And Pity's sigh shall answer thy tale of Anguish	990
And re-implace God's Image of the Soul	994
And this place our forefathers made for man	185
And this reft house is that the which he built	211
And with my whole heart sing the stately song	994
And write Impromptus	989
Are there two things, of all which men possess	361
As Dick and I at Charing Cross were walking	960
As I am a Rhymer	477
As late each flower that sweetest blows	45
As late I journey'd o'er the extensive plain	11
As late I lay in Slumber's shadowy vale	80
As late, in wreaths, gay flowers I bound	33
As late on Skiddaw's mount I lay supine	350
As long as ere the life-blood's running	961
As oft mine eye with careless glance	104
As some vast Tropic tree, itself a wood	1001

As the shy hind, the soft-eyed gentle Brute 1013 1023 As the tir'd savage, who his drowsy frame As when a child on some long Winter's night As when far off the warbled strains are heard 82 As when the new or full Moon urges 1005 At midnight by the stream I roved 253 Auspicious Reverence! Hush all meaner song 131, 1024 Away, those cloudy looks, that labouring sigh 90 Be proud as Spaniards! Leap for pride ye Fleas! 980 'Be, rather than be called, a child of God' 312 Behind the thin Grey cloud 992 Behold yon row of pines, that shorn and bow'd 1006 Beneath the blaze of a tropical sun 396 Beneath this stone does William Hazlitt lie 962 Beneath this thorn when I was young 269 Beneath yon birch with silver bark 293 Benign shooting stars, ecstatic delight 1015 Bob now resolves on marriage schemes to trample 953 998 Bright cloud of reverence, sufferably bright Britannia's boast, her glory and her pride 970 Britons! when last ve met, with distant streak 150 Broad-breasted Pollards, with broad-branching heads 992 Broad-breasted rook-hanging cliff that glasses 988 By many a booby's vengeance bit 953 Charles, grave or merry, at no lie would stick 964 Charles! my slow heart was only sad, when first 154 Child of my muse! in Barbour's gentle hand 483 Come, come thou bleak December wind 1001 Come hither, gently rowing 311 Come; your opinion of my manuscript 967 Cupid, if storying Legends tell aright 46 Dear Charles! whilst yet thou wert a babe, I ween 158 Dear native Brook! wild Streamlet of the West 48 Dear tho' unseen! tho' I have left behind 468 Deep in the gulph of Vice and Woe 12 Depart in joy from this world's noise and strife 177 Didst thou think less of thy dear self 965 Dim Hour! that sleep'st on pillowing clouds afar 96 Discontent mild as an infant 991 Do call, dear Jess, whene'er my way you come 962 Do you ask what the birds say? The Sparrow, the Dove 386 Dormi, Jesu! Mater ridet 417 989 Due to the Staggerers, that made drunk by Power Each Bond-street buck conceits, unhappy elf 968 Each crime that once estranges from the virtues 1011 Earth! thou mother of numberless children, the nurse and the mother 327 Edmund! thy grave with aching eye I scan 76 287 Encinctured with a twine of leaves Ere on my bed my limbs I lay (1803) 389 Ere on my bed my limbs I lay (1806) 401 Ere Sin could blight or Sorrow fade 68 Ere the birth of my life, if I wished it or no 419 Eu! Dei vices gerens, ipse Divus 981 Farewell, parental scenes! a sad farewell 29 Farewell, sweet Love! yet blame you not my truth 402 Fear no more, thou timid Flower 356 'Fie, Mr. Coleridge!—and can this be you? 441 Flowers are lovely, Love is flower-like 1085, 1086 Fond, peevish, wedded pair! why all this rant? 984 For ever in the world of Fame 1013 Frail creatures are we all! To be the best 486 Friend, Lover, Husband, Sister, Brother 392 Friend of the wise! and Teacher of the Good 403 Friend pure of heart and fervent! we have learnt 1008 Friends should be weigh'd, not told; who boasts to have won 963

The guilty pomp, consuming while it flares	990
The hour-bell sounds, and I must go	61
The indignant Bard composed this furious ode	27
The mild despairing of a Heart resigned The Moon, how definite its orb	991 997
The piteous sobs that choke the Virgin's breath	155
The Pleasures sport beneath the thatch	997
The poet in his lone yet genial hour	345
The reed roof'd village still bepatch'd with snow	1002
The rose that blushes like the morn	973
The silenes of a City, how expelled Midnight	338
The silence of a City, how awful at Midnight The singing Kettle and the purring Cat	999 1003
The sole true Something—This! In Limbo's Den	429
The solemn-breathing air is ended	59
The spruce and limber yellow-hammer	1002
The stars that wont to start, as on a chace	486
The stream with languid murmur creeps The subtle snow	38 993
The Sun (for now his orb 'gan slowly sink)	990 990
'The Sun is not yet risen	469
The Sun with gentle beams his rage disguises	1010
The sunshine lies on the cottage-wall	993
The swallows Interweaving there	992
The tead and have the first fruits of the sail	20
The tedded hay, the first fruits of the soil The tongue can't speak when the mouth is cramm'd with earth	345 99 4
Then Jerome did call	1019
There are, I am told, who sharply criticise	816
There are two births, the one when Light	362
There comes from old Avaro's grave	954
There in some darksome shade	1018
Thicker than rain-drops on November thorn This be the meed, that thy song creates a thousand-fold echo	1010 391
This day among the faithful plac'd	176
This, Hannah Scollock! may have been the case	981
This is now—this was erst	22
This is the time, when most divine to hear	108
This Sycamore, oft musical with bees	381
This way or that, ye Powers above me	974
This yearning heart (Love! witness what I say) Thou bleedest, my poor Heart! and thy distress	362 72
Thou gentle Look, that didst my soul beguile	47
Thou who in youthful vigour rich, and light	349
Though friendships differ endless in degree	1012
Tho' Miss ——'s match is a subject of mirth	952
The much averse, dear Jack, to flicker	37
Tho' no bold flights to thee belong Though rous'd by that dark Vizir Riot rude	9 81
Though rous a by that dark vizit ident rude Though veiled in spires of myrtle-wreath	450
Three truths should make thee often think and pause	966

[1196]

Through weeds and thorns, and matted underwood Thus far my scanty brain hath built the rhyme	369 78
Thus she said, and all around	1015
Thy babes ne'er greet thee with the father's name	960
Thy lap-dog, Rufa, is a dainty beast	960
Thy smiles I note, sweet early Flower	149
Thy stern and sullen eye, and thy dark brow	994 26
'Tis hard on Bagshot Heath to try 'Tis mine and it is likewise yours	26 997
'Tis not the lily-brow I prize	483
'Tis sweet to him who all the week	314
'Tis the middle of night by the castle clock	215
'Tis true, Idoloclastes Satyrane	413
To be ruled like a Frenchman the Briton is both To know, to esteem, to love,—and then to part	953 410
To praise men as good, and to take them for such	486
To tempt the dangerous deep, too venturous youth	2
To wed a fool, I really cannot see	963
Tom Hill, who laughs at Cares and Woes	974
Tom Slothful talks, as slothful Tom beseems	967
Tranquillity! thou better name Trōchěe trīps frŏm long tŏ shōrt	360 401
Truth I pursued, as Fancy sketch'd the way	1008
'Twas my last waking thought, how it could be	454
'Twas not a mist, nor was it quite a cloud	1000
'Twas sweet to know it only possible	992
Two things hast thou made known to half the nation	964 1003
Two wedded hearts, if ere were such	1003
Unboastful Bard! whose verse concise yet clear	102
Unchanged within, to see all changed without	459
Under the arms of a goodly oak-tree	1048
Under this stone does Walter Harcourt lie Underneath an old oak tree	962 169
Ungrateful he, who pluck'd thee from thy stalk	70
Unperishing youth	308
Up, up! ye dames, and lasses gay	427
Up, up! ye dames, ye lasses gay	942
Upon the mountain's edge with light touch resting	393
Utter the song, O my soul! the flight and return of Mohammed	329
Verse, a breeze mid blossoms straying	439
Verse, pictures, music, thoughts both grave and gay	482
Verse, that Breeze mid blossoms straying Virtues and Woes alike too great for man	1085 37
Vivit sed mihi non vivit—nova forte marita	56
Water and windmills, greenness, Islets green	1009
We both attended the same College We pledged our hearts, my love and I	955 391
Well! If the Bard was weather-wise, who made	362, 1076
Well, they are gone, and here must I remain	178
We've conquer'd us a Peace, like lads true metalled	972
We've fought for Peace, and conquer'd it at last	972
What a spring-tide of Love to dear friends in a shoal	1010
What boots to tell how o'er his grave What is an Epigram? a dwarfish whole	1011 963
What is an Epigrani: a dwarnsh whole What never is, but only is to be	999 999
What now, O Man! thou dost or mean'st to do	414
What pleasures shall he ever find	4
What though the chilly wide-mouth'd quacking chorus	476
Whate'er thou giv'st, it still is sweet to me	1010 70
When British Freedom for an happier land When Hope but made Tranquillity be felt	79 1004
When Surface talks of other people's worth	969
When the squalls were flitting and fleering	980
When they did greet me father, sudden awe	152
When thieves come, I bark: when gallants, I am still	966
When thou to my true-love com'st	326

[1197]

When thy Beauty appears	1016
When Youth his faery reign began	62
Whene'er the mist, that stands 'twixt God and thee	487
Where Cam his stealthy flowings most dissembles	988
Where deep in mud Cam rolls his slumbrous stream	35
Where graced with many a classic spoil	29
Where is the grave of Sir Arthur O'Kellyn	432
Where true Love burns Desire is love's pure flame	485
Where'er I find the Good, the True, the Fair	1011
Wherefore art thou come?	989
While my young cheek retains its healthful hues	236
Whilst pale Anxiety, corrosive Care	69
Whom should I choose for my Judge?	1000
Whom the untaught Shepherds call	40
Why is my Love like the Sun?	1109
Why need I say, Louisa dear	252
William, my teacher, my friend	304
Wisdom, Mother of retired Thought	991
With Donne, whose muse on dromedary trots	433
With many a pause and oft reverted eye	94
With many a weary step at length I gain	56
With secret hand heal the conjectur'd wound	988
With skill that never Alchemist yet told	995
Within these circling hollies woodbine-clad	409
Within these wilds was Anna wont to rove	16
Ye Clouds! that far above me float and pause	243
Ye drinkers of Stingo and Nappy so free	978
Ye fowls of ill presage	1017
Ye Gales, that of the Lark's repose	35
Ye harp-controlling hymns	1006
Ye souls unus'd to lofty verse	8
Yes, noble old Warrior! this heart has beat high	317
Yes, yes! that boon, life's richest treat	466
Yet art thou happier far than she	62
Yon row of bleak and visionary pines	1006
You're careful o'er your wealth 'tis true	958
You come from o'er the waters	987
You loved the daughter of Don Manrique?	421
You mould my Hopes, you fashion me within	1002
Your Poem must eternal be	959

 END OF THE PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK THE COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS OF SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE. VOL 2 (OF 2) ***

Updated editions will replace the previous one—the old editions will be renamed.

Creating the works from print editions not protected by U.S. copyright law means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg™ electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG™ concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for an eBook, except by following the terms of the trademark license, including paying royalties for use of the Project Gutenberg trademark. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the trademark license is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. Project Gutenberg eBooks may be modified and printed and given away—you may do practically ANYTHING in the United States with eBooks not protected by U.S. copyright law. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

START: FULL LICENSE

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG LICENSE

PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg $^{\text{\tiny TM}}$ mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase "Project Gutenberg"), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project GutenbergTM License available with this file or online at www.gutenberg.org/license.

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg $^{\scriptscriptstyle\mathsf{TM}}$ electronic works

- 1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg^{$^{\text{TM}}$} electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg^{$^{\text{TM}}$} electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg^{$^{\text{TM}}$} electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.
- 1.B. "Project Gutenberg" is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project GutenbergTM electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project GutenbergTM electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project GutenbergTM electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.
- 1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation ("the Foundation" or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$ electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is unprotected by copyright law in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$ mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$ works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$ name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$ License when you share it without charge with others.
- 1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$ work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country other than the United States.
- 1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:
- 1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg[™] License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg[™] work (any work on which the phrase "Project Gutenberg" appears, or with which the phrase "Project Gutenberg" is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere in the United States and most other parts of the world at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.org. If you are not located in the United States, you will have to check the laws of the country where you are located before using this eBook.

- 1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg[™] electronic work is derived from texts not protected by U.S. copyright law (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase "Project Gutenberg" associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg[™] trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.
- 1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg[™] electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg[™] License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.
- 1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project GutenbergTM License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project GutenbergTM.
- 1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenbergtm License.
- 1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg^{TM} work in a format other than "Plain Vanilla ASCII" or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project

Gutenberg^m website (www.gutenberg.org), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original "Plain Vanilla ASCII" or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg^m License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

- 1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg^m works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.
- 1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$ electronic works provided that:
- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from the use of Project Gutenberg™ works calculated using the method you already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is owed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, but he has agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments must be paid within 60 days following each date on which you prepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax returns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and sent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the address specified in Section 4, "Information about donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation."
- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg™ License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg™ works.
- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.
- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg[™] works.
- 1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project GutenbergTM electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the manager of the Project GutenbergTM trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

- 1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread works not protected by U.S. copyright law in creating the Project Gutenberg $^{\text{\tiny TM}}$ collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg $^{\text{\tiny TM}}$ electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain "Defects," such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.
- 1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES Except for the "Right of Replacement or Refund" described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg™ trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg™ electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH 1.F.3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.
- 1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.
- 1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS', WITH NO OTHER WARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.
- 1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.
- 1.F.6. INDEMNITY You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg^m electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project GutenbergTM electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project GutenbergTM work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project GutenbergTM work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg™

Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$ is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need are critical to reaching Project Gutenberg $^{\text{\tiny TM}}$'s goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg $^{\text{\tiny TM}}$ collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg $^{\text{\tiny TM}}$ and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation information page at www.gutenberg.org.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's business office is located at 809 North 1500 West, Salt Lake City, UT 84116, (801) 596-1887. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's website and official page at www.gutenberg.org/contact

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$ depends upon and cannot survive without widespread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine-readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations (\$1 to \$5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit www.gutenberg.org/donate.

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Please check the Project Gutenberg web pages for current donation methods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other ways including checks, online payments and credit card donations. To donate, please visit: www.gutenberg.org/donate

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg™ electronic works

Professor Michael S. Hart was the originator of the Project Gutenberg^{TM} concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For forty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg^{TM} eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg $^{\text{m}}$ eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as not protected by copyright in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our website which has the main PG search facility: www.qutenberg.org.

This website includes information about Project Gutenberg $^{\text{TM}}$, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.
